"The crucial point in the law is the state inspection service, and here there is considerable room for improvement. Fortunately, the states which receive the great bulk of the imported stock have good inspection service. There are some few states that have not yet made suitable provision for such inspection. The foreign nurseryman realizes that his goods will be inspected and must meet certain conditions, and the result is that he is rather solicitous as to their condition himself and is taking a great deal of pains to see that they are free from infestation, and, more than that, the stock itself is of good quality, and in consequence of this we are today receiving cleaner and better stock than ever before. Of course, certain plants which are apt to introduce fungous diseases and injurious insects are rightly barred. The scope of the federal act is broad. It covers the entire field of horticultural and agricultural products. In the last two years I have written many letters to foreign nurserymen and impressed upon them the vital importance of the enactment of nursery inspection laws, so that they would experience no trouble in having their products enter the United States. Nearly all countries are awakening to the benefits of our quarantine laws."

GOLDEN PRIVET FOR HEDGE.

Will you please tell me if Ligustrum ovalifolium aureum, golden-leaved privet, is hardy enough to stand the winters in northern New Jersey? Would it be a sufficiently satisfactory hedge to stand the chance of planting 1,000 feet? Is this plant used in large or small quantities at present? A. J. B.

If the California privet, Ligustrum ovalifolium, will withstand your winters, the golden variety might succeed. The California privet is pretty easily grown, but uncertain. If a severe winter and a temperature of 10 degrees below zero occur, it is cut to the ground or killed outright, as in hundreds of gardens last winter. Personally I should not risk planting 1,000 feet of it. A variegated hedge, for one thing, is far less beautiful than a green one and frequently is less hardy. The golden privet is good where zero temperatures are rare, and I have eulogistic reports of it from Great Britain, where it retains its foliage the year around, but there, of course, the winters are mild.

For a really winter-proof hedge plant, the Japanese privet, Ligustrum Ibota, or even the European privet, L. vulgare, can be used. If, however, L. ovalifolium never winter kills, I would plant it in preference to the golden variety. C. W.

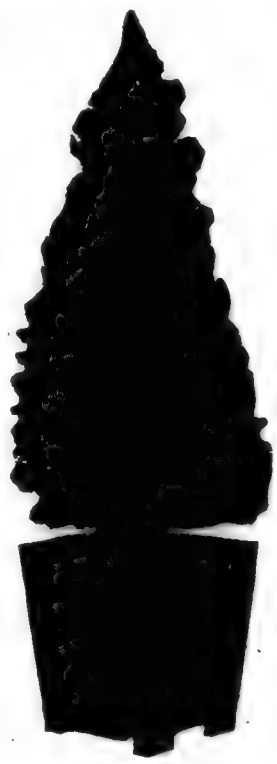
NEWBURGH, N. Y.

Park Superintendent Chas. Haible expects a large party of park superintendents August 24, which, after a two days' stay, will proceed to Manhattan to be the guests of the commissioners of parks in that city. Downing park will be at its best and preparations are being made to make the visit to this town a pleasant one.

After a successful career, Dr. Wesley Wait, proprietor of the Newburgh Floral Co., has retired from the business. It was a case of rebuilding and as the land was considered too valuable for greenhouses, the plant has been dismantled. The doctor, a pioneer in the business and now independent, will be content to note what the other fellow is doing. The store will be continued by D. Coy, formerly in charge of the houses.

Mark Crawshaw reports one of the best of seasons, absolutely nothing left at the finish. He is planning a new house, 28x150 feet, for general purposes. A house of Chrysanthemum, Golden Glow and C. Harry Parr are coming into bloom; they are planted in solid beds of soil, formerly used for violets and 4 years old.

Geo. F. Chadburn, of Schaefers, Inc., is of the opinion that the time is ripe to form a combination in prices. Aster Queen of the Market is a total loss from stem-rot. This has occurred two years in succession. The branching varieties growing alongside are not affected.



Percy Herbert, of the Yuess Gardens Co., reports excellent business. Carnations have made fine growth and will soon be inside.

West Hartford, Conn.—The W. W. Thomson Co. has filed a certificate of incorporation, with a capital stock of $50,000, and will grow and sell flowers, plants and trees. The incorporators are W. Wallace Thomson, R. Roy Thomson and Herman J. Miller. Of the authorized capital stock, $20,000 is already paid in.

FIELD-GROWN CARNATION PLANTS
This is not the ordinary run of surplus stock, the leftovers from a grower's own planting—it is stock grown by a specialist on purpose to sell to the trade. Everybody knows that our cut blooms are the finest it is possible to produce, and that our business in rooted cuttings has reached enormous proportions because of the fine quality of the stock we ship—well, these field-grown plants are of the same high quality as the rest of our product. They were grown specially to win your approval.

FIELD-GROWN PLANTS OF CARNATIONS EVERYBODY NEEDS

JOY! We have been handling it for a little over two years and ought to know something about it. JOY! It's a real red. It is the kind of Carnation that proves the florists' friend. Shipped over a distance, it will look as good on arrival as when sent. This feature appeals to us because we know what it means to the man who is depending on us.

JOY has been described by Mr. E. H. Blameuser, of Niles Center, Ill.—the man who raised it—as "a strong grower, early, very free and continuous bloomer, with strong calyx and good stem." That should be good enough for anybody.

Strong field-grown plants, $10.00 per 100; $80.00 per 1000.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

The Market.

Business has been quiet for the last week. The demand for flowers has dropped off and sales have fallen down. The supply of carnations is gradually decreasing and old stock will soon be out of the market. Growers have been throwing out plants for some time and as the poorest stock goes first, the quality is good for this time of year. Some growers have the new stock in and it will soon be on the market. While the sales are not what they should be, the trade is managing to dispose of the cut.

Roses are fine at this time, and the cut is moving well. It is indeed seldom that such a good quality of stock is seen in the summer time. There is an abundance of outdoor stock, for which there is practically no sale. Outdoor sweet peas are plentiful just now and are being sold cheaply to clean up the market. Lilies are fine, and while the supply is heavy, the demand is not correspondingly so.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Ida Baumgarten and her daughter Gretchen, accompanied by Miss Zemler, with the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., left Monday, July 13, for a pleasure trip to the Pacific coast. It is expected that they will be away until about August 1.

S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, visited the trade Wednesday, July 8.

The date of the annual picnic of the Milwaukee Florists' Club has been changed to Wednesday, July 15. This is the first time the annual outing has not taken place on a Sunday, but as business is slack, the florists and their friends will undoubtedly be able to be there and help to make this gala occasion a great success. HYDRANGEA OTAKSA

Extra large specimens for July and August flowering

We have some of the largest, finest and most perfect specimens of hydrangeas in half-barrels that we have ever seen. Plants are just coming into bloom, and are beautiful, symmetrical specimens covered with blooms, each plant having from one hundred to two hundred flowers. We have over three hundred of these fine plants in shape for immediate shipment, and every plant is a perfect specimen. There is nothing so magnificent for summer decoration as these large hydrangeas. They are very showy.

$7.50, $10.00 and $15.00 each—according to size and number of blooms.

WINTER-FLOWERING ROSES

If you have not secured all the stock that you can use for planting for winter-flowering, we still have a very fine stock of the following varieties, which we can offer in perfect condition, ready for immediate shipment. Stock is gilt-edged in every way—extra strong, heavy plants from 4-inch pots. If you can use any, we will be glad to quote low rates. Write us the number you can use and we will quote by return mail.

GERANIUMS

WE HAVE approximately three-quarters of a million Geraniums in 2 and 3-inch pots, ready for immediate shipment, for those who want to have winter-blooming plants—and there is a growing demand for nice 4-inch plants in bloom all winter.

We are now booking orders for fall and winter delivery. Do you think it pays you to bother with your own stock when you can get good 2-inch plants next winter at $18.50 per 1000, just when you want them and in the right proportion of varieties to suit your demand? It is our business to save you this trouble; we grow them by the millions. A personal inspection of our establishment invited.

FIELD-GROWN
CARNATION PLANTS.
This is not the ordinary run of surplus stock, the leftovers from a grower's own planting—it is stock grown by a specialist on purpoose to sell to the trade. Exerybody knows that our cut blooms are the finest it is possible to produce, and that our business in rooted cuttings has reached enormous proportions because of the fine quality of the stock we ship—well, these field-grown plants are of the same high quality as the rest of our products. They were grown specially to win YOUR approval.

BUSINESS BRINGERS—
REVIEW CLASSIFIED ADVS.

Bailey's Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture.

First volume just off the press. Remaining volumes will be issued as soon as possible. The following are a few of the features to be found in this new work:

KEY TO IDENTIFICATION OF PLANTS.

This is a device to enable one to find the name of a plant. The name thus found is quickly referred to under its alphabetical location, where full information will be found in regard to it.

SYNOPSIS OF PLANT KINGDOM.

This is one of the most important features of the new edition. It constitutes a general running account of the classes, orders and groups of plants, with a brief sketch or characterization of 215 of the leading families comprising those that yield practically all the cultivated plants. These family descriptions give the botanical characters and the number of genera and species and the ranges.

THE GLOSSARY.

This is an analysis of all technical terms that are used in the work and in similar works.

TRANSLATION AND PRONUNCIATION OF LATIN NAMES.

In Volume I is inserted a list of between 2,000 and 3,000 Latin words used as species—names of plants, giving the English equivalent or translation and the pronunciation.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

There are 24 colored plates, 96 full-page sepia halftones, and more than 4,000 engravings which serve as guides in the text.

CLASS ARTICLES.

Special effort has been made to secure the best cultural advices for the plants requiring peculiar or particular handling.

GENERAL INDEX.

The final volume will contain a complete index to the entire work, enabling the reader to locate volume and page of any subject he has in mind. With the Index, Key, Synopsis and alphabetical arrangement of the Cyclopedia, any reasonable question asked by the consultant will receive a ready answer.

This work consists of six large quarto volumes, more than 3,600 pages, 500 collaborators, approximately 4,000 genera, 15,000 species and 40,000 plant names. Price, $6.00 per volume; $36.00 per set. Can be paid for one volume at a time.

THE COAL MARKET.

It would be useless to occupy space with an extended report of the coal market this week, since it would be mostly a repetition of last week's story of a slow improvement in business and an increasing fear of congested traffic and coal famine in the fall. "Buying has heretofore been so light," it is said, "that some persons have taken alarm lest there will be a coal famine next winter. They point out now that the crop movement is going to be enormous. This is, of course, going to take an unprecedented number of cars. The railroads have let down in efficiency, have not repaired cars and certainly have bought no new cars or engines. There seems, therefore, to be good reason to fear both a car shortage and a coal famine."

"The smokeless situation," says a Chicago reporter for tne Black Diamond, "holds just about as it was last week. There is a certain degree of technical strength only. That is, the market is not weak due to any burden of unsold coal, but neither is it strong due to any active buying. Restriction of output has proceeded to a point where supply and demand are just about equal and this is enabling the major producers to command $1.25 per ton for smokeless mine-run and the full circular price for lump and egg. Some few concerns are long on smokeless mine-run, having bought on speculation rather heavily early in the year. They are still selling this coal at $1 or $1.10 per ton."

A NEW NORTH PACIFIC RANGE.

I am expecting to build this summer and here are a number of questions I should like to have answered through your columns:

My land is 270 feet long from east to west and I expect to build one house ten feet wide and two houses each twenty-five feet wide, all running across the land this way, except for a shed along the east end. I expect as business grows to add more houses on the south side of this set. The shed will continue clear along the east end and will be used for the boiler room, potting shed, packing room, etc. A general line of plants and cut flow-that an even temperature throughout the greenhouse means a good growth of stock. This condition can only be secured through having a good steam service. And that good steam service is absolutely assured when it is controlled by the ers is grown, in connection with a nursery of ornamental and hardy perennial stock, so I need lots of shed room, and, as the street runs along the east side, that is the logical side for the shed. The narrow house will be placed on the north boundary. I have the rafters, glass, pipe, etc., for the narrow house, taken from one I have torn down. I shall use this house for propagation and for growing callas. Would it be much cheaper to build four houses 25x125 than to build the two 250 feet long, thus keeping the block more nearly square? Would it not be more convenient to add on the ends later rather than to build more houses at the side?

I want to use steam and am going to put in a new boiler. How large a boiler would you recommend? As I want to double my glass in two years, would it be wise to put in a boiler large enough to handle all I intend to put up? If so, what size or rating would be right? Which is the more economical, high or low pressure steam? My boiler cannot be lowered over three feet—the lower part of it—below the floor. What will be the best way to start the pipes?

I want 25x250 feet in carnations, 25x100 in roses, such as Killarneys, etc., about 25x25 in smilax and aspar-

QUICKEST WATER HEATER IN THE WORLD

Note the large combustion space, which enables the gases to expand and fully ignite inside the boiler before reaching the tubes or flues. This feature is not found in any other type of construction, and is entirely lacking in fire box and cast iron, sectional boilers.

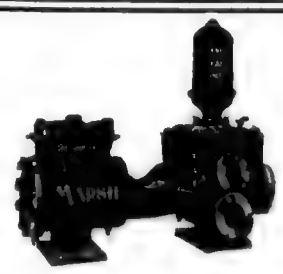
agus, and the balance in pot and bedding stock, including a few palms and orchids. Will it be necessary to put in partitions or can I pipe so the temperature will be all right? Please state the number and size of pipes for each section; also how to connect them to the boiler; I mean by this, how high or how low. In what part of the shed would you place the boiler? Will it be necessary to use a return trap? Can I run a pipe from the boiler underground and heat the dwelling house, which will require 250 feet of radiation? How should this pipe be protected? The land is nearly level; how can I return the water without using a trap?

What size of glass is the most economical? Some say there are sizes which have fifty-one square feet, while others have only forty-nine. Is this correct? We have no hail or heavy snow, and while others use single-strength B, I intend to use double-strength A. I had thought of using 18x20, leaving eighteen inches between the rafters. What would you advise? How shall I fasten the glass in? I know you will say, "Look over our advertising columns," but as yet I am not satisfied with any of them. They all seem to crack glass, work loose, or let it slip down. How many gallons of putty will be needed for these houses? There will be seven feet of glass in the west end and about three feet of glass in the south side; the rest will be lumber, north and east walls all lumber.



Our prevailing wind is southeast and one row of ventilation seems ample. Shall I put it all on one side of the ridge or some on each side? How many men would you consider ample to keep this size of house in good shape, growing the line of stock named? A. W. O.

While I would prefer four 125-foot houses to two 250-foot ones if no others were to be erected, under the conditions described I would build the houses 250 feet long. The main flow pipe should run through the boiler house and workroom, along the ends of the greenhouses, and a main flow pipe should be taken off for each house. This should be 3-inch for a 25-foot rose house. A fifty horse-power boiler would probably answer for the six houses in the climate of Washington state.

The rose house should be partitioned off from the carnation house, at least above the benches. In the carnation house use a 2½-inch overhead flow pipe and eight 1¼-inch returns. In the rose house use a 3-inch overhead flow pipe and nine or ten returns. The returns should be a foot below the bottom of the benches and the flows two feet below the ridge, with a slight fall. The boiler should be about at the center of the ends of the row of houses, if convenient, or it may be at one corner of the range. From the description given, it seems evident that it will be necessary to use either a steam trap or a steam pump to return the water to the boiler.

A heating pipe can be carried underground to the residence. It should be wrapped in asbestos packing and either carried in a cement conduit or run through sewer pipe.

While a cheaper grade of glass might be used, the grade and size mentioned will be quite satisfactory. Bed the glass in putty, but do not have any putty over the glass. Lap the glass about one-eighth of an inch and drive a zinc cut shoe nail at each of the lower corners to keep the panes from slipping down, putting another nail about two inches above each of the lower corners and one at the middle of each side of each pane. This requires six nails for each pane, and if they are properly driven and the houses are kept properly painted, there will be no trouble about the glass slipping. Unless special greenhouse putty is used, I would suggest adding about five pounds of white lead to each 100 pounds of whiting putty. About seventy-five pounds of putty will be needed for each 1,000 square feet of glass.

A row of ventilators in the side walls as well as at the ridge will be desirable. Two men should take care of the six houses, except at special times.

Some Summer Time Things It's Time to Do

NOW THAT you growers are getting your business methods down to a point where you closely cut the corners on all unnecessary expense, you are appreciating the saving there is in early overhauling your entire heating plant.

This waiting until you want heat before doing anything doesn't agree with the careful way you do other things.

Some inconveniences—like painting—can't be helped. But this getting your heating in shape can be.

If your boiler needs new grates—get them now and put them in.

If some of your pipe hooks have slipped and affected the circulation—give them attention now.

If the circulation in your pipes was sluggish last season, send for one of our expert heating men to go carefully over it and ferret out the trouble.

If you need a new boiler, don't wait until Jack Frost forcibly calls your attention to the necessity. Order it now and make sure of its early delivery and ample time for its erection and connecting up.

Very seldom you are able to accomplish things sooner than you expected. The safe way is to allow more time than you think you need.

The fact that we have been heating greenhouses for going on 64 years, is pretty strong evidence of our ability to heat them the economical way they should be heated.

We shall be looking to hear from you.

SAGINAW, MICH.

The Market.

Since the June weddings have come to an end the rest of the business has gone with it. There are few roses, on account of the housing of the plants, but still enough for the demand. Carnations are about over for this season. A few early asters have made their appearance and are surely welcome. Gladioli will soon be in and help fill the place of some of the flowers that have dropped out. Everyone is busy getting stock and houses in shape for winter. Chrysanthemum and rose planting is all over for this season. Carnations are next and they surely have made a fine growth in the field this year. It seems we always got rain at the needed time, but not too much at any time.

Club Outing.

The Saginaw-Bay City Floricultural Society held its regular monthly meeting with J. A. Bittner, at Alma, Mich., combined with an outing. Six large automobiles started out from Saginaw filled to their capacity. En route the party stopped off at Hemlock and had the most bountiful chicken dinner at the Cass Gosen hotel, then motored on to Alma, where Mr. Bittner received them with open arms. After light refreshments, served by Mrs. Bittner, the society looked over Alma.

The first visit was at Mrs. Francis King's, and about the best way to describe the garden is that it is worth anyone's going miles to see. The delphiniums were in their glory. Everyone took interest in the pure white larkspur. The ramblers and clematis were also in the height of their beauty; in fact, the whole grounds, which consist of about ten acres, are well laid out.

Our next stop was at the Republic motor truck factory, which was interesting to all. Then the party, about thirty-five in number, went to the Wright House, where Carl L. Roethke had arranged supper, and everyone did it justice. The society wishes to thank Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Bittner for their hospitality and entertainment, which was enjoyed by all. Everyone had a most pleasant day and all went home wishing the day was only longer. Gee.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Were I to report that business in Detroit was brisk the readers of The Review would put me down as a prevaricator. There is, nevertheless, considerable doing in the flower line in our city. It principally is funeral work, with, however, an occasional wedding decoration thrown in for good measure.

The supply of stock has been away ahead of the demand, of course. Carnations do not move readily, due, no doubt, to their being mostly of inferior quality. Beauties are popular, owing to the moderate prices and good quality. In roses, the quality is good but the blooms are small. My Maryland is being used extensively in funeral work. It is of good color and stands the heat well.

Various Notes.

At a special meeting of the Florists' Club, held July 13, it was decided to hold the annual outing at Bois Blanc park, the date to be announced later. Considering the hot weather the meeting was well attended. A collection of fine early gladioli was shown by Miesel Bros. Frank Allen, gardener for E. D. Speck, was highly commended for a collection of fifteen varieties of outdoor peas. These were pronounced the finest ever seen here.

Henry Forster, with E. A. Fetters, is spending his honeymoon at St. Clair flats. H. S.

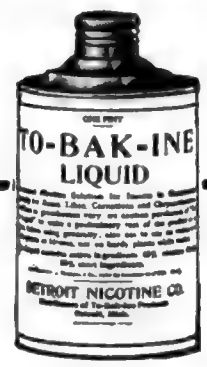
PLANTLIFE

PLANTLIFE has several advantages over liquid insecticides on the market. Containing refined tobacco dust it can be used to mix with the soil, acting as an excellent fertilizer, at the same time destroying worms and insects in the ground before they have a chance to reach the plant.

PLANTLIFE has been found very effective in ridding greenhouses of insects by dusting on plants. When dry, use for dusting about once a week.



Put up in bulk for greenhouse men; in packages for retail trade.

GREENWICH, CONN.

There was a fine attendance at the monthly meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society at the rooms in Doran's hall, Friday evening, July 10. President Williamson presided. One new member was elected and several proposals for membership were received. The summer show committee made its final report, showing a gratifying balance in favor of the society. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the committee, including the manager of the exhibition, Wm. J. Sealey.

The dates of the fall show were announced. This exhibition will be held at Germania hall, New Rochelle, N. Y., November 4, 5 and 6. A complete and attractive schedule is being prepared and will be issued as soon as ready.

The annual outing will be held at Edwards' Rye Beach hotel, August 11. Those requiring dinner tickets will kindly notify Wm. J. Sealey, Portchester, N. Y., as early as convenient, so that ample provision may be made; tickets are $1.50 a person. Sports and games will be provided so that old and young, male and female, may enjoy themselves according to fancy. Games are scheduled to start promptly at 10:30 a. m.

During the recess the members were entertained by James E. Melcher, of Stamford, Conn., with some clever sleight-of-hand tricks. F. E. Conine gave some of his humorous songs and stories.

There was a fine display on the exhibition tables. A magnificent plant in a 4-inch pot of the new geranium, Helen Michell, gained for Alex. Marshall a cultural certificate. The same exhibitor was highly commended for a cattleya hybrid and a vase of the climbing rose American Pillar. James Stuart was highly commended for a collection of double hollyhocks. The thanks of the society were voted by the judges to the following exhibits of choice plants and flowers: Blush Rambler, from A. Whitelaw; Lathyrus latifolius, from E. Johnson; Lilium auratum, from Fred. Lagerstam; new achillea, Perry's White, from A. Bieschke; Japanese iris, from John McAllister; Allamanda Schottii, from P. W. Popp.

The next meeting of the society will be held August 14, at 8 o'clock.

P. W. Popp, Cor. Sec'y.

AUSTIN, TEX.

The Austin Florists' Club met at the home and palm garden of Chas. Alff, Sr., on the night of July 6. The dearth of flowers at this date, caused by the continuous drought that is now on us, gave rise to the general query, "What are you doing for flowers in design work, and which of our native flora can we depend upon for summer use?" From these discussions great good is sure to come. Shasta daisies are the main dependence, along with sweet peas, vincas and the last of the gladioli. Roses are coming on, but outdoor stock gets done up unless gathered early and cooled off.

The Texas State Horticultural Society will hold its annual meeting at College Station during the meeting of the Farmers' Congress, July 27, 28 and 29. Several of the local florists' clubs will go in a body and all of the clubs will have representatives there. H. B. Beck, of Austin; R. C. Kerr, of Houston; H. O. Hanna, of Sherman, and L. J. Tackett, of Fort Worth, are among the speakers on the program.

Bluffton, O.—T. H. Mohler's greenhouses are nearly completed and he expects to be ready for business shortly.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

There has not been much business in July, but now and then funeral work has formed a profitable interlude to the quiet spell. Flowers are neither plentiful nor of an encouraging quality. Carnations have been of poor quality for some time. Maryland roses have been coming in fine, but the popular Killarneys are short-stemmed and not desirable otherwise. Sweet peas have gone downhill rapidly. Outside gladioli are beginning to arrive in fine shape and are selling quite briskly. Rubrum lilies are of extra good quality.

Club Outing.

Wednesday, July 8, was a gala day in the history of the Toledo Florists' Club, when employers and employees enjoyed their annual outing at Ottawa park. Over 200 were present. All florists affiliated with the club closed their places of business at 9 a. m. Under the grand marshalship of George B. Schramm, the various florists in their delivery cars and touring cars lined up at the corner of Superior and Locust streets, whence they paraded through the principal downtown streets before proceeding to the park. The success of the picnic is due in a great measure to the enthusiastic and untiring efforts of Frank Schramm, president of the Florists' Club. The three-legged race was won by Messrs. Baker and Martin; the 50-yard dash for men over 40 won by Harry Heinl; 100-yard dash for men under 40 by Steve Czosko; 100-yard dash for women by Mrs. Fred Hildebrand; sack race by Miss Imoberstag; flower pot breaking contest by Fred Ritter, Jr.; ladies' ball-throwing contest by Mrs. Rothenbuhler. The tug of war was won by the east side florists, who also won the baseball game.

The feature of the outing was the baseball game between the east side and the west side growers. The east siders were out for revenge, as they were badly beaten last year. A side-issue of the ball game that furnished much amusement to the spectators was the rancorous debate of Otto Krueger, of the east side, and George Schramm, of the west side, who continually objected to the umpire's decisions.

Miss Helen Patten was on hand with a petition in favor of the woman suffrage amendment, which is to be voted upon at the coming fall elections. Guided by George Schramm, she made an enthusiastic canvass of the picnickers and met with a great deal of success. She met her Waterloo when she tackled Mr. Barrow, who said he could not sign any papers without his wife's consent. A. C. K.

The Market.

While the growers are being driven to their utmost preparing for a new season, the retailers are practically resting on their oars or enjoying a vacation period of a few weeks. There has been just about enough business to keep things moving during the last week and, as a whole, trade was satisfactory for this time of the year. Sweet peas and gladioli hold first place, with roses good and carnations on the decline.

Various Notes.

Charles W. Morey, of the Woonsocket Hill Nurseries, Woonsocket, is receiving congratulations on the recent birth of a son.

Joseph Koppelman is having two houses of Lord & Burnham iron-frame construction erected at the Brookside Greenhouses, East Providence, which he recently acquired. One is to be 30x200 and the other 50x150. He will also have a show room and packing room combined.

Richard Higgins has completed a garage on Academy avenue large enough to house a dozen or more machines and intends to conduct a garage in conjunction with his greenhouses.

Superintendent Davis, of the Riverside cemetery, at Pawtucket, is erecting an iron-frame house for cut flowers and bedding plants. It will be 30x90 feet.

The J. A. Budlong Rose Co., of Auburn, is now represented at the Boston Coöperative Market by William Flynn, formerly with McAlpine & McDonald.

James Hay, who for several years was in charge of the Goddard estate, at Potowomut, has purchased land at East Greenwich, where he will erect new houses for the growing of carnations. He is a brother of William Hay, of Oaklawn and this city, and of Laurence Hay, of East Providence, both of whom are extensive growers.

Max Viller, formerly with Johnston Bros., but now with Galvin, at Boston, spent several days recently in this city.

The town council of Cumberland has appointed Neil Ward, of Lonsdale, as tree warden for one year.

The heavy brass lettering on the new delivery automobile of Smith the Florist is quite attractive and attests the artistic workmanship of Mr. Smith, who did the work himself.

James Foster has given up his retail store at 496 Westminster street.

READING, PA.

At the last meeting of the Reading Florists' Association one of the principal subjects under consideration was the observance of the Friday half holiday during the summer months. After an animated discussion, the eighteen members present voted unanimously in favor of the movement. Until the closing week of September, therefore, all members of the club will close their stores on Friday afternoons. This will mean that few flowers or plants will be purchased or received into the city on that day, as the members of the organization operate most of the large florists' establishments in this city and the suburbs. Both employer and employee welcome this change of working schedule.

As already reported in The Review, the club also decided to hold a chrysanthemum show in Rajah Temple, November 11 to 13, with J. Stanley Giles as secretary of the show and F. H. Lauck as its treasurer. It is many years since Reading has had a public flower show and, from the plans which have already been considered for the holding of such an exhibition, the affair promises to be so successful as to compare favorably with similar exhibitions in larger cities.

Besides the club picnic, to be held at Heller's farm July 24, other social affairs will be arranged in the near future, in order to promote a feeling of good will and fellowship among the local trade. The picnic will be the first one of its kind ever held by the florists of Reading.

The club meets on the first and fourth Thursdays of each month, in the Moore building, at Fifth and Penn streets.

The regular meeting of the club was held on the grounds in the afternoon. One new member was admitted and two names proposed for membership. The next regular meeting will be held at the residence and greenhouses of Henry Gaethje, Rock Island, Thursday, August 13. W. G.

INLAND FLORISTS REAP PROFITS FROM OCEAN TRAVEL

How Retailers all over the country share in the enormous business in flowers for departing ocean voyagers at this time of year

WATCHING load after load of flowers draw up at the dock of a great ocean liner on the day of departure, an uninitiated person is led to wonder where they all come from. If, however, he stopped to consider the size of the first-class passenger list of the boat, the number of orders carried by those few automobile trucks would seem insignificant in comparison. For a single person the loads of flowers would be an amazing quantity, but for several hundred people they are less than a drop in a bucket. To the New York florist the steamer trade represents a considerable amount of business. To the thousands of inland florists who are in position to take and forward these orders the business is as yet a small fraction of what it might be.

How Many Sail.

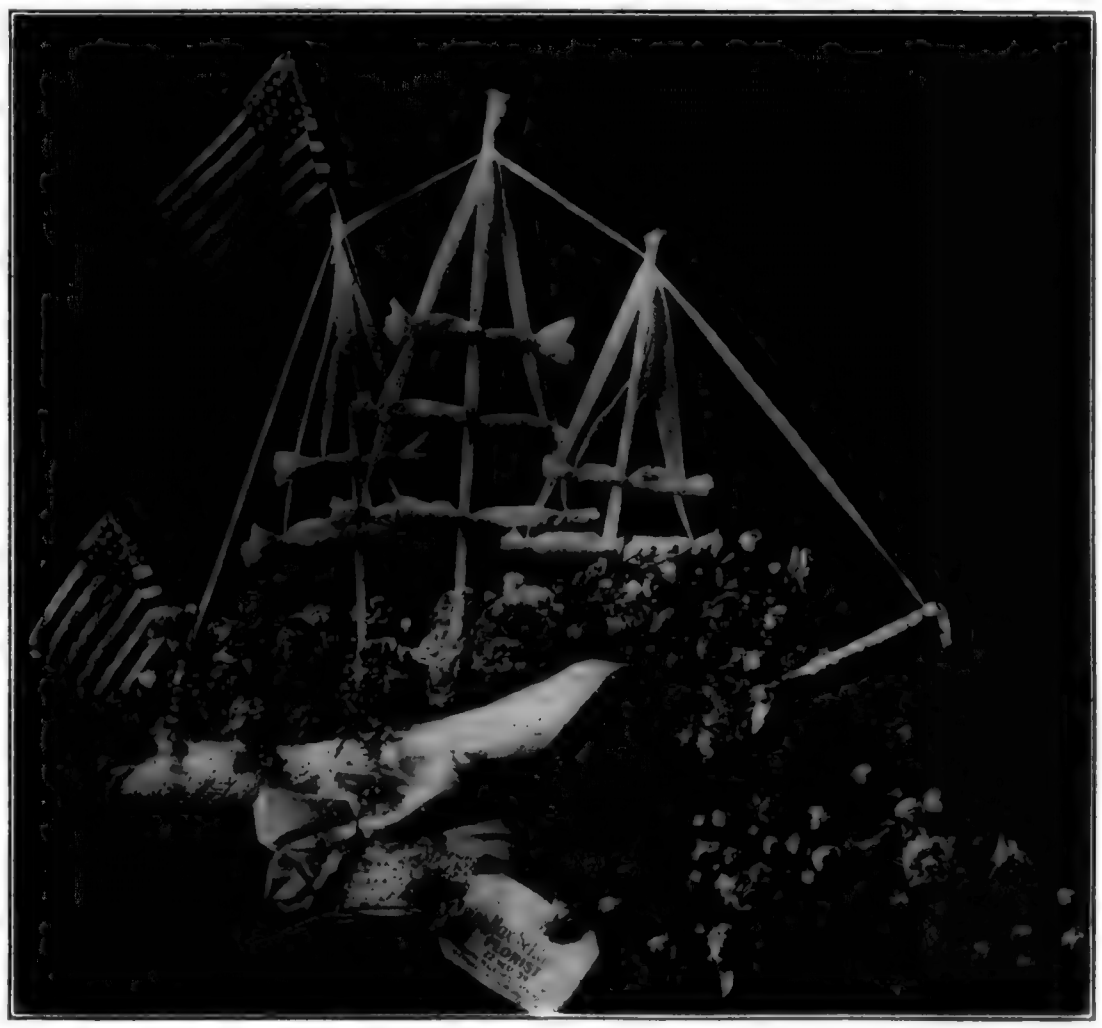
At this time of year scarcely a day passes when more than 1,000 first-class passengers do not leave New York; some days the total passenger lists of the six to a dozen liners which sail for foreign shores reach over three times that number. The ports of Boston and Philadelphia between them register nearly an equal number of departures, and the smaller ports throughout this country and Canada can count fully as many each day. These figures represent only first-class passengers; so they may all fairly be considered as possible sources of business by florists. Multiply these by the number of intimate friends each one has and the number of possible patrons of the florist for this line of trade takes on enormous proportions.

This, it may fairly be said, is an optimistic estimate; but then, it is always the optimist who is the progressive, for the pessimistic estimate leaves no room for progress. The progressive florist, therefore, has here a splendid opportunity to develop a line of business that is heaviest during what is ordinarily the dull season of the year. After the June brides have been married off and graduation girls have all been given their diplomas, trips across the "pond" are in order. Now is the time when the tourist season is on in earnest.

Seaport Florists Do Their Best.

As it is otherwise a dull time of year with them, the florists in the ocean cities devote their best efforts to the steamer trade. Flowers are plentiful and cheap, so that they have an abundance of material to work with. The hours which at another time are filled with other work are now given over to devising new ideas and styles that will make a hit with the ocean voyagers. How busily some of the retailers who do this work hunt for novelties and unique ideas has been shown by the illustrations from time to time in the columns of The Review. One of the latest, by Max Schling, of New York, is shown on this page.

There are many ways in which the retailer who sends an order to a seaport florist to be filled can do his part to promote the excellence of the work. One of the most important of these is to give plenty of time for making up the work. It should be constantly borne in mind that the ocean steamships usually sail at an early hour in the morning, the passengers frequently embarking the previous evening. It is, therefore, next to impossible for a New York florist to fill an order that is taken in a town any distance from the port and telegraphed to him the day the boat sails. Occasionally it is done; at other times the motor truck reaches the dock just as the boat is leaving the harbor. In this, as in other work, the more time allowed for preparation the better the execution.



Pushing the Business.

While the New York retailers, as well as those of the other seaports, do their part in the promotion of the steamer trade by giving extra thought and care to the orders sent to them by their brother tradesmen all over the country, the increase in this line must come as the result of work on the part of those who take the orders. It is, then, up to the inland florists to boost the business, to their own profit. This should prove a welcome opportunity to them, for they get the usual twenty per cent profit on the orders they forward, with only the trouble of sending the telegrams. This "easy money" in the dull season should well be worth working for. It is the man who develops every department of his business that finds himself with a large total on the profit side of his books.

The means of pushing this line of his business are many, if the retailer wishes to take advantage of them all. The expenditure on any of them is not large, and when the mine is in process of production the returns will cover the cost over and over again, because once a patron has given an order for flowers to be delivered on board a steamship, he or she has started a habit that will make the orders come more readily in the future.

If a florist is in the habit of sending circulars to his regular patrons and to a list of what he regards as possible customers, he will find that a letter or a neat booklet of a few pages of suggestions

If a florist is in the habit of sending circulars to his regular patrons and to a list of what he regards as possible customers, he will find that a letter or a neat booklet of a few pages of suggestions in this line will be productive of results at this time of year. It will even pay the retailer who is not in the habit of covering his clientele in this manner to experiment with it along this line. There are many people in this world whose only reason for not doing things is that they have never done them before and therefore do not "know the ropes." Ignorance is the biggest block in the path of progress, and it is up to the progressive retailer to push this block out of the path of his customers in so far as it affects his business.

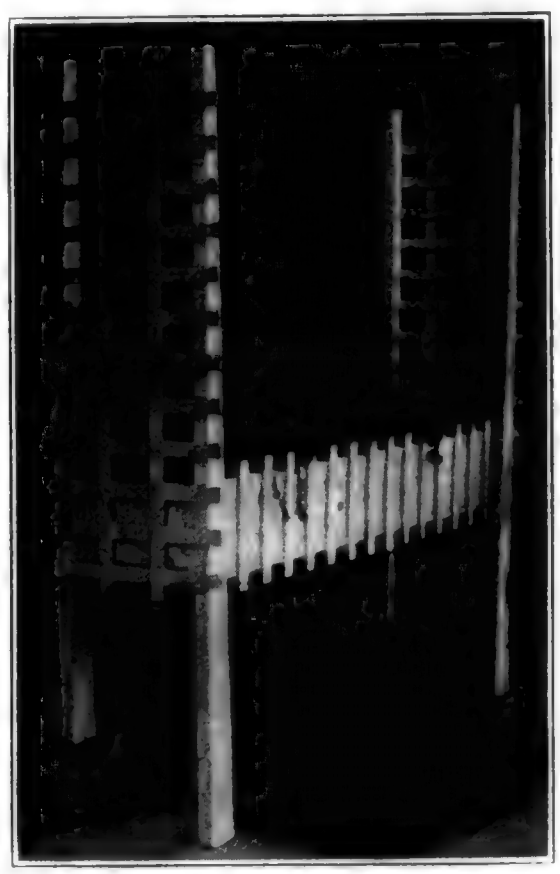
Many Other Ways.

Florists in the larger cities have found that newspaper advertisements on this subject bring returns at this time of year, and perhaps they would prove advantageous to others. It is probably more effective in proportion to the expense for the retailer to work with his own patrons. In some stores display cards call attention to this facility at customers' command. Lists of steamer sailings, such as are furnished in the retailers' department in The Review, are often posted in stores or displayed, especially at this time, in the windows.

There is, of course, the display window to be called into service, and the decorator with some spare time on his hands cannot be better employed than in arranging a display to feature the steamer business. Various suggestions along this line have been given from time to time in these columns. It is easy to arrange a cool window, presenting a miniature model of an ocean "greyhound" at its dock and a florist's automobile alongside with a load of flowers. The water, with a few waves upon its surface perhaps, will be a welcome sight to the hot pedestrians who pass the window these days. They will stop to enjoy its cool appearance, as well as the artistic touches that the ingenious mind of the individual decorator will suggest to him to add. They will study the intricate construction of the steamship, and by the time they have forgotten the heat of the day and are ready to pass on they will be thinking of a few friends of theirs who are going abroad. If the florist has a few display cards in the window, showing how simple it is for them to remember these departing friends, orders are likely to follow shortly.

This is the time for pushing this line and the summer months will prove to be not so dull as usual to the retailer who goes after steamer orders from his patrons. That twenty per cent is a good profit for the labor and outlay involved, and an order gained this year will probably bring another next year.



LAGGING BEHIND.

"Kindly accept my thanks for the article, 'Live Windows for the Dull Season,'" writes Albert Pochelon, secretary of the F. T. D., "as it certainly will stir up even the most sleepy retailer and the results for the florists' trade surely will be noticed. The selling end in the florists' trade has not kept up with the producing, or growing, end and if the retailers do not find new outlets and ways and means to sell the growers' product, I am afraid something unpleasant will happen."

The "something unpleasant" to which Mr. Pochelon refers doubtless will be, first, the multiplication of the department store bargain sales of flowers, which do not give the growers the cost of production.

WHY WE GO AHEAD.

It has become a habit of the retailers in all parts of the country to greet the supply salesman with the query, "What have you new?" To interest them, an article must be really new. This goes to show the ever-increasing progressiveness of the trade and explains why in nearly every town where a florist is located, even if it has only a population of 5,000 or so, there is an attractive, well-kept store in connection with the greenhouses. In the store are carried complete lines of chiffons, ribbons, corsage effects and accessories, baskets of all the latest styles and shapes, table novelties and supplies of all kinds. There is nothing too new or too good for these florists, for in their business they are all progressives, no matter what they may be in politics. For competition in this trade lies nowadays not in cutting prices, but in producing work of a superior artistic quality.

Some people have, at various times, drifted into the florists' business, who have tried to handle flowers on a strictly mercantile basis, selling flowers and plants merely as so much merchandise. What were the results? These flower sellers would, for a while, sell a large amount of stock, but on the narrowest of margins. They get the reputation of being cheap and are forced to buy lower grades of stock to keep in business. When daily sales slump, not only their profit but their capital goes into the dump when they are forced to throw away their stock, which is too poor to keep at all. So small is the margin in this sort of business that a few losses cut down the capital, and when credit is shut off, these tradesmen struggle for a time and then quit, broke and disgusted.

But the florist who develops his art is the one who succeeds. He educates his patrons to a standard that becomes higher and higher, and thereby creates a demand for work that is novel and unique. His profits come not from his flowers but from his art, and since there is no limit to this, the range of prices naturally is greater. This progressive characteristic of the retailer is in evidence in all parts of the country. For this reason the patron of the florist in a remote spot is fully as able to get good work and new styles in anything in made-up flowers as is the millionaire patron of the metropolitan retailer. Well kept stores, good stocks of staple and fancy flowers and plants, the telegraph delivery of orders and advertising, as well as up-to-date supplies and high-grade workmanship, all have done their part in making the florists' the most artistic and progressive of trades.

Samuel Seligman.

NEW IDEA IN WINDOW BOXES.

That the inventive mind is not a faculty confined exclusively to those of the sterner sex is proved by the work of Mrs. M. D. Bagley, the proprietor of Bagley's Floral Place, at Anamosa, Ia., in designing the window box shown in the accompanying illustration. This particular one is not well filled with plants, as one person after another wants plants from it to use in their own window boxes and, says Mrs. Bagley, "of course I sell them the plants, as that's my business."

The boxes of this design stand about five feet high. They are twelve inches wide and the box itself is nine inches deep. The length depends, of course, upon the size of the window the box is to occupy. The latticework extends three feet from the top of the box. The whole piece is painted white and presents a most attractive appearance. Self-watering boxes may be used without alteration of the stand.

Mrs. Bagley uses these boxes in the windows of her store and their good appearance there recommends the use of them to others. The Civic Club in Anamosa, Ia., hopes to install these boxes in all the stores and residences along Main street. Thus does the florists' trade grow.

IN A RESIDENCE DISTRICT.

Many florists are pleasantly located—located where they have the inestimable advantage of carrying on their business at home, in quiet, with attractive environment. Growers enjoy life, and the city florist sometimes finds his lines fallen in pleasant places—it is to be doubted if there is a man more to be envied than the retail florist who has picked a site in a well-to-do residence district. For him life has few worries and less than man's average share of annoyances.

Take, for example, the establishment of F. A. Parkmire, shown in the accompanying illustration. He started in business as recently as at Easter in 1913, but he wisely chose a residence district—a neighborhood of houses, not flats. Already he has a prosperous business. The establishment consists of a show house 14 x 45 running out to the street, with a salesroom back of it, and two plant houses, one 14 x 90 and the other 25 x 100, back of the office. The heating plant is in the basement of Mr. Parkmire's residence, in the foreground, and the garage also is on the same lot. A general business is done, cut flowers, bedding plants, sodding and gardening of all kinds; trees and shrubs are handled profitably.

Mr. Parkmire, whose location is 1429 Morse avenue, Chicago, does business as the Lakeshore Greenhouses. He believes in advertising, as can be seen by the use made of plants around his show house and home.

THE PERRY FLORISTS.

Sixteen years ago the Perry Florists' Association was organized and since that time, twice a year, in January and July, the association has met both for social and business reasons. Last week the summer meeting was held with W. B. Perry and wife, at Cresco, Ia., and a good time was had. The next winter meeting will be held at Osage, Ia., with W. S. Hall and wife.

INDIANA FLORISTS' OUTING.

The State Florists' Association of Indiana held its first annual outing at Winona Lake July 15 and 16. There was a good attendance and a most enjoyable time was had. There is perhaps not a more beautiful spot in the state of Indiana than this famous resort. Almost everything in the way of amusements is provided on the grounds, so that the work of the outing committee was comparatively easy.

The business session was called to order by President Coles at 2:30 p. m. Invitations were read from Chicago and Baltimore, asking the Indiana members to travel with them to the Boston convention. No action was taken on either one, as a number indicated their intention of traveling direct from Indianapolis to Boston via the New York Central lines. Report was made by the committee on affiliation with the S. A. F. Discussion following the report brought out the sentiment of the meeting in favor of a reasonable per capita fee and a plan under which the local membership will have an active part in the work of the national society. The committee is to represent the state society at Boston in whatever negotiations are conducted. It was decided to ask the Illinois State Florists' Association to visit our show in November and to partake of the banquet which will be held on one of the evenings. Five new members were added to the roll.

After the business session the entire crowd was taken for an hour's boat-ride on the lake steamer. While Lake Winona is not large enough for one to lose sight of land, yet an enjoyable hour may be spent without traversing the same spot more than once. This was followed by the annual midsummer banquet at Winona hotel. This hotel is famous for its dinners and on this occasion its reputation was fully upheld. The table was prettily decorated by Harry White and Fred King with roses and carnations. The center vase was a large bunch of the new Hoosier Beauty rose, brought up from Richmond by Joseph Hill. We have seen this rose a number of times in the winter months, when red roses are supposed to be good, and we had a high opinion of it, but this bunch showed it to be a fine summer variety as well, having 3-foot stems from young grafted stock and fine, full blooms with excellent color at the end of them. After the supper the evening was spent in leisure, each member following his own inclination as to entertainment.

Thursday morning sides were chosen for the ball game. The Federals played the Nationals off their feet by a score of 20 to 5. Some brilliant plays were made, also some brilliant errors, and before next year's game there will probably be considerable practicing done.

Following the ball game the races were held. Miss Rosemond Coles won first prize and Miss Florence Bitler won second in the girls' dash. Fred King won first and Will Hack second in the men's dash, while in the sack race these two men reversed the first and second positions. Tennis, croquet and quoits were going on all through the two days. Many members went bathing, which is an important feature at this place.

Just before leaving, a number of the members took occasion to visit the greenhouses of Terrell & Son, at Warsaw, which is the railroad station nearest Winona. This firm conducts a thriving retail business, growing most of its stock in the well kept greenhouses on the place, except the roses, which are bought as needed. The carnations in the field and the mums on the benches looked well. A. F. J. Baur.

COMBATING THE ARMY WORM.

The army worm has been creating havoc in Washington, D. C., and other cities, and has ravaged the parks and the private lawns and gardens, resulting in the deluging of the Department of Agriculture with appeals for aid. The army worm is a smooth, striped caterpillar about one and one-quarter inches long and one-quarter inch in diameter, and may be destroyed by the use of the following mixture: One pound of Paris green, fifty pounds of wheat bran and the juice of one-half dozen oranges. The mixture should be worked into a stiff dough by the use of diluted molasses and scattered among the worms, care being taken to keep it out of the reach of children and domestic animals, for it is a deadly poison.

Sweet Peas

ADVICE BY AN EXPERT.

Fighting the Green Aphis.

"The worst enemy of the sweet pea is the green aphis, or so-called green louse," says A. C. Zvolanek in his brochure. "This insect usually comes when the young plants are just breaking through the soil; so you should keep a continual watch on the plants as soon as they begin to grow. If you see only one or two in the whole greenhouse, do not wait until there are more, because, if you do, within a few days every plant will be covered and soon will be stunted if not entirely destroyed. The best remedy for the green louse is to spray with nicotine, or to fumigate with nicotine paper, Aphis Punk. Fumigating should be done only during cool nights, when the temperature in the greenhouse is not over 66 degrees, as the plants are easily burned if fumigated in a higher temperature. About four to six sticks of fumigating paper may be used to one greenhouse 20x100 without injury. If the temperature, even at night, is over 66 degrees, the plants in the house should be sprayed with a fine sprayer. Automatic air-pressure sprayers are reasonable in price and a great deal of work can be done with one in a short time. Nicotine is usually about thirty per cent strong. Only one part nicotine should be used to 500 parts of water. The spraying should be continued until not a single louse is alive. During the late fall or winter, after the cooler weather has begun, fumigate once every week, even though there are no insects.

To Prevent Mildew.

"Mildew is sometimes destructive to the plants, and is caused by a sudden change in the temperature. To prevent this, avoid opening the ventilators too much at once, especially after watering. As soon as the first mildew is noticed, cut all the flowers and dust the plants either with Grape Dust or with the finest pulverized sulphur, adding to it some air-slaked lime. After about two days, syringe this off and repeat if necessary. When applying this be careful not to blow any on the heating pipes, as the sulphur quickly fumes on hot pipes, not only discoloring the flowers and buds, but, if too strong, damaging the foliage.

"The red spider is also sometimes troublesome, especially in early fall or late spring. A good spraying with cool water when first noticed will eradicate this pest.

Temperature and Ventilation.

"After the seed has been sown, keep the greenhouse as cool as possible, admitting air day and night as long as the weather will permit and there is no danger of frost. The cooler it is when the plants are started, the stronger and healthier they become. It is necessary late in the fall to start firing. Keep the temperature from 40 to 44 degrees at night, never any higher, for if it is kept too high the young plants will begin to bloom too soon, and before the roots have had a good start. Such plants, forced in this way, usually produce small flowers with short stems and of no commercial value. The winter sweet peas, if sown in August or later, when well grown should be at least thirty inches high before showing the buds. The higher they are in that stage, the better the results. I would rather see sweet pea plants showing the first buds when four feet high than when two feet high.

"Sometimes, during especially warm and bright falls, the plants show a tendency to bud too early. In this case I recommend picking all the buds as soon as they appear. This will give the plants better root-growth for the later crop. After the plants are two and one-half to four feet high, they will all bud. This is the time to raise the temperature, increasing it every night by 1 or 2 degrees. If the temperature averaged 44 degrees, make it 45 degrees the next day, and so on until 52 degrees is reached. This is the highest temperature for the older winter grandifloras at night. When in bloom, 60 degrees during cloudy days and 68 during bright days is best.

"All the new winter orchid-flowering sweet peas, in the first stage, need the same treatment as that just prescribed for the winter-flowering sweet peas; i. e., 40 to 45 degrees at night and 55 to 65 during the daytime, according to the weather, if bright or cloudy. But after these are in bud and flower, raise the temperature to 55 degrees at night, 60 to 65 degrees for cloudy days and 70 to 72 degrees during bright, sunny days. This higher temperature is necessary for the new strain, as the flowers are twice as large and the number of flowers to the stem twice as many; and the additional warmth prevents the falling of the buds and causes the flowers to have brighter colors.

The Cause of Falling Buds.

"We often hear of plants losing all their buds. To prevent this, keep an even temperature, especially during the night. If, during a frosty night, the temperature is 55 degrees in the greenhouse, at 7 o'clock in the morning the glass will be heavily frosted. As soon as the sun comes out the ice inside will begin to melt, causing a heavy dampness in the greenhouse. Many growers usually shut off the heating pipes as soon as the temperature begins to rise, but this should not be done, as the dampness thus kept in the greenhouse causes the buds to fall off. What should be done is to let the heat on for a while, but open the ventilators slightly, so that the dampness may escape. As soon as the thermometer begins to rise 1 or 2 degrees, open the ventilators more and more, so that the highest temperature of 70 to 72 degrees may not be reached before 11 a. m. The change should also be made gradually during the afternoon. From about 2 to 3 p. m. begin gradually to reduce the temperature by lowering the ventilators, never leaving them open until the temperature is entirely down to 55, but letting the ventilators go down by degrees.

"If it becomes necessary to water, select only bright days when you are sure that the ventilators may be kept open for several hours at a time. If, after watering, there is any sudden change in the weather, start the fires at once and leave the ventilators open as long as possible.

GRASSHOPPERS.

There is complaint of the depredations of grasshoppers, which in certain sections are a plague this year. In Fulton county, New York, the like of the present infestation never has been known, all field crops suffering. Wherever grasshoppers are numerous the greenhouse people have their troubles. The best remedy is a mash of bran, molasses and arsenic.

Marlboro, N. Y.—Velie Bros. are well satisfied with the season just closed. Carnations outdoors are doing splendidly. This firm specializes in valley, with which they have good success.

PLANTS FOR VIOLET HOUSE.

I am about to plant a house 18x50 with single violets, Princess of Wales, a good stock of which I now have, but not enough to fill all beds the first season. I run these at a temperature of 42 degrees, which suits them well, and never higher than 45 degrees on the coldest nights in winter. I want to fill up with other crops, with the exception of pansies and myosotis. I should like to introduce sweet peas, stevia, Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride gladioli and any other cut flowers for which the above temperature will not be too low. At present the benches are raised, but I propose to change to solid beds and heat accordingly. T. E. T.

You will find Princess of Wales violets succeed better at 40 to 42 degrees than 42 to 45 degrees at night. Still, if you want to grow other plants, the higher figures are to be preferred. The temperature would be all right for sweet peas in the early stages of growth, provided your violets were out of the way about April 1 so that you could advance the temperature to 50 degrees at night at the time the sweet peas should flower. Stevia will do all right with single violets; so will the gladioli named, also the large-flowered varieties, such as America, Augusta and Mrs. F. King. These latter would not flower before the end of April. Anemones, ranunculi, tritonias, ixias and sparaxis are bulbs which would also succeed with violets. Mignonette and English primroses also succeed in the same temperature. Marguerites and snapdragons do well with 45 degrees as a winter minimum, as do schizanthus, calceolarias and cinerarias, if pot plants are needed. C. W.

VIOLETS FOR SMALL HOUSE.

I am just starting in the violet growing business and want to know if you can help me. I have a small greenhouse, 8x20, with a path one foot wide running lengthwise. I should like to know how many violet plants the house will hold and if a coal oil heater, such as is used for heating a living room, would do to heat the house. I expect to build a larger house next spring and do not want to go to the expense of buying a big boiler for so small a house? R. L.

A house of the dimensions mentioned, while it will produce some violets, will not give satisfactory returns. Violets need a low temperature, 40 to 42 degrees at night. In a large house this can be kept tolerably steady. In a small structure, heated as you suggest, temperatures are bound to fluctuate wildly, with correspondingly bad results. If you grow single violets, such as Princess of Wales, you can plant 200; if doubles, such as Lady Hume Campbell or Marie Louise, are to be used, twice that number can be housed. Much, of course, will depend on the size of your plants. C. W.

Ottawa, Kan.—The city commissioners' order for walks to be built on Hickory street necessitates the moving of some of the houses of the Lester Greenhouses back of the property line.

Sherborn, Mass.—The wind and hail storm that passed through here July 12 broke nearly every light in the greenhouse of J. Dudley Clark and damaged it in other ways as well. The heavy rain that followed the hail added to the destruction.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Freesias.

The bulbs of freesias will soon be procurable; in fact, those florists who make a point of not cutting back their flower stalks too hard, and save their own bulbs, will have ripened off and sorted them some time ago. It is not a good plan to replant these bulbs as soon as harvested; indeed, nearly all bulbs after maturation should have some rest, and, if this is not afforded, they will start erratically. Varieties in mind are tulips, narcissi, hyacinths, gladioli and many others. Of course scale bulbs, such as lilies, are injured by being kept out of the soil. But reverting to freesias, the finest variety of all is Purity. Older sorts, such as refracta alba and Leichtlinii, are decidedly inferior, although some growers who keep their own bulbs over from year to year have fine strains of refracta alba.

The time when freesias are valuable as cut flowers is at Christmas and New Year's, but there is a good sale for them three months later. For early flowering use 8-inch or 10-inch pans. Plant twenty-five and fifty bulbs, respectively, in these. Flats four inches deep may also be used, but for the earliest batch and for the production of fine spikes I prefer pans every time. A fibrous loam containing one-fourth old screened manure and a generous dash of sand will suit freesias. I like, if possible, to grow them without feeding with liquid manure, as the latter invariably causes the tips of the leaves to turn brown. Place the freesias, after planting, in a coldframe or pit and protect them from the sun. To prevent the soil from drying out, a mulch of dry sphagnum moss or cocoanut fiber will be found useful.

Genistas.

Genistas which are plunged outdoors will now be making rapid growth, and to keep them shapely a shearing will be needed once a month. Do not trim hem in too closely, however, as many customers prefer the plants more loosely and naturally grown. Young plants propagated last winter will need potting now and probably again before fall. Keep them plunged in a coldframe or in some location where water can be easily applied to them, and do not forget an occasional pinching.

Gardenias.

Gardenias which were benched in June will have made considerable growth and the roots will have penetrated through a good portion of the benches. Guard against overwatering. If once you get the benches in anything like a soggy state, pale foliage, that bane of gardenia cultivators, will appear. It always is safer to underwater than the reverse. If your compost is as it ought to be, quite porous, there will be less danger, of course, of its becoming sour. Give the plants a spraying over daily and at least twice a week a thorough syringing, using the spray nozzle on the hose, to keep mealy bug within bounds. Air can be given quite freely at this season, but a night minimum of 65 degrees should be maintained.

Transplanting Biennials.

Advantage should be taken of spells of moist, cloudy weather to transplant such plants as digitalis, rockets, Canterbury bells, sweet-williams, etc.; also any herbaceous perennials which may be of sufficient size. Set these out in nursery rows, six to fifteen inches apart, according to variety, and keep them well cultivated. They will make splendid plants before fall. It is not yet too late to sow some seeds of these, but sowing must not be delayed after this date. The present is a suitable time to sow hollyhocks. The attacks of rust caused these one-time favorites to pass almost out of culture, but it is pleasing now to see that more are being grown each year. Chater's and Alleghenys are good strains. Some growers see no beauty in hollyhocks unless they are double. Personally, I consider the singles far more beautiful.

Double Daisies and Myosotis.

Double daisies and myosotis are quite popular in spring, selling well in small baskets or boxes, put up in the same way as pansies. Both forget-me-nots and daisies can be sown at the same time as the pansies. For bedding purposes and spring sales, the alpestris varieties are the best. While blue is and always will be the favorite color, pink and white are procurable in separate packets. In the way of stronger growing and more persistent blooming sorts M. sylvatica and palustris semperflorens should be tried. The double daisies should not be sown mixed. Some fine named sorts are procurable and I have found Giant White, Giant Rose, Longfellow, double pink, and The Bride, double white, a first-class quartette to grow.

CINERARIAS FROM SEED.

Will you please tell me when I should sow cineraria seed for winter blooming; also what kind of soil to use and how to care for the plants? Will they do well in pots? W. M. P.

Sow the cineraria seed at once in a pan or pans of light compost; one consisting largely of leaf-mold, with some fine sand added, will be ideal. Make the surface smooth, and, after sowing, cover the seeds quite lightly. Protect with a sheet of glass and cover this again with paper. Keep well shaded until the seeds germinate. If you have a lean-to house facing north, it would be just the place for the seed pans. When the seedlings are of sufficient size, transplant them into flats, using equal parts of loam and leaf-mold. Later pot off singly and at each successive potting use less leaf-mold but add some old dried cow manure. Flower the plants in 6-inch or 8-inch pots, according to how large specimens are desired. A coldframe shaded during bright sun makes a splendid place for cinerarias until October, or even later. Never allow the plants to become potbound between shifts. Fumigate or spray regularly, as green aphis is partial to them. Cinerarias succeed best in a low temperature and the winter minimum should not exceed 45 degrees, while the plants will be at home if it is even 5 degrees cooler.

CARNATIONS

CARNATIONS TO FOLLOW MUMS.

We have a bench of mid-season mums and would like to grow carnations in it when the chrysanthemums come off. Would it be practicable to put field-grown plants in 5-inch or 6-inch pots and transplant them to the bench? We would want the blooms from January 1 on during the winter. We could spare a bench in a light lean-to house, if it would be practicable to plant them there and then later replant to the mum bench. If you advise either course, when should we plant from the field, early or late? W. S. G.

Carnation plants handled in the manner you suggest could not be depended on to begin blooming in January. Your bench would not be ready for them before November 20 to December 1. At that time of the year growth is at low ebb, and it would take the plants a considerable while to become reëstablished in the new soil. The best you could expect from them would be a good Easter crop even when carried along in pots. If planted on the bench and replanted, the results are not likely to be satisfactory at all. If you had a number of glass boxes, you could plant into them about August 20 and keep the plants topped back until shortly before they are carried onto the blooming bench. These would be established and would come right into crop, as there would be no disturbance of the roots.

A. F. J. Baur.

HARDENING OF THE STEMS.

Do carnation cuttings taken from the flower stem make good stock plants? I find many young plants with hardened stems, when benched. The stem gradually dies off below the top shoots or branches. I do not believe that a soft, succulent cutting, taken from a shoot before it throws a bud, would harden in that way. I shall be grateful for some information on this subject.

L. N. B.

I am inclined to the opinion that your trouble does not originate with the kind of cuttings used, but that the hardening of the stems is caused by the cuttings being left in the sand too long after being rooted. I have seen many cuttings so treated, and almost invariably the result is just such trouble as you have had.

I find little difference in the value of the two kinds of cuttings mentioned, if they are selected and handled properly. The cutting taken from the tip of the flowering shoot makes the strongest looking cutting, and for the cutting specialist gives the best satisfaction, because the buyer usually wants a good sized cutting. For my own use, however, I would just as soon have the fair sized cutting from the base of the flower stem. Next season, watch the cuttings more closely in the cutting bench and pot them as soon as they are ready. Letting the young plants get too potbound will also bring on the same trouble; so watch that too.
A. F. J. B.

PLANTING IN THE OPEN.

We are building a new house for carnations and would like to know whether we can plant the stock in the beds successfully before the roof is put on, as we expect to be a little late in finishing the house. F. & S.

It is a quite common practice to plant carnations before the house is glazed. Of course it means extra labor in care and watering, but plants so handled frequently give the best results that are had on the place that year. It it better to bench the plants before the house is glazed than to leave the planting too late.

CARNATION ALICE.

The accompanying illustration of a bench of Peter Fisher's new flesh pink carnation, Alice, will be of interest as showing its condition July 4, 1914, after blooming from September, 1913, and furnishing 40,000 cuttings for this year's planting.

CYCLAMENS IN FRAMES.

Will cyclamens do better in deep frames or in ordinary shallow ones? Is it necessary to have the sashes over cyclamens which are protected with laths, even on a hot day, or is it sufficient to have them covered with laths to shade them? I think the glass attracts the sun and causes greater heat. I am located in Rhode Island. J. R.

Cyclamens do not require deep frames; all that is needed is sufficient head room to clear them when the sashes are let down closely. Raise the sashes at least six inches at both back and front, by building a light temporary frame. In hot weather the lath shades during sun are all that is needed. Sashes are not necessary except when heavy rainstorms are likely. The plants do better if left fully exposed at night, and also in the morning until the sun hits them. A light spraying over the laths two or three times daily in hot weather is beneficial. C. W.

WHEN TO SOW STOCKS.

Will you kindly inform us as to the proper time to plant seeds of stocks to realize the best profits on them under glass? Please state also now to handle them and which are the best varieties.
H. H.

Stocks are most profitable when grown for a spring crop and especially for Memorial day. For a winter crop Beauty of Nice, White and Pink Column, should be sown early in August. For a Memorial day crop sow early in February. Pot off, rather than prick off the seedlings into flats. Grow in benches in a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. For a spring crop sow at Christmas. A good selection of giant ten weeks' is best for spring and Memorial day crops. C. W.

RED GLADIOLI FOR CHRISTMAS.

When should red gladioli be planted in benches to come in right for Christmas? A. R.

While it is barely possible that red gladioli might be had in flower at Christmas if there were some way of retarding the bulbs and at the same time not crippling their vitality, I have never yet seen it done, and do not think that the forcing of this flower for Christmas is practicable. Better stick to scarlet poinsettias, geraniums, begonias and Chinese primulas, to which, of course, roses, carnations and tulips can be added. If you want some red bulbous flowers, try the scarlet Due van Thol or Tournesol tulips.
C. W.

STOCKS FOR WINTER BLOOMS.

Will you kindly inform me what kind of ten weeks' stocks will bloom during the months of January, February and March? I should like to put in a bench of these. Also, tell me when to plant them to have them bloom in January.
A. H.

The ten weeks' stocks are excellent for spring and summer flowering, but are not so good for a midwinter crop. In fact, while it is possible to flower stocks from December onward, they certainly are not a paying crop commercially. I have had much better success with pot-grown plants during winter than when grown in benches. Suitable winter forcing varieties are White Column, Queen Alexandra and Beauty of Nice. The cut-and-come-again varieties also are desirable. If you want flowers in December, the seed should be started about the first week in August.
C. W.

SNAPDRAGONS FROM SEED.

Will you please tell us when to plant snapdragon seeds under glass and how to handle them? Also, what are the best varieties? H. H.

Although a perennial, the snapdragon usually is treated as an annual. Both cuttings and seeds are used. Seedlings are more vigorous and even good strains will give a few plants not true to color. If seed is sown now and the seedlings are boxed off, later potted, and benched in September, they will give some flowers early in November and from that time on until June. In using seeds, plant the intermediate varieties; the dwarf ones are too short and the tall ones too aspiring. Antirrhinums do well for winter flowering in raised benches containing four inches of soil. They need a minimum temperature of 45 to 48 degrees. Pink is the best selling color; next to that, white and yellow. C. W.

Penn Yan, N. Y.—During the summer the Lake Keuka Floral Co. will move the two greenhouses on Head street to the rear of the Main street store.

Ferns

FERN RUNNERS IN SOLID BED.

Will you please inform me whether three inches of soil would be enough to grow good Boston fern runners? The bench is solid; that is, it is filled with cinders up to five inches from the top. We have heretofore grown good nephrolepis in four to five inches of soil, in the same bench, but desire to know whether three inches of good soil would be enough for a bench which we intend to leave all winter for runners.

C. P. W.

Three inches of good soil, on a cinder bottom, may hold the ferns through the winter, provided they are given a top-dressing of a mixture of soil and short manure in the spring. W. H. T.

FERN GROWER OF FLORIDA.

Surrounded by splendid specimens of nephrolepis, all grown by his own firm, W. P. Newell, of Apopka, Fla., may be said to be in his element. He is the first half of the firm of Newell & Ustler, who have been growing Boston, Whitmani and Amerpohlii ferns at Apopka for the last two and one-half years. The plants shown in the accompanying illustration are a few of the thousands that are grown there under slats, with great success.

The slats that cover the houses are twenty feet long and three inches wide, and are laid with 3-inch spaces between them. These afford favorable conditions for the growing of these ferns, as well as for some vegetable plants in their season. Among the latter are grown pineapples and Japanese climbing cucumbers. The ferns, however, are a steady source of profit, for three crops can be produced in a year, the young ferns growing to 4-inch size in about four months. The dry season is the great difficulty these growers have to contend with and this has been met by the installation of an effective watering system. In spite of the fact that the sandy soil which the young ferns hold in their roots in shipment, dries out in a short time, the plants travel well for long distances. The runners, which are packed in wet moss, do not meet this difficulty.

Mr. Newell takes care of the financial end of the firm's business, while his partner, H. J. Ustler, gives the slat houses and garden his personal supervision. The latter has had a large experience as a grower, having spent some years under glass up north.

ASPARAGUS LUTZI.

The European trade papers contain notes of a new asparagus, named after its raiser, P. Lutz, of Bingen, the mouse tower town.

It is supposed to be a cross between Asparagus plumosus nanus and Asparagus deflexus scandens. The shoots, five to six feet long, grow straight upward without showing any tendency to wind around each other. If planted out in a house, it is best to put a strong bamboo stake, six to eight feet long, to each plant. One or two shoots are tied to this stake, but the following shoots need no artificial support. They will grow straight up between the others, and will be held upright by the lateral fronds. When cutting the trails, simply cut them off at the bottom and pull downwards. This is easily accomplished without disturbing the remaining shoots. Another advantage that Asparagus Lutzi has over Asparagus plumosus is that the trails have laterals right down to the bottom. There are no bare stems, and no thorns. The lateral fronds or leaflets are of a feathery texture, and of a beautiful light green color.

Thousands of snow-white, star-like little flowers cover the plants, and give them the appearance of being veiled. The flowers appear everywhere, not for a short time but nearly uninterruptedly. According to one account, "these flowering trails make splendid material for the florist. When cut, the branches of Asparagus Lutzi last for weeks, no matter whether they are kept in water or not. Many experiments have proved this. Asparagus Lutzi should be grown quite cool. Air is a first consideration, and after this comes a heavy soil, a good clayey loam. The heavier the soil, the better the plants grow and flower. Again, the light green color is best produced in heavy soil."

GENERAL STOCK FOR BEGINNER.

I am getting ready to start a small greenhouse establishment and want to carry a small line of cut flowers, pot plants and ferns. I have a greenhouse 20x60, arranged with four benches the length of the house. I will put in the frames I need. This is my first attempt in the line and I would welcome some suggestions as to what to carry and how to rotate in order to utilize fully my limited space. I am in a town of 10,000, but am located in the heart of a university community and expect a large part of my patronage from university students and faculty. I hope to be able to open September 15, the date of the opening of the first semester of the university. L. C. W.

It is not easy in one house to carry such a variety of plants as you need, and grow them successfully. In the way of ferns, you will find such varieties as Nephrolepis exaltata Bostoniensis, or Boston fern, N. elegantissima and N. Rooseveltii as useful as any. The ferns require a little more shade than the flowering plants. If you wished you could plant a couple of your benches with carnations, such as Pink Delight, White Wonder, Beacon and Benora. Part of one of these benches could be pulled out right after Memorial day and your nephrolepis stock planted out and potted up in August.

In the way of miscellaneous flowers, you will find bulbs useful. A few good sorts to grow are La Reine, Yellow Prince, Murillo, Couronne d'Or and White Hawk tulips; Golden Spur, Trumpet Major, poeticus ornatus, Double Von Sion, Emperor and Victoria narcissi; Roman hyacinths; Paper White narcissi; Gladiolus Peach Blossom, Blushing Bride, America and Augusta; Spiræa Gladstone and Queen Alexandra; yellow and white marguerites; hydrangeas; berried solanums, and Primula obconica and Sinensis. One bench might be devoted to chrysanthemums, of which you should plant some each of early, midseason and late varieties. These could be followed with sweet peas or snapdragons, or some part could be devoted to the forcing of bulbous flowers.

It would be better not to grow too many varieties. Wait until you have more glass before increasing the variety. The more coldframe sashes you have the better. Bulbs can be carried in the frames until wanted for forcing. The frames are useful for bedding plants in spring and later are ideal for growing cyclamens, primulas and other winter flowering plants. If you want geraniums, coleus and other bedding plants, I would advise buying rooted cuttings ready for potting. You will probably find it necessary to buy roses, carnations, asters, gladioli, sweet peas and other flowers from time to time.

Ann Arbor, Mich.—Mr. and Mrs. Melvin D. Lennon, who have been in the greenhouse business for the last fourteen years, have adopted the firm name of the Broadway Greenhouse Co., to avoid confusion with a company recently formed. Their range at present includes thirteen houses 15x165 and one house 10x165.

USE OF COMMERCIAL FERTILIZERS

IN GROWING CARNATIONS AND ROSES

THE University of Illinois has just sent to press the report of experimental investigations on the use of commercial fertilizers in growing carnations and roses. This material has been brought together by the floricultural division of the department of horticulture, and embraces the research work in floriculture which has been in progress at the experiment station during the last six years. Since the reports are voluminous, they will probably not be ready for distribution before the first part of next October. In the meantime, the department of horticulture is giving to the press, for the immediate information of the growers, some of the conclusions which have been reached as a result of this experimental work.

It has been shown without doubt that excellent carnations can be produced in as large quantity by the use of commercial fertilizers as with farmyard manure. The quality of the flowers, as measured by their size, length of stem, strength of stem, and keeping quality, is not changed by the use of commercial fertilizers. The splitting of carnations cannot be directly traced to the application of commercial fertilizers in moderate amounts. The results show that commercial fertilizers may be successfully used for the production of carnations; whether it is desirable to use them, depends in large part on the cost of manure and of labor.

Comparative Cost.

A careful florist will calculate the relative cost of manure and commercial fertilizer by figuring the plant food content of manure—averaging ten pounds nitrogen, two to three pounds phosphorus and eight pounds potassium per ton—at the market price of these elements in commercial fertilizers. These prices are: First, for nitrogen purchased in dried blood (thirteen per cent nitrogen) or ammonium sulphate (twenty per cent nitrogen), about 18 cents per pound; second, for phosphorus in acid phosphate (six and one-fourth per cent phosphorus), 12 cents per pound; third, for potassium in sulphate of potash (forty per cent potassium), about 6 cents per pound. At this rate, a ton of manure supplies plant food costing as commercial fertilizer about $2.50. In the case of prepared manures, which contain less water than barnyard manure, the value in terms of commercial fertilizers can be calculated from the guaranteed analysis which should be required of the dealer.

The method outlined for the use of commercial fertilizers involves a preliminary preparation of the soil, followed by three applications of fertilizer throughout the year. Comparison of the labor involved in these operations with that in the weekly application of liquid manure will show a saving of labor where commercial fertilizers are used.

No attempt has been made to grow carnations without the addition of manure to the soil, because it was believed that some additional humus would be necessary. Whether or not this is true has not been proved, but the amounts recommended below are based upon a small addition of well rotted manure.

Dried Blood for Carnations.

From the past experiments it seems certain that dried blood or sulphate of ammonia, supplying nitrogen to the plant, is the commercial fertilizer most needed by the carnation. Some indications, which are being tested during this year, have been found that acid phosphate, applied with one of the above, results in still further increase of production. No benefit has been observed up to the present time from the use of sulphate of potash. Before these conclusions were reached the mixture of manure, dried blood, acid phosphate and sulphate of potash given in the following table was tried and found to produce excellent flowers in as large quantity as by culture with natural manure. The phrase, "100 sq. ft.," in the heading of the third column, means 100 square feet of a bench five inches deep.

Fertilizer	Quan. per cu. yd. soil	Quan. per 100 sq. ft.
Manure	80 lbs.	125 lbs.
Dried blood (13% nitrogen)	5 lbs.	8 lbs.
Acid phosphate (7% phosphorus)	1¼ lbs	2 lbs.
Sulphate of potash (40% potassium)	1¼ lbs.	2 lbs.

All of the above were mixed with the soil before setting in the plants, with the exception of the dried blood, which was applied in four installments—two pounds with the others and two pounds at each of three different periods throughout the year.

Excessive Use of Fertilizers.

No exceptional crops of carnations have been produced by the use of commercial fertilizers. Good crops have been produced, however, by the use of moderate amounts of them. The use of excessive amounts will result in marked lessening of production and injury to the flowers, so that warning must be given not to attempt to produce larger crops by the use of more fertilizer than the trials have shown to be safe. Those commercial fertilizers from which there is greatest danger, when used excessively, are in the order named: First, sulphate of ammonia; second, sulphate of potash, and third, dried blood. Up to the present time no injury has resulted from heavy applications of acid phosphate.

During the experiments an attempt was made to regulate the time of heavy crop production by variation in the time of application of the fertilizers. No change in the time followed, showing that the time of application of the fertilizers does not influence the time of heavy crop production.

A report on the rose experiments, which have been in progress since 1910, is now nearly complete, and may be summarized at this time.

Dried Blood for Roses.

During seven months, November to May inclusive, of 1910-11, and eight months, October to May inclusive, of 1911-12 and 1912-13, 3,840 first-year rose plants were grown with varying quantities of commercial fertilizers and a record was kept of the number of flowers produced and the length of stem of each flower. The amount per hundred square feet of bench space of dried blood was varied in different sections from none to thirty-two pounds, of acid phosphate from none to eight pounds, and of potassium sulphate from none to eight pounds. In addition, well rotted manure was added to each section at the rate of 115 pounds per hundred square feet of bench space, regardless of the amount of commercial fertilizer applied.

One-half the number of roses each year was Killarney; the other half Bride. Of these, one-half the number was own-root stock and one-half grafted. During the three seasons mentioned above, 95,013 roses were produced, an average of about twenty-five flowers per

SIX YEARS' WORK.

By the University of Illinois.

Editor The Review: I am handing you herewith a brief statement of some of the results which have been reached by the experimental work which has been in progress in the division of floriculture of the department of horticulture, University of Illinois, during the last six years. This work has been under the immediate direction of Professor Dorner, Mr. Nehrling and Mr. Muncie. Valuable advice and criticisms have been given the department by members of the floricultural advisory committee. This statement has been prepared for me by our Mr. Muncie, upon my personal request for something which might be used by you immediately. I am sorry that it takes so long a time to get our material through the press, but it seems there is no way of avoiding that. I hope, therefore, that this material will be found of use to you and your readers.

J. C. Blair,
Head of Dept. of Horticulture.

...NEWS NOTES...

Anderson, Ind.—A fire in the pot house of Stuart & Haugh on the night of July 9 caused a loss of about $200. The dry wood of the structure burned easily and it required the entire fire department to keep the fire from spreading.

La Fayette, Ind.—The contract for the erection of the four greenhouses to be used in connection with the agricultural department of Purdue University, for which the last legislature appropriated $30,000, has been awarded to the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., of Chicago.

Amherst, Mass.—The department of floriculture of the Massachusetts Agricultural College is to have a booth at the S. A. F. convention in Boston. Prof. A. H. Nehrling, head of the department, will be in charge and will give information on any point concerning the work of the college, its courses and equipment.

Joliet, Ill.—The plans for the park greenhouse were changed somewhat at the last meeting of the West park board. The new plans call for a structure similar to that of the previous one, but half of the building will be arranged for use as a show house. The John C. Moninger Co., of Chicago, has the contract for the erection of the house.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—The wholesale and retail florists of Salt Lake City and Ogden were the guests of Robert C. Miller, of Farmington, at an outing at Lagoon July 11. The retailers won the baseball game from the wholesalers by a score of 6 to 5. This was followed by numerous field day events, in which the wholesalers seemed to have the worst of it most of the time.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Lone Oak Greenhouses, established three years ago by Duncan C. Arnold, are to be extended under a $100,000 corporation. The present property, on Udall avenue, including twenty-six acres of land and about 60,000 square feet of glass, will be devoted principally to carnations. Charles Weiss, of Twenty-eighth street, New York, will take charge of the selling end of the business.

Racine, Wis.—The old frame building on Sixth street occupied by the store of the Racine Floral Co. is being torn down to make way for the 3-story building being erected by the concern. The structure will be quite up-to-date in appearance. The first floor, which will be occupied by the store of the Racine Floral Co., will be faced with tile in front and have a conservatory in the rear. The second and third stories will be used for offices and of these the front will be of ornamental brick.

Scranton, Pa.—While Anton Schultheis was in Philadelphia, a heavy storm July 10 caused Roaring brook to overflow, inundating his establishment to the depth of four feet. His outdoor stock was almost completely ruined, his newly cleaned and whitewashed benches were floated from their places and the plants in the houses were partly saved only by the exercise of great care in clearing away the debris the following day. The loss will be great, though probably not so high as previously estimated, at $10,000.

The Convention Program

THE PROGRAM of the thirtieth annual convention of the Society of American Florists, to be held in Boston, Mass., beginning August 18, has been planned again to occupy the customary length of four days, after the trial of a longer program last year. The business sessions will take up the whole of the first three days, while Friday, August 21, will be given over to an outing, in the charge of the horticultural interests of Boston. The opening session of the society will be called to order at 2 p. m. Tuesday, allowing visitors all of the forenoon to make any necessary arrangements and get used to their surroundings.

As the judges for the trade exhibition, the following have been appointed: For sections A, B and F, M. A. Patten, Tewksbury, Mass.; William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., and John R. Fotheringham, Tarrytown, N. Y.; for sections C and D, Wm. H. Siebrecht, Sr., Chappaqua, N. Y.; Joseph A. Manda, West Orange, N. J., and Frank H. Traendly, New York city; for sections E and G, Thomas F. Galvin, Boston, Mass.; Wm. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y., and Olaf J. Olson, St. Paul, Minn. The following have been appointed judges of the convention garden: Robert Cameron, Cambridge, Mass.; J. F. Huss, Hartford, Conn.; Harry A. Bunyard, New York city; Gustav X. Amrhyn, superintendent of parks, New Haven, Conn., and John N. Champion, New Haven, Conn.

Report of the Judges of Trade Exhibition and the Convention Garden.
Report of Committee on President's Address.
Discussion.
Affiliation—Special Report of Board of Directors.

At the morning session of Friday, August 22, of the Minneapolis convention the following recommendation of the board of directors was adopted:

"That the fee for members of any regular florists' clubs who wish to join the S. A. F. as a body will be reduced to $3 for the first year and the annual dues thereafter to be $2 per year for each member thereof. These dues must be paid to the S. A. F. by the treasurer of each club and not by the members individually, and we further recommend that our constitution and by-laws be amended to comply with this recommendation."

At the meeting of the board of directors, held in Boston, March 17 and 18, 1914, the matter of affiliation was again thoroughly discussed by the full board, with the result that the recommendation was considered to be rather indefinite. It was therefore voted that a special committee of three be appointed to work out a definite plan of affiliation, the same to be presented as an amendment to the constitution and by-laws. The committee, consisting of George Asmus, chairman, Wm. F. Kasting and J. J. Hess, ultimately submitted the following amendment, which has been approved and is now recommended for adoption by the board of directors in place of the recommendation offered at Minneapolis:

Amendment to Paragraph (b) of Section 2 of Article II.

1. That clubs, societies or kindred organizations of professional florists, gardeners and horticulturists, having a paid-up membership of 100 or more members in the S. A. F., shall be entitled to one representative on the board of directors of the S. A. F.
2. Such representative shall be the president of such organization and must be a member of the S. A. F.
3. Any elective officer or appointed director of the S. A. F. shall not be eligible as a representative of such organization.
4. When the president of any such organization is already a director, the vice-president shall be eligible for the office.
5. Any organization applying for representation shall submit to the secretary of the S. A. F. a complete list of its membership. It shall be the secretary's duty to confirm same and submit it to the president for final confirmation. Such a list shall be in the hands of the secretary by December 1 of each year. Announcement of such director shall be made by the president-elect on January 1 of each year.

Afternoon Session.

2 P. M.—Essay—"What Should the Society of American Florists Do for the Private Gardener?" by Arthur E. Thatcher.
Discussion.
2 P. M.—Bowling Contest, Ladies' S. A. F., at the Alleys, 167 Washington Street.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 20.

Third Day—Morning Session.

9 A. M.—Automobile Ride for the Ladies, starting from the Copley Plaza Hotel, to the North Shore.
9 A. M.—Meeting of the Florists' Hail Association.
9 A. M.—Meeting of the American Carnation Society.
10 A. M.—Meeting of the American Gladiolus Society.
10 A. M.—Meeting of the American Rose Society.
11 A. M. to 12 M.—Polls Open for the Election of Officers.

Afternoon Session.

2 P. M.—Question Box.
Essay—"Adaptation of Plants to Soil," by Prof. Geo. S. Stone, Amherst, Mass.
2 P. M.—Annual Bowling Tournament, S. A. F., at Alleys, 167 Washington Street.

Evening Session.

8:45 P. M.—The Ladies' Society of American Florists will entertain at the Copley Plaza Hotel.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 21.

Fourth Day.

Guests of the Horticultural Interests of Boston.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Frank Beu.

Margaret Beu, wife of Frank Beu, passed away July 17, at the German-American hospital in Chicago, following an operation for cancer of the stomach performed July 14. Apparently the operation was a success, for she rallied well and was thought to be on the road to convalescence. The end came suddenly but quietly, in a sinking spell from which she did not rally.

Mrs. Beu was probably the most widely known woman florist in Chicago. She had been active in the downtown wholesale cut flower section of the city for many years, her daily work bringing her into contact with a majority of those who either buy or sell on the Chicago market. Hers was a cheerful good nature that won the friendship of all who knew her, while the strict integrity of her dealings earned the confidence and respect of those with whom she had business relations.

Mrs. Beu was born in Bayreuth, Germany, in 1869, her maiden name being Benker. Coming to this country when she was 18 years old, in 1889 she was married to Frank Beu in Philadelphia, where they lived for several years and then moved to Chicago. Mr. Beu and one son, Carl, survive. Always a worker, Mrs. Beu became her husband's associate in business when he made his start for himself, some sixteen years ago, at 4435 North Crawford avenue, in Chicago. Retailing was started with the greenhouses and the glass area was increased as opportunity offered until the production afforded a supply to wholesale. Then Mr. Beu managed the greenhouses and retail store while Mrs. Beu attended to the wholesaling. She had a stand at various locations in the center of the city, sometimes having space with one wholesale florist and then with another. She was one of the prime movers in the organization, in 1903, of the Flower Growers' Market, of which corporation Mr. Beu became a director, and they had a stand on the market floor at the corner of Wabash avenue and Randolph street as long as the market was in existence. The stand still is in the same building and Mrs. Beu was selling her stock there up to a few days before she went to the hospital. Mrs. Beu claimed the invention of the St. Patrick's day green dye, asserting that the first dyed carnations the trade had seen were the ones she exhibited at a flower show in Chicago in 1903. She was a member of the Maccabees and the Women's Relief Corps.

The funeral was held July 21 at Montrose chapel, burial at that cemetery. Many members of the trade were present and there were numerous floral expressions of sympathy for the family.

Andrew Harth.

Andrew Harth, of Millburn, N. J., died July 12 after a long illness, at the age of 60. He had been in poor health for more than a year, suffering from neuritis. Born in Germany, he came to the United States in 1876 and settled in Brooklyn, from which place he moved to Millburn twenty-two years ago, locating on the premises now occupied by the family.

A widow; two sons, John Harth, of Bayside, L. I., and Joseph, of Millburn, and two daughters, Carrie and Angeline Harth, of Millburn, survive.

Funeral services were held July 15 at the home and at St. Rose of Lima's church. Interment was in St. Rose of Lima's cemetery.

Mrs. Frank Beu.

H. B. Laundy.

H. B. Laundy died July 15 at the family home, 1016 Reynolds avenue, Kansas City, Kan. Mr. Laundy had been in business in Kansas City, Kan., for more than a quarter of a century. A widow and four children survive. The funeral was held at the family home July 17. Burial was in Woodlawn cemetery.

WHERE THEY FALL.

To a man up a tree it looks as though the insecticide manufacturers, who are constantly being pilloried by the government, bring their troubles upon themselves by claiming too much on their labels. The belief is strengthened by the nature of certain suggestions by the government, with regard to labels. In reply to a request by a manufacturer the insecticide board says, in part:

The following points should receive your most careful consideration:

1. No statements should be made that are false or misleading in any particular.
2. Too comprehensive or too assertive claims should not be made.
3. No claim should be made that a product will be effective against certain insects or fungi, unless you are assured that these claims are true.
4. Claims should not be made on the basis of old literature, which claims have been disproved by more modern and more carefully executed published experiments.
5. Directions for using certain preparations on certain vegetation should not be made if such applications will lead to serious burning.

With the makers of the nicotine insecticides widely used in greenhouses the trouble lies in the disregard of caution No. 2—the labels claim too much. The fact appears to be that the manufacturers label their product with the formula used, which generally represents the maximum insecticidal content, and make no allowance for the variation which seems inevitable. If they would lower the claim on the label sufficiently to get within the range of practical manufacturing variation they then would escape being advertised in the government's publications. The objection on the part of the manufacturers doubtless is that competitors would take advantage of it if they claimed a nicotine content lower than they now do. Nothing to it; not one man in a hundred knows what the label claims, or cares—they buy on results obtained in actual use.

CALENDULAS IN GREENHOUSE.

Please tell us how to handle calendulas, how to sow the seed under glass, and which varieties are best. H. H.

Calendulas can be grown in the same temperature as your snapdragons and cornflowers—a minimum of 45 to 48 degrees. Sow in the benches, but give the plants ample room, as they cover a good deal of ground. In common with the other plants named, calendulas need a light, sunny, well ventilated house. The variety Orange King is the best seller. The pale lemon varieties do not sell so well. C. W.

Kewanee, Ill.—Hamilton & Plummer plan to rebuild their range on East Third street and add a new greenhouse, 22x75. The recent hail storm broke about 30,000 feet of glass at this establishment and at the one east of the city. Repairs at the latter place are about completed and to this range the stock from the East Third street houses will be moved. Insurance in the Florists' Hail Association covered the loss of the broken glass.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1914: President, Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis; vice-president, Patrick Welch, Boston; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Thirtieth annual convention, Boston, Mass., August 18 to 21, 1914.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THE early bird will catch the worm in the matter of marketing surplus field-grown carnation plants. Not many growers are ready to sell, and the demand is strong. Later there will be a lot of stock, after everybody is planted up, for the plants have done well in the field except in one or two localities where the weather has been too dry.

A VASE of Gladiolus Rochester White has adorned the editor's desk for the last five days and the blooms still are in fair condition in spite of the heat and the fact that they made the trip from Rochester in a paper box. The flowers were sent by James Vick's Sons, who say the prospect for a large crop of bulbs this season is encouraging.

TIME after time The Review receives a package, usually containing a fragment of a plant, but frequently soil or some other article used in the trade, but without any accompanying communication regarding the specimen; sometimes there is not even a mark that will show the identity of the sender, much less let us know what he wants to find out about it. It is a pleasure to be of service, but friends will please remember that such mind reading stunts as are done are incidental to office duties, not the regular occupation of any of the office force.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

THREE YEARS.

Young, John, Windler, Pa.

TWO YEARS.

Phelps, Henry, Remington, Ind.
Scovell, W. C., Malta, O.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The new green notice with the last copy tells the story. No bills are run up; no duns sent.

TO START THE BALL.

One by one florists who are not content with the limited retail trade in their local field are awakening to the possibility of supplementing it with wholesale mail-order business worked up by means of inexpensive yet efficient little Classified ads in The Review:

You may stop my ad and send bill, as the stock is sold out. It just goes to show that if you can't start the ball rolling, The Review will start it for you.—J. N. Spanabel & Sons, Rockford, Ill., July 20, 1914.

NO "SOUVENIR" ALBUM.

The following circular letter, issued by the committee on sports for the Boston convention, speaks for itself:

"Knowing that you will be greatly disappointed when you find out that the committee in charge of arrangements has decided not to issue the usual souvenir program for the coming S. A. F. convention at Boston, and instead of holding you up for an ad, where the returns are often problematic, we suggest that you offer a suitable prize for one of the sporting events.

"We are in need of about eighty prizes, including ones suitable for the bowling, baseball, swimming and for a variety of children's and grown-up people's games and sports.

"If you have no special choice, you may send us a check and the committee will make a selection of a prize in your name. Due credit will be given to those who send prizes or make contributions in the trade papers and the official program of events."

The address of the chairman of the sports committee is Wm. R. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

With few exceptions Chicago wholesale florists report that business now is running behind last year, referring to the totals of the daily sales. At the same time most of them say they are handling quite a little more stock than was the case in July last year. Consequently the average price of flowers must be considerably below the prices obtained last summer. Last week and the first part of the present week have been especially quiet. The city business amounts to little more than funeral work, the reliance of the market being placed in shipping trade. If it were not for a constantly increasing volume of out-of-town business the market would be in decidedly bad shape. The present situation is especially uncomfortable for the houses that do not do much shipping. Those who are fortunate in having worked up and kept the out-of-town patronage have enough stock to fill all their orders, so that there is little need for one wholesaler to buy of another. This leaves the wholesalers who have no shipping trade dependent upon the local retailers, who are buying hardly anything more than the stock needed for the occasional funeral order. An established shipping business never was of greater value to a wholesale house.

The principal change in the market has to do with the supply of Beauties. The crop has been extremely heavy and the iceboxes of the principal Beauty houses have been full of stock for weeks. About July 17 there was a

ASTERS

Quite Exceptional Quality for so Early

YOU who have been feeling the need of good Asters—here they are! We recommend this stock as quite out of the ordinary for this early date and dry season. Grown under irrigation, these Asters are not only the best in market but the best we ever have seen at this time of year. White, pink, lavender. Try some. You'll want more.

FANCY ROSES

You will be interested in our special summer rose crops—novelty roses that sell well regardless of warm weather—simply too attractive for your customers to pass them by. Mrs. Russell, the new pink beauty, can now be supplied in quantity with moderately long stem; plenty of Bulgarie, the quick-selling light pink; Milady, the best red rose; Ward and Sunburst, the popular yellows; also Killarney Brilliant, the new dark pink. Try these on your trade—the people can't resist the desire to buy.

SUMMER BEAUTIES

You cannot do better than to use our Beauties. Our supply is large and steady. All lengths.

FANCY LILIES

These are home-grown Lilies, true Giganteums, grown from perfectly healthy bulbs. They will reach you in excellent condition and make money for you. Can supply in quantity. Also can furnish Rubrums and Auratums of fine quality.

GLADIOLI

Plenty of America, Augusta and King—stock that grades ahead of most other Glads on this market.

DAISIES

We shall have Shasta Daisies straight through until frost cuts them off.

VALLEY

We always have Valley—the famous Chicago Market Brand.

ORCHIDS

You can get here as many fine Cattleyas as you need.

NEW FANCY FERNS

By ordering of us you can get all the Hardy Cut Ferns you need. Our stock is good; we never ship anything but the best on the market.

sharp contraction in the receipts and by Saturday night the accumulations had pretty much cleaned up and prices had shown a tendency to stiffen quite sharply. This week the supply is much less than it has been and, although quality seems to have gone down with the supply, considerably better prices are being realized. There continues to be an abundance of roses and there seems little likelihood of any scarcity this summer. All the buyers are calling for Russell. If there were enough of this variety to go around there would be scarcely any sale for anything else. Next to Russell, Shawyer is in demand. Killarney Brilliant is coming stronger and better every day.

Carnations are in light supply and little of the small quantity of stock received is good enough to command the attention of the buyers. On the other hand, asters are coming much more plentifully and some of the stock is excellent. The growers are complaining that between dry weather and stem-rot this will turn out to be a poor year for asters. Gladioli are abundant and prices have dropped, although good stock still is realizing fair money. Pink Beauty seems to be the most plentiful variety, although it may be that Augusta and America sell more quickly and therefore are not so conspicuous on the wholesalers' tables. Much of the stock shows the effects of dry weather. Recent hot days have finished sweet peas with most growers. Easter lilies are abundant. Auratums are increasing as the supply of rubrums goes down. A Denver shipper supplied some of the local wholesale houses with a fine lot of gypsophila this week.

The call for orchids is extremely light. Some splendid stock is offered, but the demand is not sufficient to clean it up at anything like the price such good flowers should command. Valley sells steadily, but in nothing like the quantity that was needed in the spring months.

The Club Picnic.

The Chicago Florists' Club never has held a more successful outing than the one of July 19, said to have been the twenty-ninth in the club's history. The location was especially favorable, St. Paul park, at Morton Grove, being in the center of a district that is full of greenhouse establishments. No tickets were required, so that the attendance is unknown, but it certainly was large, being variously estimated all the way from 500 to 700 or more. The city wholesale and retail stores supplied only a small part of the crowd, most of those present being greenhouse men and their families. These turned out stronger than ever before. For instance, the Peter Reinberg establishment sent two motor trucks and two touring cars, all loaded to capacity, probably seventy-five people, men, women and children, headed by Mr. Reinberg himself and his lieutenants, the Reichling brothers. It was commented that there was an unusual number of the veterans of the craft, men who seldom are seen at club affairs, like H. Bauske, Fred Stielow, Phil Broadbeck, Sam Pearce, Anton Then, August Jurgens and many others.

The success of the affair was due in large measure to the proximity of the grounds to the establishment of Poehlmann Bros. Co. President French and the committee had all the Poehlmann resources at their command, employing trucks and men in the preparation of the grounds and in caring for the visitors. When prizes for the sports ran out the Poehlmann plant department even supplied the deficiency. During the day the more serious-minded picnickers took the opportunity to go through the greenhouses. John Poehlmann voiced the general verdict when he said "the boys" appeared to have things even "a little better than usual," with the work farther along than it ordinarily is in July. The early-planted carnations and the cattleyas attracted special attention.

There was a band in the grove and an orchestra in the dance pavilion, the last picnickers not starting for home until midnight. After luncheon, brought in baskets, there was a long program of games for the children, with a foot-race or two for the grown-ups, followed by a ball game between the Amling team of Maywood florists and the local Morton Grove aggregation. The result, a victory for the florists by a score of 7 to 3, probably never could have been achieved without the rooting of John Zech and W. H. Amling (Mr. Zech called it coaching), although changing pitchers in the third inning with the score 3 to 1 in favor of Morton Grove and the money all up may have had something to do with it.

Wm Seligman says he won the fat man's race and that the prize was—what do you think? A rubber coat! For Sprinkleproof! It was Sam's busy day. Others present from out of town were: E. Oestreicher and Mr. Schimmel, of Milwaukee; Mr. Thomas, of the Breitmeyer staff, and Mrs. Thomas, of Detroit, and Walter Jaap, son of William Jaap, proprietor of the Lester Park Greenhouses at Duluth.

Fred Liebermann, who was on the road this spring with a professional baseball team, now is giving six days a week to his flower business at 1609 Wells street and devotes Sunday to pitching for the Wiederecht team in the city league.

Miss Marget McNulty, who presides over Peter Reinberg's books, left July 19 for a fortnight's outing at Mackinac Island. Mrs. Felix Reichling has so far recovered from her serious operation that she was able to return home from Augustana hospital July 21. Mr. Reichling says that in Monday morning's mail Peter Reinberg had orders for 15,000 field-grown carnation plants, most of them mentioning his advertisement in The Review.

Few first-class American Beauties or teas are arriving. These alone command respectable quotations. Many thousands of the inferior quality have been unsalable at any price. Of the specialties, a few good Shawyers, Double White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant and Mrs. Russell arrive daily, but the bulk of the rose shipments were sold last week at unmentionable quotations.

fect, or sell above $1 per hundred. The demand is light, many of the shipments show the effect of the extreme heat and the tendency of values is downward. Lilies and valley are plentiful and prices remain at the low level of a week ago. Few lilies go above $3 per hundred. Quality could not be better. The surplus of sweet peas is enormous. Much of the stock deserves no recognition and should not have been sent to the market. The waste is deplorable. Orchids last week sold as low as $5 per hundred. The supply is far above the demand. The best gigas only commanded 30 cents July 18. Asters are now among the daily arrivals and outdoor grown gladioli are coming heavily. The market has settled down to the usual midsummer stagnation.

Various Notes.

Early closing seems to become more general and few of the wholesale cut flower stores are open after 4 p. m. Some close at 3 o'clock. Saturdays have become the least profitable days of the season. The Sunday trade is nil. The market might well close from noon of Saturdays until Monday morning. The vacation season is at its height.

Everybody is talking convention. New York is sure to send a record crowd. The all-water route is the official way of transportation. The Gardeners' Society will have a big delegation on board. Secretary Ebel is booking berths for its members. Chairman Traendly has the Florists' Club's list nearly completed. The boat will leave New York at 5 p. m. Monday, August 17, and will arrive at Boston at 8 a. m. Tuesday.

The report from Flowerfield, L. I., is optimistic this season, because of the abundance of rain. I. S. Hendrickson says shipments of blooms will commence soon and that the outlook is bright for both spikes and bulbs.

The business of our city has held up well this season and at times flowers were scarce and hard to get, but gladioli are now plentiful and of good quality.

The Forest Hills Cemetery is completing two new houses, 28x90, of pipe frame construction, furnished by Lord & Burnham Co. These houses will be planted to carnations and mums. The cemetery reports a good business on the new venture.

The Chattanooga Floral Co. is preparing to build two new houses in connection with the St. Elmo plant. The company reports business good but flowers scarce.

Fred Hagley, of South Chattanooga, is erecting three new pipe frame houses made by Lord & Burnham Co., 28x151 feet. Mr. Hagley is the latest to join the army of florists of our city. He will grow a general line of cut flowers and plants.

LANCASTER, PA.

The Lancaster County Florists' Club never had a more enjoyable affair than the outing July 16 that took the place of the regular meeting. Nearly 200 persons were in the party that gathered at Mount Gretna, for this resort is accessible to Harrisburg and Lebanon growers as well as to those of Lancaster. There was quite a delegation from Philadelphia, including S. S. Pennock, Leo Niessen, C. E. Meehan, E. J. Fancourt, J. T. Connor, G. C. Watson and Messrs. Liggit, Mosgrove and Fierstein. Others present included Wm. Swayne, E. C. Marshall and A. B. Carter, of Kennett Square; James Brown, of Coatesville; J. D. Brenneman, Harrisburg, and Mr. Nolan, representing the construction company at North Tonawanda, N. Y. There was no program, as the resort affords so much of interest that everybody was kept busy up to the hour of starting for home. The committee that arranged the pleasant affair consisted of Elmer Weaver, Frank Kohr and J. Moore and is entitled to much credit.

The next event will be a trip to visit some of the near-by aster and gladiolus specialists.

The Eastern Market.

There is about as much business as usual at this season, perhaps a little more. There are some nice asters in all colors coming into the market and in sufficient quantities to depend upon. Gladioli are numerous at easier prices. Roses are good for this season. Carnations are holding on longer than was expected and a good many nice flowers can still be had in all the wholesale houses. New York state peas are fine. Valley is not in demand. A few dahlias have appeared.

American Pluck.

The Philadelphia Florists' Club appointed a committee, in May of last year, to raise funds to aid the flood sufferers in the middle west. This committee, consisting of Edward Reid, Samuel S. Pennock and Fred Hahman, raised a little less than $500. After carefully going over the ground they were unable to find a single florist who had suffered loss from the flood who was willing to accept financial aid. David Rust, secretary for the committee, was therefore directed by the club to return the money to the subscribers.

The Track and Cars.

Myers & Samtman, of Chestnut Hill, have completed their second year's work of filling their greenhouses with soil, aided by a track and cars. Tney also brought the material for concrete to tneir new house by the same means. It has proved an unqualified success. Frank P. Myers says that it lightens the hardest task of the season and conserves the energy of the men for the fall. Myers & Samtman use benches throughout their entire place, refilling nearly all of them during May and June.

The Big House at North Wales.

Courage has wrought a wonderful change in the appearance of the mammoth greenhouse of the Florex Gardens. The ruin of a few months ago has disappeared and in its place is a tranquil scene of horticultural industry, with little save an occasional tiny fragment of glass to suggest the havoc of the storm. Work on the glass-covered rose field of 70,000 plants goes on as before. There are changes, though, that show what has occurred; a new row of posts has been erected between each of the other rows the entire length of the house. These posts are aided in their task of strengthening the roof by an army of struts that make more rigid the support—an insurance, as it were. The roses in this house have had varying fortunes; somewhere about 50,000 of the 70,000 stood the frightful shock of bitter cold after genial warmth, and lived—a remarkable showing. The remaining 20,000 were lost and have been replaced with young stock, grafted. The upper end, which was partitioned off soon after the accident, looks best. The plants grew strongly in the late spring, producing a crop of flowers in the end of June and early in July. There has been little replanting needed in this section. The middle of the house and the lower part suffered more; the long continued exposure, the wreckage, the tramping, all told heavily against it. That so large a number of the plants recovered is amazing. Taken all through, the house looks well after its icy ordeal.

A Seed Innovation.

Walter P. Stokes has, for a long time, been contemplating an innovation in his seed catalogue, which he feels sure will be considered as an improvement by his customers when it becomes known and is understood. This change consists in cutting out all varieties of doubtful merit, leaving only the best. The pruning will be done with a firm hand. All that is of little use will be cut away. No variety of vegetable seed, for instance, is to remain on this list merely because it is different. It must be the best variety in a certain section of this country, or the best of a certain type, or nearly the best, to earn its place on the list. This will mean an enormous saving in time for compiler and reader of the catalogue, to say nothing of the effects of the seeds and of the plants. Persistently followed out, it will yield results that will be far reaching in their beneficial effects, for which the seed world will owe Mr. Stokes a debt of gratitude.

Various Notes.

George Burton is pleased with his new rose, Thora. He is trying Hadley.

August Doemling has gone over to Germany.

Emil Gerschick spends a few hours each week with his family on a trip to the seashore. He is further improving his place.

Wm. J. Margan, carnation specialist with the late John E. Haines, South Bethlehem, and later with Max H. Rothe, of Mount Airy, Philadelphia, has accepted a position with the Bethlehem Steel Co., to take charge of its greenhouses and grounds at South Bethlehem.

Walter P. Stokes is planning the erection of a large seed warehouse on his company's trial grounds at Moorestown, N. J. Mr. Stokes is now at Paupac Lake, in the Poconos.

Edward Habermehl has gone to Ocean City, N. J., where his brother, John P. Habermehl, is spending the summer.

The Southwestern Market.

The local wholesale market is running along as usual at this time of the year, and conditions have changed little since last report as to quality, supply and demand. A little rain last week helped the outdoor stock greatly and some of it is looking much better. The retailers are having their share of funeral work, as a number of people prominent in society and business circles died during the week. This caused a good deal of activity in the retail stores, but they say that without this the summer so far would have been extremely dull.

There is an abundance of roses, of which Killarney in all its varieties is in the majority. Kaiserin, Russell, Ward and Beauties are among the others. Fancy grades in these are in good demand at any time, while the other grades drag almost daily. There are a few good carnations to be had, the bulk of them being small in flower. White Enchantress and Enchantress sold well last week. A few asters coming in were cleaned up at good prices. Gladioli are plentiful, the best bringing $6 per hundred. Field-grown stock is looking better. Shasta daisies and Easter lilies were in demand all the week, and valley, too, had a good call. The supply of greens is good, with plenty of smilax, fancy ferns and asparagus.

say it needs a two days' steady rain to be of real value to the field growing stock.

Ed. Kalisch, head of the Kalisch Bros. Floral Co., could not resist the temptation of the big fish stories going the rounds; so he and a party of friends started for the Ozarks to catch bass in the Black river. A postal showing the size of a fish he caught was received from Mr. Kalisch.

C. Young & Sons Co. held their yearly stockholders' meeting last week in their offices at 1406 Olive street. The election of officers took place and resulted as follows: President, James Young; vice-president and general manager of the greenhouse plant, William C. Young; secretary, Miss Edna Young, and treasurer and general manager of the retail store, Charles Young. The company had a successful business during the last year.

The old quarters of the Ellison Floral Co., at 4517 Olive street, are being remodeled, and the show house on the west side of the store is being repainted. It has been reported that the place will reopen as a first-class flower store this fall, but the new proprietors' names have not been learned.

Alexander Geranios, head of the Metropolitan Floral Co., at Grand and Olive streets, says his place is too small and that he is looking for larger quarters in the same building. A recent fire in the basement under his store caused him $300 damage to florists' supplies which he had stored there. No damage was done to the store room.

Guy Reburn, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, was out among the trade last week. Mr. Reburn stayed over this week to see some of the fun at the florists' picnic. He reports an excellent trade all along the line. He is booming the Boston S. A. F. convention.

Vincent Gorly, head of Grimm & Gorly, has returned from a trip to Mobile, Ala. Mr. and Mrs. Frank X. Gorly are preparing for an eastern trip, which includes Boston convention week. Arrangements have been made to give each of their employees a week's vacation during the summer months.

When it comes to hustling you have to hand it to Frank Windler, chairman of the Florists' Club trustees, for the manner in which he handled the recent affairs of the club, and this week's picnic has been greatly commented upon by the trade at large. In this work he was assisted by Wm. Ossick and John Connon.

The Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. last week received some excellent consignments of Shasta daisies and Mrs. Russell roses from Milwaukee, which had a great demand.

Julius Schaeffer and Ed. Westeman, with youngsters Jaenicke and Steidle, comprise the working force at Vandervoort's flower department. David Geddis, head of the department, will soon be off on an eastern business trip, which will, of course, include the Boston convention.

H. Lloyd, head of the Shackelford Nursery Co., while cranking his machine broke his right arm. The accident was painful and will keep him from the wheel for at least a month. This is the second time this year that he has had such an accident.

George Waldbart is having his place on Grand avenue repainted, and a few necessary improvements are being made,

THE GENUS IRIS

By WILLIAM RICKATSON DYKES

With 48 colored plates and 30 line drawings in the text

This magnificent work brings together the available information on all known species of Iris. The most striking feature of the book is the life-size colored plates, reproduced from originals drawn from living plants—making it a volume of remarkable beauty as well as of great scientific importance.

254 pages, demi folio, half morocco, $37.50. Postage extra (weight 11 lbs. 7 oz.)

Convention City Hotels

THE hotel committee for the Boston convention has sent out a circular letter containing the list of hotels which is here appended, with prices and other particulars. The committee has made comprehensive arrangements and in most cases can hold reservations until August 15. It will be best to write direct to the hotel for reservations, but the committee suggests that intending visitors send duplicate announcements to the office of the general secretary, 120 Boylston street, Boston, Room 702, as a record, as it is the desire to help members in every way. Besides the hotels below, there are a number of other excellent family hotels in the vicinity of the garden and hall and innumerable first-class furnished rooming houses and reasonably priced restaurants.

People intending to stay at Back Bay hotels, the Somerset, Nottingham, Thorndike, Westminster, Lenox, Victoria, Canterbury, Hemingway, Vendome or Carleton, or to look for furnished rooms, should leave trains via N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. and Boston & Albany R. R. at the Back Bay stations of the roads, all others at the South Station terminal. Patrick Welch, 226 Devonshire street, Boston, is chairman of the hotel committee.

The Copley Plaza hotel, in Copley Square, has been chosen as official headquarters of the convention. It is one block from the Back Bay and Huntington avenue railroad stations. To reach this hotel, leave the train at the Back Bay station. Check your baggage to the Back Bay and Huntington avenue stations, as it will be transferred to and from the hotel without charge.

Westminster	Copley Square	.....	1.50 to 2.00	10 minutes	10 minutes

In order that there be no confusion, Mr. Welch wishes to call special attention to the similarity of the names Copley Plaza, Copley Square, and Plaza. In making reservations, be careful to address the hotel you have in mind.

which will take up a good part of next month. Mr. Waldbart will remain home this summer and take things easy at his country home in St. Louis county.

Henry Berning has been receiving large shipments of roses during the last week, which included some extra fine Mrs. Russell and Beauties. The others were mostly Killarneys and Kaiserins, of good quality, but short in stem.

There is more than the usual amount of interest shown in the Boston convention as the time draws near. State Vice-president R. J. Windler, who has charge of the transportation of the St. Louis delegation, says that he has a number of promises from local florists to make the trip, which will be from here to Chicago, where they will take the president's special with the Chicago Florists' Club to Boston. The fare will be $35 round trip from here. Those who can possibly go should make the trip, for, as the late William Scott once said, "travel is a great educator, if not the greatest." J. J. B.

HOME AGAIN.

The Horticultural Trade Journal, English, notes: "Two young stalwarts who went abroad three years ago are home to see the old folks. Frank Cuthbertson, from California, son of Wm. Cuthbertson, Edinburgh, and John Page, from Chicago, son of W. H. Page, Hampton, Middx." Mr. Cuthbertson has spent the three years with C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco. Mr. Page has been with Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill.

Lawrence, Mass.—A. H. Wagland will shortly erect additional houses at his range.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Gentlemen:

During the past year I paid you $18.20 for a half inch advertisement in the Retail Florists Department of The Review. I received through this small advertisement, from January 1, 1913, to December 31, 1913, orders to the amount of $566.00. They came by mail and telegraph from New York to San Francisco and from New Orleans to Minneapolis. Since I allowed the senders 20%, the record is as follows:

Total value of orders	$566.00
Less 20% allowed senders.. .. .	113.20
Net value of orders..... .:.	453.80

Here is an addition of $453.80 in business which could not otherwise have been obtained and at an expense of only $18.20.

Since my advertisement appeared only in The Review it goes to show what the retail florists through the country lose if they do not use this medium of advertising It also goes to show that The Review is not only there with a big "R" but that it has three more big "R's" - Readers - Reliability - Results!

Yours respectfully,
J. J. Beneke

The Market.

Continued rains and cloudy weather have caused a shortage in nearly all flowers, roses being about the only stock in good supply. Carnations are over. Gladioli and snapdragons are in fairly good crop. Asters have not made their appearance as yet. Greens, with the exception of smilax, are plentiful. Business is dull, but a few funeral orders use up the cheaper grade of flowers.

Various Notes.

Mum planting is completed, and repairing and rebuilding are now in order. Several of the local florists are on their vacations. Lee Arnold, the Wyomissing grower, is spending his vacation at Sinking Springs. L. Steckler and H. C. Huesman may be seen motoring to their favorite streams in quest of the finny tribe.

Preparations have been completed for the outing of the Retail Florists' Association, July 24. Convention matters will be taken up at the association's next meeting. H. C. H.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

As in every other locality at this time of the year, the florists' business in all its branches is at a minimum. An occasional wedding or funeral enlivens the dullness among the retailers. The long spell of heat and drought has been practically broken within the last three weeks and we are now enjoying the most pleasant summer weather.

In the line of cut flowers, single tuberoses are the most prominent; they are cut in large quantities and are of first-class quality. The aster crop, of which Vick's and Semple's Branching are the principal varieties planted here, did not turn out as satisfactory with some of the growers as in other years, but some fine stock is shown. We now have two firms growing roses under glass and their stock for the coming season looks promising, being strong and clean grown. Outdoor-grown roses suffered somewhat during June, but such varieties as Pink and White Cochet, Kaiserin, Helen Gould, R. Smith and a few others are still holding their own as first-class bloomers at this time of the year, when outdoor roses are scarce. The thousands of chrysanthemums grown here every year, both under glass and outdoors, are in excellent condition, although we had adverse weather for them for some time. The present weather helps their growth wonderfully. Daisies and gladioli have practically finished blooming and the latter are replaced by northern-grown stock.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its thirtieth annual meeting July 16, at the Association of Commerce building. President P. A. Chopin and Secretary C. R. Panter were in their places and a large membership was present. The election of a president and vice-president was one of the hottest fought contests held for many years. P. A. Chopin was nominated for reelection, versus Henry Scheuermann, for president, and Mr. Chopin came out the victor by a fair margin. Elmer Farley and Harry Dresel were nominated for the vice-presidency and Mr. Farley won the honor by two votes. John Eblen, our venerable treasurer, was reëlected unanimously for his thirtieth term. C. R. Panter, our jovial and highly efficient secretary, was likewise unanimously re-elected to begin his twelfth term.

The secretary's annual report showed the financial condition of the society to be of the best, with $1,000 to its credit. The society has a membership of fifty, including most of the leading florists of the city.

Secretary Panter's resolution to stand by the original donation of $100 to the Southern States Fair, or any other fair that may grow out of the original proposition, was adopted, with a vote of confidence, also, in anything the promotors and directors of the enterprise under consideration may undertake.

Otto Abele, who recently returned from the national sængerfest held in Louisville, Ky., spoke highly in favor of the erection of a convention hall, of proper dimensions, and felt sure that in such a case the S. A. F. would be willing to come to New Orleans to hold one of its yearly conventions, thus benefiting greatly not only our city, but the whole south. His idea was included in the carried resolution.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the outing committee for its efforts to make the affair a success.

C. W. Eichling exhibited a vase of Semple's Branching asters, white, shell-pink and purple. They were of fine quality and were much admired.

After the meeting the members were the guests of the newly elected officers of the society at a banquet given at Werner's restaurant. It was a highly enjoyable affair and many a toast was drunk to the success of the officers and the society in general.

BOSTON.

The Market.

There is little to say about market conditions, other than that they are exceedingly dull. With shade temperatures of 90 degrees on several days, and excessive humidity, all life was knocked out of business. The present season sees more steamer trade than ever before in Boston's history. This added to funeral orders has given quite a little trade to the retailers. As yet the shipping trade to seashore and mountain resorts is light. There are many short-stemmed roses and these bring almost any price, from 25 cents per hundred upwards. Some really nice Shawyer, Russell, Sunburst and Killarney Queen are coming in. Quite a few new crop Hadley are arriving. This promises to be the red rose par excellence next season here. Carnations are poor and difficult to move. Sweet peas have been in short supply some days, but they are now more abundant and of good quality. They are among the most popular flowers at present. Some Queen of the Market asters are arriving and sell at $1 to $2 per hundred. Valley has been hard to sell. Double gypsophila brings twice the price of the single. The best selling gladiolus is America, but the variety most in evidence is Pink Beauty. Of these there is a glut. The name is misleading, for the color is not particularly pleasing. Several varieties of cattleyas are seen, including gigas, Dowiana and Gaskelliana, but the demand for these is light.

Horticultural Club Entertains.

The Horticultural Club had a meeting at the Parker House July 18, a lunch preceding the brief business session. In the absence of the president, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, W. J. Stewart occupied the chair. Guests from a distance included Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, John Young, of New York, and Judge E. W. Hoitt, of Nashua, N. H. Short addresses were made by Robert Craig, W. P. Rich and others, after which the party proceeded to the nurseries of R. & J. Farquhar & Co., at Roslindale, to see the display of the new Lilium myriophyllum. James Farquhar, who, I am pleased to say, is in much improved health, showed the visitors over the place, taking them thence to Dedham for an inspection of the extensive greenhouses and nurseries there.

Various Notes.

W. B. Goodenow, of Stoughton, is one of the earliest shippers of asters in quantity. He also has good sweet peas and Pink Beauty gladioli.

acres of good cleared land on Lebanon and Sylvan streets, Malden. He hopes to erect considerable glass on it next year. He is still cutting some good Richmond and Killarney roses.

The salesmen and stallholders at the Boston Flower Exchange are arranging for their annual fishing trip, to be held July 23. It promises to be more largely attended than usual.

Charles E. Evans, of Watertown, is the largest shipper of double gypsophila to the local market. This sells much better than the single form. He also has a fine lot of gladioli and sweet peas.

John R. Comley, of Bedford, is a large shipper of high grade sweet peas. Those from H. F. Calder, of Norwood, also are splendid.

The store of the Boston Cut Flower Co., on Bromfield street, is in the hands of painters and decorators, getting a thorough overhauling.

Robert Montgomery, of Natick, is building himself a fine bungalow near his greenhouses. Mrs. Montgomery has been sick for seven weeks, but is much improved. As soon as she can travel she and Mr. Montgomery will go to their summer cottage at Bastin's Island, Me.

pects to open shortly for business at another number on the same street.

Geo. H. Noyes, salesman for S. J. Goddard and W. D. Howard, is out of the market temporarily while shipments are light and is spending his time at Needham.

The Waban Rose Conservatories are sending in unusually good Russell roses, which they find makes a good summer variety. They are cutting a good many Hadley from the new plantings. Killarney Queen and Double White Killarney also are fine. Mrs. Moorfield Story, the new seedling, looks first class. Quite a number of Killarney Brilliant are planted for the coming season.

Morris Clancy, of Penn's, and Miss Dewan, the bookkeeper, are spending their vacations in New Hampshire. R. Warner, of the same store, left July 19 and will enjoy himself in New York city. B. Freeman is staying at Winthrop and Julius Fagan hopes to cover a good part of New England during his vacation.

William Sim has 200,000 gladioli in the field this season. He is cutting Pink Beauty in quantity. He is picking in a large field of Early Cory sweet corn. These were all started under glass. Of Comet tomatoes his pick is now one ton daily and his total crop under glass will be about seventy-five tons.

Henry R. Comley is the only local florist to display the new Lilium myriophyllum in pots. He is having good business at his branch summer store in Magnolia.

Visitors the last few days included Alfred Tufnail, representing Sutton & Sons, Reading, England, and James Hamilton, Warwick Neck, R. I.

Paul E. Richwagen, of Needham, has the finest America gladioli I have seen this season. These sell well, while Pink Beauty is hard to move at even $2 per hundred.

That funeral and steamer trade has been good is the report of Wax Bros.

H. A. Sim, salesman for his father, William Sim, is back from a vacation spent at Bastin's Island, Me.

W. N. Craig.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Most of the business being done now consists of funeral work, for which a good supply of stock is available, although the variety is somewhat small. Roses still remain plentiful. Some good asters are now coming in, which are taking the place of carnations for most occasions, on account of their better keeping qualities. Gladioli and lilies are still plentiful, with only a fair demand.

Greens of all kinds are a glut, only a small quantity being moved. The weather has been exceedingly hot during the last week and few stores are carrying any cut stock other than that required for immediate use, window decorations being composed mostly of ferns and potted plants, which are more lasting.

Club Outing.

The annual outing of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held at Bendels' park, Middleriver, July 20. It was the largest and most enjoyable outing ever held, over 300 persons being in attendance. A number of athletic events and games were run off, for which some

...THE...
Chrysanthemum
By Arthur Herrington
Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.: Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., June, 1915.

ACCORDING to the latest government figures, 1,302,000 acres of peas gave a crop of 7,110,000 bushels, or 5.46 bushels per acre.

ONE California product that seems to be perennially in short supply is calla bulbs. Stock of more than medium size has not been hunting a market in years.

THE California growers of Purity freesia, while their number is increasing, have again this year as many orders as they expect to be able to fill. Even of F. refracta alba there appears to be no surplus.

WHILE most American seed houses do both wholesale and retail business, Kelway & Son, in England, will try the experiment of confining themselves to the wholesale trade in seeds, turning retail inquiries over to their trade customers.

A MEETING of the stockholders of the Spokane Seed Co. has been called for August 20 at the company's place of business, 906 First avenue, Spokane, Wash. The principal business to be transacted is the voting of an increase of stock from $50,000 to $75,000.

"RECENT rains have made prospects good," writes A. W. Brill, manager of the Francis Brill Co., Hempstead, L. I., "but cabbage seed growing is a big gamble and there are so many things to contend with you never can tell what you have until you see the seed weighed up."

WITH deliveries now being made it appears that the crop of Formosa lily bulbs of forcing size is larger than was expected. Jobbers have not been overly anxious to take orders for the larger sizes, fearing inability to deliver in full, but advices accompanying early shipments have led to an easier feeling.

THE Victor Johansen Seed Co., of Los Angeles, Cal., has been incorporated by T. J. Steele, Mrs. S. Steele, Victor Johansen, Mrs. Mary Johansen and Oscar Johansen. The capital stock is $50,000, of which $10,000 is subscribed for. At a meeting of the directors of the company the principal place of business was changed from Arroyo Grande to Los Angeles.

WALTER P. STOKES announces that his business will be taken over, October 15, by a corporation to be known as the Stokes Seed Farms Co., organized under the laws of New Jersey, with headquarters at Moorestown, where a farm has been purchased and a fireproof warehouse is in course of erection. The retail business will be continued at 219 Market street, Philadelphia. The purpose is to specialize in the production and distribution of pedigreed vegetable seeds.

Mollycoddle Hypocrisy

The Germans say: "Wer nicht liebt Wein, Weib und Gesang, der bleibt ein Narr sein Leben lang." The German nation, home-loving, aggressive and powerful, sets to naught that fallacy of a drinking nation not being progressive. Our representatives (?) at the national capital, among other nonsensical measures, are fooling with the buzz-saw, attempting to force through a national prohibition law interfering with our personal liberty. Those representatives favoring such a hypocritical law, when asking for your suffrage, you should elect—to stay at home. One need but note the effect of such a fallacious law—look at those states now under state-wide prohibition—all standing still or rapidly going backwards, with their inhabitants—many of whom were the greatest and loudest shouters of prohibition—having the brown jug stowed away in the cellar or garret, or having their nips at the soda-water counter of the drug store under the guise of calisaya or other name—hypocrites of the first grade. When we claim that Horseshoe Brand Lilium Formosum are the best, we make no hypocritical boast. We do not say they will flower 100%, but do claim that Horseshoe Brand Lilium Formosum will average the highest percentage. Why buy others, when you can get the best produced? Our Formosum bulbs have just come in and are ready for delivery. Send us your order and get them for early flowering. Send for the Joy Book.

THE first freesias of the season arrived at New York, from Bermuda, July 13.

CANTALOUPE CAME CUCUMBER.

A Test Case in Tennessee.

While the trade as a body will be interested in the case of Lebow vs. Kaiser Bros., now pending retrial in the Circuit court at Knoxville, it is of special importance to the seedsmen of Tennessee for the reason that it is in the nature of a test case, the first of its kind known in the history of jurisprudence in that commonwealth.

Since the case is to become a precedent, the seed trade of Tennessee has rallied to the assistance of the defense, but the attorney for the trade interests has not seen fit to make the issue on the disclaimer, which is, perhaps, to be regretted, since it appears to be the straight line, the shortest course between the two points.

History of the Case.

Oscar D. Lebow visited the seed store of Kaiser Bros., asking for a small quantity of seed of Emerald Gem cantaloupe. His order was filled. Later Lebow made complaint that his crop turned out to be cucumbers and demanded compensation beyond the sum paid for the seed, which was refused. Lebow brought suit in a magistrate's court.

In the trial the plaintiff acknowledged that the seeds delivered were proper in form, being large, fat and yellow, and that he accepted them on their appearance as being cantaloupe seed. He swore, however, that he planted these identical seeds, that the plants proved to be cucumber and that the crop was practically worthless to him. The measure of damages claimed was the difference between what actually was realized and the sum which supposedly would have been obtained for a crop of Emerald Gem melons. The evidence for the defense showed that Kaiser Bros., in their store, on their stationery and especially on their labels, made proper use of the disclaimer as adopted some years ago by the American Seed Trade Association, but no special emphasis appears to have been put on the trade custom in this respect and the magistrate gave judgment for the plaintiff in the sum of $75 and costs. Kaiser Bros. appealed.

In the Circuit court plaintiff amended his complaint so as to aver in substance: "A plea for damages resulting from negligence or fraud in the sale of seed for the purpose of planting and producing a crop of Emerald Gem melons." On presentation of the case the judge discharged the jury and announced that he would dismiss the case. This was on Friday. On the following Monday the judge had changed his mind, recalled the jury and the trial of the case proceeded. It resulted in a judgment of $41.50 and costs. The court denied a new trial and Kaiser Bros. again appealed.

In presenting the case to the Court of Civil Appeals, A. C. Grimm, attorney

Announcement of a New Seed Firm.

STOKES SEED FARMS COMPANY

On and after October 15th business of the firm of Walter P. Stokes will be taken over by the above named company, a corporation doing business under the laws of the State of New Jersey, while retail business will still continue to be carried on at 219 Market Street, Philadelphia. A fireproof building of steel and concrete construction is now in the course of erection at Moorestown, New Jersey, where the main office and warehouse of the new firm will be located.

Stokes Seed Farms Company will with a few slight exceptions take over all of the outstanding seed contracts of Walter P. Stokes. Any slight changes which will be made will be taken care of individually.

It will be the purpose of the new firm to specialize in the production and distribution of vegetable seeds. All those who are in close touch with the situation know the enormous waste of effort and liability of error in the overloaded list of varieties which is almost universally catalogued today. In order, therefore, to put our business on a basis whereby the chance of error is reduced to a minimum, we expect to eliminate from our list all unnecessary varieties.

With the purpose of knowing the pedigree of all of the vegetable seeds sold by us, we have purchased a farm at Moorestown, New Jersey, on which we expect to raise a considerable part of our stock seed as well as conducting extensive trials. While we do propose making a vigorous effort in the direction of seed improvement, all selecting and breeding work will be done with the idea of reaching the very highest development of standard recognized types rather than the introducing of new names to further burden the list.

for the seed trade interests, filed a statement covering forty typewritten pages. Twenty-one separate and distinct errors were assigned, the first of which was: "The trial court erred in refusing to grant Kaiser Bros. a new trial upon the ground that there was no evidence to sustain the verdict." The Court of Civil Appeals reversed and remanded the case, sustaining this one assignment of error, without passing on any of the other twenty. The bearing of the disclaimer was covered in one of the unconsidered assignments of error. The case will come up for retrial in the autumn.

An Interesting Contrast.

In certain respects this case presents an interesting contrast to the celebrated Hohenadle-Buckbee case in Illinois. In that case there was no non-warranty in the contract of sale and the court upheld the claim of the plaintiff that the measure of damages should be the value of a crop of Chicago Pickling cucumber less the sum actually received for a crop of another variety. The introduction of evidence was permitted to prove the value of the ungrown crop. In Lebow vs. Kaiser Bros. the trial court sustained the objection of the defense and refused to admit evidence touching "the speculative value of an ungrown cantaloupe crop." The plaintiff was thereby obliged to shift his theory and to proceed on the idea that he was entitled to recover the cost of preparing the ground, cost of fertilizer used, cost of planting, cultivating, etc., which the jury determined to be $41.50. The authority relied on by the defense, in objecting to evidence of the possible value of a crop of Emerald Gem melons, was Hurley vs. Buchi, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 246. In the case thus cited, Buchi bought Early Rose potatoes from Hurley & Son, and a different and later variety was delivered. Buchi sued for the market value of an Early Rose potato crop less the value of the crop produced by said different and later variety. Buchi recovered a judgment in the Circuit court of Davidson county, Tennessee, for $150. Hurley & Son appealed and the Supreme court, in 1882, reversed the Circuit court and held that Buchi could only recover the difference between the value of the Early Rose potatoes purchased and the different and later variety delivered in lieu thereof, and that Buchi could not recover speculative damages.

THOSE GOVERNMENT SEEDS.

F. J. Olsan, of Ames, is vice-president of the Iowa Florists' Association and a seedsman and nurseryman as well as a florist. He never has been an admirer of the government policy of free seed distribution and this spring, when he found the congressmen were sending into Iowa seeds of the so-called Mexican fireweed, he took it up with the officials of the Iowa State College. This is the reply of Dr. L. H. Pammel, dated April 8:

I am in receipt of your recent favor in which you ask whether the Mexican fireweed is an ornamental plant. It has occurred to me for a number of years that this plant should not be distributed broadcast, inasmuch as it is making its appearance in a number of places in the state as quite a troublesome weed. I am sorry to learn from your letter that this is among the seeds distributed by congressmen.

Some years ago Congress as well as the seed merchants widely scattered the shoo-fly, which has in recent years become a troublesome weed in the Mississippi valley, and earlier than this the U. S. Department of Agriculture distributed the butter-and-eggs which in some states is now one of the unlawful weeds.

I hope that those who receive gratuitous seeds from the government will look out for some of these novelties.

CLUB ROOT ON CUCUMBERS.

I have cucumbers in a house 6 years old, in which all the vines are wilting and dying, and in another house the vines also are wilting and dying while in full bearing. The latter house is only 3 years old. What do you advise me to do, as I have plants in all and it is a heavy loss to me?

The samples sent had the worst case of club root I have seen on cucumbers in a long time and it is no wonder they are dying. You do not say whether you have been using the same soil for cucumbers each year. If you have, and have not sterilized your soil, it is not surprising that your plants are dying. You may have had a little club root last year and taken little notice of it, but once the ground is infected the spread of the disease the following season is rapid unless steam sterilization has been done. I regret there is no hope for your plants and I would advise that

LEAF-CURL ON TOMATOES.

I have a house full of tomato plants, numbering about 600, and they are just loaded with tomatoes. I trimmed them back, as they were growing fast. Now the leaves are curling up, as you can see. I have sent you a few leaves under separate cover. I am afraid I shall lose the crop. Can you tell me what the trouble is and whether I can do anything to help them? L. M.

The hot weather is responsible for the leaf-curl on your tomatoes. This will be particularly noticeable if your house is small and gets quite hot. Do not be alarmed, however, as this will not mean the loss of your crop. Ventilate freely; keep the plants well watered, but keep a dry atmosphere; give a mulch of old manure to keep the soil from drying out so rapidly, and you will find your crop will ripen satisfactorily. A light shade would be of benefit if your house is small, as it would keep the house cooler. C. W.

plant per season, which is to be considered a satisfactory yield for first-year plants, a large number of which were injured in the course of the experiment by overfeeding in the attempt to determine the maximum amount of fertilizer that might safely be used. Of these 95,013 flowers, 45,135 were Killarneys and 49,878 Brides, showing a larger production of Brides under the conditions of the experiment.

Own-Root or Grafted?

Of the flowers produced by Killarney, 21,297 were produced from own-root stock and 23,838 from grafted, showing a larger production from grafted stock. Of the Brides, similarly, 23,019 were produced from own-root stock and 26,859 from grafted stock. Results indicate, then, that in the order of production the plants rank as follows: Grafted Bride, grafted Killarney, own-root Bride, own-root Killarney.

The average length of stem of the own-root Killarneys was 10.6 inches; of grafted Killarneys, 10.5 inches; of own-root Brides, 14.6 inches, and of grafted Brides, 14.9 inches. The quality of the flowers, measured in this manner, is about the same in the Killarneys, whether own-root or grafted, and is somewhat superior in grafted Brides to own-root Brides.

The question whether it pays to grow grafted stock may be answered by the figures given above, and the average price for flowers of such quality. With grafted Killarney, for instance, the excess production over own-root stock of 960 plants was 2,541 flowers. The average wholesale price of Killarney of this quality would range around $6 per hundred; the excess production of these 960 plants would sell for $152.46 at this price—twice the difference in cost between own-root and grafted Killarney per thousand. This, of course, is for the first year after planting, alone.

With and Without Artificial Food.

Those sections to which manure alone was applied are compared in the figures given below, for the average number of flowers produced per sixteen plants, with those sections to which eight pounds of dried blood, two pounds of acid phosphate and two pounds of potassium sulphate per hundred square feet were added, and with sections to which thirty-two pounds of dried blood with amounts of acid phosphate and potassium sulphate as named in the previous sections had been applied.

Fertilizer	Quantities Killarney own-root	Quantities Killarney grafted	Quantities Bride own-root	Quantities Bride grafted
No commercial fertilizer	327.4	389	325	388.5
8 lbs dried blood, 2 lbs. acid phosphate, 2 lbs. potassium sulphate	349.7	410.4	391	428.8
32 lbs. dried blood, 2 lbs. acid phosphate, 2 lbs. potassium sulphate	391	383.6	339.3	405.6

These figures show that thirty-two pounds of dried blood per hundred square feet is excessive for all the roses except Killarney own-root. These plants have a smaller root system than Killarney grafted, and probably this is the reason they produce more flowers with heavy applications of dried blood in contrast to the grafted stock.

Good Results from Acid Phosphate.

On the whole, it is inadvisable to apply more than eight pounds of dried blood per hundred square feet. On the other hand, applications of acid phosphate up to eight pounds per hundred square feet, the largest amount used in the experiment, gave increasingly large numbers of flowers as the application was increased, showing that the roses responded to applications of this fertilizer. No benefit was observed from applications of potassium sulphate, as was the case with carnations also.

These results lead to the recommendation of commercial fertilizers in the following amounts per hundred square feet, for first-year roses: Dried blood, eight pounds; acid phosphate, eight pounds. Experiments are being carried on with still heavier applications of acid phosphate; when they are completed, the advisability of heavy applications of this fertilizer will be determined.

Experiments have been made during the year 1913-14 in regard to the use of sulphate of ammonia in place of dried blood on roses. It is found to be a satisfactory source of plant food, but much more difficult to use successfully, since roses are particularly susceptible to overfeeding with it. No experiments have yet been made with nitrate of soda. Acid phosphate was used during the experiment as a source of phosphorus. It is quite probable that finely ground, steamed bone meal could have been used in equal amounts with as good results, although its value was not tested.

When to Apply Dried Blood.

The dried blood should not be applied in full amount at the time of preparation of the soil, but one-fourth should be mixed with the soil and manure at this time, followed by three further applications as top-dressings during the season, at times when the roses are coming into heavy crop. On no account should application be made during the off season, or the period of little growth, during the dark days of winter. Care should be taken not to scratch the dried blood into the soil deeper than one-half inch, as deeper cultivation will cause the breaking of many small roots, and dropping of the older leaves as a result of the disturbance of the root system.

The results given in this summary were obtained by applying fertilizer to the type of soil known as the brown silt loam, common throughout the corn belt. On account of the moderate amount of dried blood recommended, and the small tendency of acid phosphate to produce injury from overfeeding, these amounts are undoubtedly safe for use on any Illinois soil. The fertilizers recommended will supply the elements lacking in most soils also, with the exception of those peaty and sandy soils of northern Illinois which have been shown to be deficient in potassium.

The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy

PRINCESS

20—The New Upright Pansy

This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing, and extremely weather-proof, enduring many storms without damage to its flower. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture, on heavy stems carried well above the foliage. Attractive by the brilliancy of its colors.

500 seeds, 25c; 1000, 50c; ¼ oz., $2.50; 1 oz., $10.00.

34—Bronze—Brown and copper shades mixed.
36—Fancy—Rich colors, mostly margined.
38—Mme. Perret—Red and wine shades.
40—Zebra—Fine striped mixture.
42—Adonis—Light blue, white center.
44—Black—Almost coal black.
46—Black with bronze center.
48—Lord Beaconsfield—Purple shaded white.
50—Bronze—Beautiful bronze.
52—Bronze with yellow center.
54—Velvet Brown with yellow center.
56—Havana Brown.
58—Havana Brown with yellow center.
60—Cardinal—Curled, bright red, dark blotch.

seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

22—KENILWORTH STRAIN—The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are from 3½ to 4 inches; it is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings, rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.

24—KENILWORTH SHOW—An extra fine strain of large flowers; the immense flowers are of circular form and great substance; a beautiful collection of colors and markings.

26—KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE—Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower or for exhibition purposes, for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 inches long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well.

28—MASTERPIECE—A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance, large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stem.

30—GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES—A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich velvety colors, reds are particularly conspicuous; the petals being distinctly marked with three or five large dark blotches.

NEW SEED NOW READY.

All sorts and mixtures, except the new Pansy Princess, are $5.00 per oz., $1.25 per ¼-oz.; 5000 seeds, $1.00; trade packet of 1000 seeds, 25 cents; any 5 pkts., $1.00. Please order by number.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

Ideal weather conditions may have had something to do with business last week; at any rate, it is a pleasant fact that both weather and business have been excellent. On Sunday, July 12, the thermometers registered 99 degrees, which is the highest temperature that Spokane has known for many years. Splendid rains have fallen regularly, assuring prosperity for the farmers and the whole country as well. There has been a notable increase of business, both in funeral work and for other affairs. The everyday, over-the-counter trade has been good. The shipping trade has kept many of the florists at their stores far into the night.

Various Notes.

Philip Weil, representing the C. C. Pollworth Co., called on the trade last week. He reports the business situation throughout his territory as being most encouraging and the prospects for the coming season unusually good.

L. B. Hill spent Sunday, July 12, at Spirit Lake, Idaho, at the cottage of F. A. Chase. Bathing conditions were ideal and he has a splendid coat of tan and blisters to show for it.

Adolph Donart, of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, and Mrs. Van Doren, of Post Falls, Idaho, were business visitors last week. They report the summer planting at their respective establishments to be progressing nicely. L. B. H.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Again the mainstay of business has been funeral work and it has been of exceptionally high class. In all the stores an unusual amount of activity has been observed and it is helping July so much that it will shorten the summer dullness. Many of the retailers are on their vacations, but in the wholesale houses shipping business is above the average, owing to the cool weather. Rain in July is unusual in California, but there were nice showers July 16, that laid the dust and freshened up the atmosphere. Orchids and lilies of the valley have been in better demand, the price keeping up well. Outdoor roses are falling off in quality, but this does not seem to help the price of the indoor crop. Some growers are slaughtering prices, while others are attempting to hold them up, so that practically there is no firm price and it is a case of get what you can. Carnations keep up fairly well, while the supply of outdoor flowers generally is good. Growers are getting in line with Boston ferns again and the price is down. Sweet peas are a little less plentiful and not quite up to the high standard of a week or two ago. Asters and dahlias are coming in freely and there is still a good supply of gladioli.

Various Notes.

Fred Hills and wife have been on a trip to San Francisco, combining business with pleasure.

I sold over 35,000 chrysanthemum plants this season on my 1-inch ad in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. Of course that paid me well and I am very pleased. You will hear from me again as soon as I can work up stock.—Frank Wilhelm, R. F. D. No. 6, Los Angeles, Cal., June 13, '14.

J. R. Fotheringham, representing F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.; S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia; Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O., and other well known firms, has been calling on the trade during the last week.

The Freeman-Lewis Co. reports good business, considering the season. C. Lewis leaves for his vacation at once, but this he will spend as an actor with a moving picture concern. Mr. Lewis' histrionic abilities are well known; we have all seen him exercising them on a recalcitrant customer. We have also heard rumors of his success when his basso-profundo voice was added to his splendid stage presence and his Adonis-like features, but we are all anxious to know how he will come out when the searchlight of the "movies" is turned upon the latter and the persuasive tones of the former are not heard. Mr. Freeman has chosen the less exciting pastime of deer hunting as a respite from business cares.

Walter Armacost started July 16 for a five weeks' vacation in the hills, taking Mrs. Armacost and family along. Mrs. Armacost has been on the sick list for some time, but is feeling much better now and doubtless her vacation will set her up in health.

Frank Lichtenberg says business was slow the beginning of the month, but good funeral work has been plentiful of late. I found everyone busy when calling, some pieces of valley and orchids looking fine.

Albert Knopf and F. Borden, of the Redondo Floral Co., both say they have to cut their vacations short this year, owing to the stress of business.

Howard & Smith had a great deal of good work for the Henderson Hayward funeral. Among the pieces was a beautiful spray of orchids and valley.

H. W. Turner met with an accident to his car July 15 on Stephenson street in a press of traffic. His front axle was twisted, but no one was hurt.

Nelson & Young are running the store formerly run by T. F. M. Williamson, at Figueroa and Washington streets. They are building a lath house back of the store and carrying out several improvements inside which will enable them to run it as a first-rate, up-to-date store.

Leon A. De Stoute left here July 11 for a buying trip in Europe in the interests of Howard & Smith, E. Rust and the Germain Seed & Plant Co.

Miss Rohr, who has been out of business for a short time, has opened a store in connection with C. Winsel's nursery, on Washington street.

C. A. Brunger has decided to put his new purple sweet pea, Monrovia, on the market. He has not a large quantity of seed, but what he has is carefully selected, for Mr. Brunger is an old florist and knows the value of keeping only the best. The color is one that appeals to everyone and it will be especially suitable for funeral work.

C. Gutting, of the Superior Nursery Co., has returned from a hunting and

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The absence of a large proportion of the flower-buying public makes trade conditions quiet at this season, although the retail trade compares favorably with that of former years. July is always a month of low sales. On the other hand, around San Francisco bay it is a month of flower profusion. Our stores have never looked more attractive. Among the new items this week are Lilium rubrum and Lilium auratum. They are excellent commodities for window attractions and are selling at top-notch prices this week. In potted plants, gloxinias and a few Hydrangea paniculata are offered. Aside from these, there is little or nothing offered in flowering plants. Cattleya gigas is not coming in as plentifully as heretofore, but more Cattleya Mendellii are seen. There is a great premium on phalænopsis, as the June brides cut materially into the supplies. Dahlias are more or less shown in the stores. Fine scabiosas of the new varieties, and gladioli, are common. Of greenhouse flowers there is an ample supply. Roses are par excellence; a great many Beauties, Killarneys, Marylands and Ulrich Brunners are available.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, at Sachem hall, proved to be one of unusual interest. Professor Smith, of the University of California, lectured on "Plant Pathology." This line of work has aroused considerable interest among Pacific coast growers and for that reason the address proved unusually instructive to the members of the society. Another interesting feature of the evening was a long spike of Lapageria rosea exhibited by the MacRorie-McLaren Co. There were twenty flowers on the spike, all of them perfect. The exhibitors were awarded ninety points for the exhibit. A. Clemo and Karl Mueller were applicants for membership.

F. R. Hills, of the Hills Nursery, Los Angeles, is visiting around San Francisco. He is accompanied by Mrs. Hills and their son. Mr. Hills has made himself known by the ferns he grows and Mrs. Hills is well versed on ferns and plants in general.

Charles Deusner, of Pasadena, is stay-

MONROVIA

For several years this has been the best seller on the Los Angeles and other local markets, and I have decided to offer it to the trade as long as the stock lasts at $5.00 per ounce.

Monrovia begins to flower when only about one foot high and continues to bloom profusely until it reaches 8 feet high outdoors. It will make a splendid greenhouse variety, as the buds do not drop under any conditions. The color is a deep purple outside, inside heliotrope, and it is unquestionably the finest winter-blooming purple in existence. The seed has been carefully re-selected from large pods only. It was gathered in April and May in the foothill section, and is consequently mature and of high germinating power. It is an exceptionally stout grower and throws long stemmed flowers all through the season, four to six flowers to the stem. This offer will be withdrawn as soon as present stock is exhausted.

OUR MR. RICHARDS.

So many people in the trade are personally acquainted with The Review's representative at Los Angeles that there is interest in the accompanying illustration, showing H. R. Richards and his family. SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

There is the usual summer stagnation in the cut flower business and although the stores are showing quantities of fine flowers, there is little trade. The unusually large number of funerals the last few weeks has had a tendency to relieve matters somewhat and a few weddings have added their quota. Roses are plentiful yet, and carnations are selling cheaper than ever before. The department stores are the principal sellers of them, and the demoralizing effect of the cutthroat business is far-reaching. As more carnations than usual have been carried over, meeting a decreased demand has anything but a stimulating effect. Gladioli are now appearing in quantity from outside; several growers forced some, but with poor results, so far as profit to themselves counts. Asters are also coming in and there are more early chrysanthemums than usual at this season. The potlatch, which took place last week, helped a few florists with automobile decorations, etc., but for this class of work the prices are hardly on a par with the labor involved.

Various Notes.

There has been an influx of florists and gardeners from San Francisco during the last week, who report work at the fair grounds so far advanced as to no longer need their attention.

A movement is on foot to close the flower stores at 6:30 p. m. during the summer months and at 12:30 p. m. on Sundays all the year around. This move has met with the approval of most of the trade, and when a few of the recalcitrant ones can be got into line, no doubt these hours will be adopted.

J. A. Sahli hospitably entertained a party of Seattle florists at Kent on a recent Sunday. He always had a reputation as a host and from all accounts he is not belying it since his migration to Kent.

Miss Olive M. Denny is now gracing the establishment of the H. Harrington Co., on Fourth avenue.

There has recently been a shake-up in the Hollywood Gardens store. Patrick Sullivan now has charge of the floral end of it and if geniality and popularity count, his promotion should be advantageous to the business.

Miss Burns, of the Burns Floral Co., has been entertaining several friends from the east during the last week.

Rosaia Bros. have been busy with automobile decorations, for which their large supplies of own-grown flowers have come in handy.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday, July 14, with just enough to form a quorum. Since there was no important business on hand, it was resolved to dispense with the August and September meetings and to hold the annual election of officers at the meeting on the second Tuesday of October.

H. B. Burdett is now "mine host of the tea garden." He has inaugurated an establishment for the dispensation of the cup that cheers but not inebriates at his nursery grounds, on First and Denny way, and if polite attention and the smile that won't come off don't attract the flower buying public, the chef is there with a large commissariat to supply the needs of the hungry and moderately thirsty.

Ivan Risdon is completing a new greenhouse at his plant at Brighton and has leased the whole premises to Ralph Richardson, who also rents the adjoining Scott property.

Growers of cucumbers have had a pretty fair season and prices are now much better than usual so late in the summer. Shipments east and north help to keep up prices. Tomatoes also have netted fair returns and for first-class greenhouse stock there is still a good price and strong demand, notwithstanding the large influx of California stock.

Carnation growers are busy filling their benches with the young plants, which have made fine growth in the field this season. T. W.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THOSE who are interested in tree surgery will find an excellent illustrated article on the subject in the 1913 Yearbook, published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. It is by J. F. Collins, forest pathologist.

ARTICLES of incorporation have been filed by the M. H. Harman Nursery Co., of Geneva, N. Y. The capital stock is fixed at $20,000, and the incorporators are T. J. Smith, M. H. Harman and T. C. Carson, all of Geneva.

TENNESSEE nurserymen in the neighborhood of Memphis are having difficulty in keeping their stock from burning up, as there has not been enough rain to wet the ground since May 4, according to the report of Chas. Adams, who has a large nursery and landscape business in Memphis.

THE "Morris House," built over forty years ago by the late Judge Gov. Morris of clear white pine, which has served as the office building of the Greening Nursery Co., at Monroe, Mich., for the last several years, has been removed to another part of the premises to make way for the new modern office building to be erected on Monroe street by the Greening Nursery Co.

FIRE AT GRAHAM NURSERY.

Fire of unknown origin completely destroyed the barn and sheds of the Graham Nursery Co., at Mechanicsville, Ia., on the evening of July 10, together with their contents. Three horses, valuable for their training in nursery work, were burned, as well as machinery, packing, etc. The barn was 75x200 and the other buildings of good size. The total loss is estimated at from $6,000 to $10,000, with only partial insurance.

TEXAS NURSERYMEN TO MEET.

The midsummer meeting of the Texas Nurserymen's Association will be held at College Station July 27, 28 and 29. The main object of the meeting will be the consideration of the establishment of a state botanical garden and arboretum. The program of the opening session, at 3 p. m., July 27, is as follows:

Opening address, President John S. Kerr, Sherman.
"A Texas Botanical Garden and Arboretum in Developing Our Native Flora," round table discussion, led by F. T. Ramsey, Austin.
"The Marketing Problem," J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie.
"Improvement of Nursery Conditions in Texas," discussion in short talks.

The banquet in the mess hall July 28, 6 to 8:30 p. m., will be in the nature of an open conference of the various committees on the state botanical garden and arboretum. F. T. Ramsey will act as toastmaster, and the following program will be presented:

"Conservation of Our Texas Flora," Prof. E. J. Kyle, College Station.
"Field Observations—Worthy Native Plants I Have Found," Dr. I. M. Lewis, Austin.
"Why Not Love Our Native Flora Best?" E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney.
"Botanical Studies a Source of Pleasure," Dr. O. M. Ball, College Station.
"The Experiment Station's Part in Conserving Our Native Flora," Prof. B. Youngblood, College Station.
"Practical Ways and Means of Securing the Desired Ends," Prof. Charles H. Winkler, Austin, and Prof. Wilmon Newell, College Station.
Discussion.

You may discontinue our advertisement, as we are through with our spring shipments, but we will give you another order for fall, as THE RESULTS from the one for spring HAVE BEEN VERY SATISFACTORY.—Franklin Davis Nursery Co., Baltimore, Md., May 19, 1914.

NURSERY TRADE'S DISCLAIMER.

The nursery trade is beginning to feel the need of a disclaimer that will stand in law.

For years the policy of the trade has been more in the direction of making good than in seeking to avoid responsibility, but of late the necessity has arisen of guarding against legal harassment. The trade as a body still follows the replacement practice in spite of the fact that the need for replacement usually comes through the operation of causes over which the nurseryman has no control. But replacement is one thing and claims for damages are quite another. Damage suits for loss of crop, use of land, labor, etc., through alleged delivery of untrue or diseased stock steadily become more numerous.

Years ago the seed trade adopted a uniform disclaimer, but nurserymen are not yet able to set up, as a defense, such a trade custom—there is no disclaimer in general use. But nursery-men's stationery, catalogues and labels are beginning to carry such a non-warranty, not uniform, as the nurseryman thinks will act as a bar to unjust claims. For instance, here is the disclaimer that appears on the bottom of the letter-head of a leading Rochester nursery company:

All quotations are for immediate acceptance, subject to stock being unsold, and without liability to us should injury befall the stock from frost, hail, fire, or other causes beyond our control.

We aim to keep our varieties true to name and will replace on proper proof, all that prove otherwise, or refund the purchase price, but we do not give any warranty, expressed or implied, and it is mutually agreed between the purchaser and ourselves, that we shall not at any time be held responsible for a greater amount than the purchase price.

In this connection the trade will do well to note that in various states it has been held that a disclaimer of this character printed at the top, bottom or on the back of a letter-head is not a part of any contract which may result from the correspondence; that to be binding the disclaimer clause must be included between the salutation and signature of a letter. This point was called to the attention of the seed trade some years ago, by an article in The Review, and the American Seed Trade Association appointed a committee of leading seedsmen to investigate with counsel. The result was that practically all seedsmen's stationery now bears the disclaimer printed directly below where the address is written.

The Market.

Nothing exciting has transpired in the market during the last few weeks. Business is moving along in the usual summer manner and were it not for the large amount of funeral work being done by the stores, the doors could well be locked and everyone take a holiday. New crop American Beauty roses made their appearance last week; this means that there has been a continuous production of this flower for twelve months, as old crop Beauties are still on the market. In this hot climate it is unusual for carnations to last over June

PETERSON NURSERY

30 N. La Salle St. CHICAGO

15 in any kind of shape, but this year, due to heavy feeding and watering, several of the local growers have been able to continue their crops, and the stock that is coming in is quite good. Gladioli and Easter lilies are plentiful and are in fair demand, due to their good keeping qualities. Gladiolus America is particularly good and is popular. Asters are more plentiful and find a welcome place in funeral work, supplanting carnations to a large extent.

Various Notes.

I. Rosnosky, of the H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, visited Washington last week on his return trip from Virginian cities. Milton Alexander, representing Lion & Co., of New York, also called at the stores, and Miss Peterson, daughter of John Peterson, of Westwood, Cincinnati, O., was also a recent visitor.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Gude, their children, Ernest, Granville, Amelia and Louise, Mrs. A. Loeffler and Harry Pritchard were members of the party which participated in the annual excursion of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, of which Mr. Gude is the president. More than 100 business and professional men and their families made the trip, which included a visit to Norfolk, Old Point Comfort, Fortress Monroe and other near-by historical places in Virginia. The trip was made in a chartered steamship.

George H. Cooke has returned from a pleasant and successful fishing trip down the Potomac river.

A special program is being prepared for the next meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington, according to President George H. Cooke, and the officers and individual members seem to be outdoing themselves this year in making the meetings entertaining. At this meeting the plans for attendance at the Boston convention will be completed and a start made in the preparation for the flower show to be held here in November.

Fred H. Kramer has returned from a 500-mile automobile trip through Virginia and West Virginia, which included a visit to the famous battlegrounds of that section. C. L. L.

FIELD-GROWN CARNATION PLANTS

This is not the ordinary run of surplus stock, the leftovers from a grower's own planting—it is stock grown by a specialist on purpose to sell to the trade. Everybody knows that our cut blooms are the finest it is possible to produce, and that our business in rooted cuttings has reached enormous proportions because of the fine quality of the stock we ship—well, these field-grown plants are of the same high quality as the rest of our product. They were grown specially to win your approval.

FIELD-GROWN PLANTS OF CARNATIONS EVERYBODY NEEDS

JOY! We have been handling it for a little over two years and ought to know something about it. It's a real red. It is the kind of Carnation that proves the florists' friend. Shipped over a distance, it will look as good on arrival as when sent. This feature appeals to us because we know what it means to the man who is depending on us. JOY!

JOY has been described by Mr. E. H. Blameuser, of Niles Center, Ill.—the man who raised it—as "a strong grower, early, very free and continuous bloomer, with strong calyx and good stem." That should be good enough for anybody.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

The Market.

This city is now in the midst of the dull summer season and the trade is having little to do in the way of business. Florists are glad of the opportunity to rest after the strenuous season just past, and a large number of them have already left for the lakes or gone on trips to acquire the needed energy for the fall season. Stock in general is plentiful and some trouble is experienced in keeping the cut cleaned up.

Carnations are playing out, as the growers of this stock are throwing out plants every day and are busy replanting for the new crop. Asters are beginning to make their appearance on the market and will soon help to fill the void left by the carnations. Roses are still arriving in fine shape and the cut is selling well. Prices are not so high as they might be, but are good for this time of year.

Lilies are plentiful and while the stock is fine, the sales on this stock are not what they should be. Outdoor stock is still here, especially sweet peas. The dry weather, it is expected, will probably seriously affect the crop.

Club Picnic.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club held its annual picnic Wednesday, July 15, at Keipper's park. The park is a beautiful spot and those who attended the outing had a most pleasant time. The afternoon was given over to games of various sorts, in which the old joined with the younger generation and were quite enthusiastic. The evening was devoted to dancing, and the floor was always occupied. So far as we know, there were no casualties other than a lot of sore muscles the day after. These were much in evidence. The prize-winners in the field events were as follows:

Men's race—E. Haasch, first; F. Mack, second; J. Euring, third.
Potato race, ladies—Miss Halliday, first; Miss Schneider, second.
Boys' race—Victor Hunkel, first; Wm. Kroseberg, second.
Girls' race—Arline Robinson, first; Gertrude Helwig, second.
Girls' race—E. Knoblauch, first; Miss Stanley, second.
Sack race, men—E. Haasch, first; H. Kummer, second.
Tug of war—Won by team captained by E. Wilke.

HYDRANGEA OTAKSA
Extra large specimens for July and August flowering

We have some of the largest, finest and most perfect specimens of hydrangeas in half-barrels that we have ever seen. Plants are just coming into bloom, and are beautiful, symmetrical specimens covered with blooms, each plant having from one hundred to two hundred flowers. We have over three hundred of these fine plants in shape for immediate shipment, and every plant is a perfect specimen. There is nothing so magnificent for summer decoration as these large hydrangeas. They are very showy.

$7.50, $10.00 and $15.00 each—according to size and number of blooms.

WINTER-FLOWERING ROSES

If you have not secured all the stock that you can use for planting for winter-flowering, we still have a very fine stock of the following varieties, which we can offer in perfect condition, ready for immediate shipment. Stock is gilt-edged in every way—extra strong, heavy plants from 4-inch pots. If you can use any, we will be glad to quote low rates. Write us the number you can use and we will quote by return mail.

KILLARNEY Brilliant, Killarney Queen, Pink Killarney, American Beauty, Lady Hillingdon, Richmond, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Mme. Cecile Brunner, or Mignon, or Sweetheart.

FERNS

There is nothing better for summer use than the fine varieties of NEPHROLEPIS. We offer a nice stock of the following varieties, well established plants ready for immediate shipment:

Nephrolepis elegantissima (The Tarrytown Fern), 3½-inch, 25c each; 6-inch, 50c each; 8-inch, $1.00 each.
Nephrolepis magnifica, 3½-inch, 25c each.
Nephrolepis muscosa, 3½-inch, 25c each; 5-inch, 50c each.
Nephrolepis Harrisii, 6-inch, 50c each; 12-inch, very large plants, $5.00 each.
Nephrolepis Bostoniensis, 6-inch, 50c each; 12-inch, very large plants, $5.00 each.
Pteris Wimsetti multiceps—a fine hardy fern—3½-inch, 15c each.
Small Ferns for Fern Pans. A fine assortment, 2¼-inch, $4.00 per 100.

F. R. PIERSON CO., Tarrytown-on-Hudson, NEW YORK

GERANIUMS

WE HAVE approximately three-quarters of a million Geraniums in 2 and 3-inch pots, ready for immediate shipment, for those who want to have winter-blooming plants—and there is a growing demand for nice 4-inch plants in bloom all winter.

We are now booking orders for fall and winter delivery. Do you think it pays you to bother with your own stock when you can get good 2-inch plants next winter at $18.50 per 1000, just when you want them and in the right proportion of varieties to suit your demand? It is our business to save you this trouble; we grow them by the millions. A personal inspection of our establishment invited.

SPECIAL—You will have to have Maryland and Scarlet Bedder next season, or not have the best.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The weather has been quite warm during the last week; business in general is the same as at last writing. Trade is getting a little slacker, however, as the summer advances. Roses are getting smaller, with few exceptions. Russell is still fine, as are Ward and While Killarney. Carnations are quite small at present. Harrisii lilies are excellent, but the demand is not strong.

Various Notes.

There has been a discussion about the summer display windows. Some florists contend that an attractive display window is not essential after 6 p. m. and on Sundays, while others believe that, like department store windows, florists' show windows should always be attractive, at any hour of the day or night. Anderson's, Palmer's two stores and Stroh's Quality Shop approve strongly of good display windows at night, for they are right in the heart of the city.

Vacation days are here and all the stores have two or more employees away on their vacations each week. Some stores give their employees half holidays through July and August.

The downtown stores have been busy with funeral work during the last week.

The writer on his recent trip to New York city found trade exceedingly quiet there.

Wallace Eiss is going to spend his vacation in the Canadian northwest. He will travel alone this year, for he feels the need of absolute rest and he cannot get that traveling with a party.

Harold Brookins will spend his vacation with the boy scouts in their encampment.

S. A. Anderson had a clever summer window display recently. In the center of a round lily pond was placed a huge phœnix palm, from the fronds of which were suspended baskets filled with sweet peas, orchids, daisies, etc., forming graceful curves. It was the most unusual window in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Lingruen, of the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, O., were in town last week. They expressed themselves as much pleased with Buffalo and its many attractions. E. C. A.

FIELD-GROWN
CARNATION PLANTS.

This is not the ordinary run of surplus stock, the leftovers from a grower's own planting—it is stock grown by a specialist on purpoose to sell to the trade. Exerybody knows that our cut blooms are the finest it is possible to produce, and that our business in rooted cuttings has reached enormous proportions because of the fine quality of the stock we ship—well, these field-grown plants are of the same high quality as the rest of our products. They were grown specially to win YOUR approval.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating eqüipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

STEAM FOR TWO HOUSES.

I have two greenhouses, each 25 x 100, six feet high to the eaves and twelve feet high to the ridge. The houses run east and west, with the boiler shed at the west end. The beds are all solid and there are three of them in each house. What would be the most convenient and economical way to pipe these houses for steam heat, using 1¼-inch pipe? I wish to maintain a temperature of 60 to 70 degrees. The houses are located on a small elevation in the central part of Iowa and are exposed to a good deal of the cold breezes.

F. J. O. & S.

I would suggest that you run a 2½-inch flow pipe about two feet below the ridge and carry back the coils on the walls, although some of them might be on the sides of the beds. If a temperature of 60 degrees in the coldest weather would answer, only twelve 1¼-inch returns will be needed, but if it is necessary to keep up a temperature of 70 degrees at all times, at least fourteen returns will be required.

THE COAL MARKET.

Earlier in the summer it was confidently predicted by some of the principal authorities in the coal trade that there would be a substantial improvement in business not later than the first part of July, but the prophets appear to have been too optimistic. Though July is nearing its end, the long heralded improvement is not yet visible. Disappointed in their expectations, the coal reporters do not venture now to offer any more cheerful opinion than that actual buying is light and any improvement that is discernible is mainly sentimental, or "psychological," as President Wilson might say.

The coal men not only take a gloomy view of the present situation, but are despondent with reference to the prospects for the autumn trade. The trouble in the fall, they think, will not be lack of demand for coal, but lack of facilities for meeting the demand. The evil that they dread is congestion of traffic and a consequent coal famine. Unless there is a sudden awakening in the market, so as to dispose of a vast quantity of coal in the next few weeks, it is feared that the means of transportation in the fall will be totally inadequate to the task of delivering the coal and other commodities that will then be wanted. The railroad companies, it is said, have lately been neglecting the maintenance of their equipment, and would have difficulty in supplying enough engines, cars and other requisites for even an ordinary amount of traffic, not to speak of the extraordinarily heavy traffic that may be required for the satisfactory movement of the expected bumper farm crops and belated coal shipments.

Such is the coal men's warning of probable future trouble. Let us hope it is only a false alarm, but perhaps we might as well prepare for the worst by seeing that our coal bins are full.

As to the smokeless coal market at Chicago, attention is drawn to the important fact that "the circular price on mine-run will advance August 1. Up to now the mine-run price has been $1.25. August 1 it will be advanced to $1.40. The trade is coming to appreciate that the major operators can maintain their circular price. Those retail dealers who have been holding off from buying, but who want to get advantage of $1.25 circular, have been placing orders rather freely within the last week. It is expected the last part of the month will develop a handsome business."

PIPING IN TENNESSEE.

Please give me the address of the manufacturers of the Imperial boiler. Please let me know, also, how many 2-inch pipes would be needed to heat a greenhouse 28 x 50. The area of glass in the roof is 1,700 square feet; in the ends, 250 square feet. F. C.

The Imperial heaters are manufactured by the Utica Heater Co., Utica, N. Y.

As neither the temperature desired for the greenhouse nor the class of plants to be grown is stated in the letter, I am not able to give a definite answer to the question about the piping of the house. As a rule, greenhouses are either heated to about 50 degrees for such plants as carnations or to 60 degrees for roses. For 50 degrees in your part of Tennessee I would use three 2½-inch flow pipes and nine 2-inch returns, and for 60 degrees the same number of flow pipes should be used with twelve 2-inch returns. After reaching the end of the house near the boiler the returns can be united into three 2½-inch main returns. The 2½-inch flows and returns can be connected with the heater; or, if more convenient and if openings of that size are provided, these can be united so that there will be a 3-inch main flow pipe and a main return of the same size connecting them with the heater.

Give the flow pipes a slight fall from a point nearly over the boiler to the farther end of the house and connect the expansion tank by means of a 1-inch pipe to the highest point of the flow. This will do away with the necessity for using air valves.

PIPING NOT SATISFACTORY.

Will you kindly inform me how I can heat a greenhouse 20 x 110 and twelve feet to the ridge? It runs north and south and has concrete side walls four feet high. The boiler room is at the north end of the house. A hot water heating system has already been installed, but it does not heat satisfactorily. All the pipes are 2-inch and are underneath the benches. There are two pipes under each of the side benches and four under the middle bench. The side benches are four feet two inches wide; the middle bench is seven feet wide. The house is partitioned off thirty feet from the boiler room. I want a temperature of 60 degrees at the boiler end of the house and 50 degrees in the other part. The location is the eastern part of Washington state.

L. H.

There is nothing in the letter of inquiry which gives any idea of the cause of the trouble with the present heating system. Ordinarily, when the boiler is so located that it is entirely below the level of the return pipes, there is no difficulty about securing a circulation. The usual outside temperature is not given, but as there are few points in eastern Washington where the mercury drops to zero I shall consider that to be the minimum temperature. The amount of radiation now in the house should give a temperature of 50 degrees, but it is possible that the arrangement is such that the flow pipes are overtaxed, or that the top of the heater is above the level of the returns.

I would advise the use of three 2½-inch flow pipes, placing one upon each wall plate and the other two feet below the ridge. At the south end of the house connect the flow pipes with six 2-inch returns, arranged in three coils under the benches. This will be sufficient for 50 degrees, and for 60 degrees use two additional returns under the middle bench. These should be connected with the middle flow pipe by means of a 2-inch pipe dropped down from the main near the partition. Unless the top of the boiler is below the level of the returns, I would suggest the use of some kind of mercury generator, by which it will be possible to raise the boiling point of the water and thus help the circulation. This can be added at any time, as it is connected to the pipe leading to the expansion tank.

POOR DRAFT.

I wish to get a little information in regard to my greenhouse chimney. It is thirty-six feet high from where the smoke pipe enters. The opening is 14 x 18 inches. The grate surface of the boiler is 2 x 5 feet. The chimney gives me a back draft at times and I have found it necessary to use a forced draft at all times; that is to say, with the ash pit door opened. This causes a waste of fuel and I wish to correct the trouble. There is no building near to interfere with the draft. Will you kindly let me know how much higher it would be necessary to build the chimney to get good results?

F. C. J.

From the data given I am not able to determine just what causes the difficulty. The chimney is twenty-five per cent larger in cross section than is generally used for ten square feet of grate. While a slightly greater height would doubtless improve the draft, it would be advisable not to make the change until you have examined the boiler carefully to ascertain whether there is something either about the boiler itself or its connection with the chimney which would account for the poor draft.

Of course the size of the chimney should depend to some extent upon the kind of fuel, the size of the openings in the grate bars and the connection of the boiler with the chimney. For the smoke flue connecting the boiler with the chimney, I would want a diameter of fourteen inches for a grate and stack of the size mentioned. Although it would not seem necessary to have a chimney any higher than thirty-six feet,

CLEVELAND.

A party of Cleveland growers motored to Rocky River, O., July 17 to visit W. J. Kramer and have a look at his asters. They found 30,000 plants in fine shape, being almost in full bloom. Mr. Kramer had just picked 4,000 blooms before the party arrived. The quality of the flowers is unusually fine for this time of year. The Pink Perfection and White Perfection run up to four and even five inches in diameter. He has an Ivory strain in pink, white and lavender that resembles the old, popular Queen of the Market except that the flowers are larger, more full and also earlier. The illustration in this issue shows Mr. Kramer at the head of the line of visitors. The variety at their feet is White Perfection.

At the meeting of the Cleveland Florists' Club Monday evening, July 13, arrangements were completed for the annual outing, which is to be held July 22 at Puritas Springs park. The club also completed its plans for the convention and show of the American Gladiolus Society, which is to be held here the second week in August at the Hollenden hotel.

Henry Eickhoff has obtained a permit to erect a greenhouse at 2806 East Seventy-third street. The cost is to be about $1,000.

The Market.

Business among the retailers has been about normal during the last week and nearly everybody is cleaning up, renovating and changing around preparatory to the new season. As it is the vacation period, numerous vacancies are found in the stores.

Various Notes.

Michael Regan has severed his connection with S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., at Westerly, and taken a position at Cambridge, Mass.

William H. Tarbox, Rhode Island's "dahlia king," is slowly convalescing after a severe illness, at his home in West Greenwich.

Otto W. Olson recently resigned his position with the Quidnick Greenhouses, at Quidnick, and was succeeded by Claude W. Whitford, of Anthony, R. I.

M. Pollock is now well established in her new store, at 68 Franklin street, having recently moved there from 4 Franklin street.

Joseph Rosenthal, with S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., Westerly, has returned from a trip to New York and Newark.

William Pratt is erecting a new greenhouse, 40x100, at Longmeadow, to be used for carnations.

John Meekin, formerly in the employ of A. W. Vose, at Woonsocket, is now foreman at E. A. Chipman's greenhouses, in the same city.

The Hoxsie Nurseries are shipping large quantities of field-grown gladioli to this market, their Pink Beauty being the present leader.

The Greystone Horticultural Society held a sweet pea show Saturday afternoon, July 18, in the assembly rooms. The principal displays made were of

The Market.

As compared with last week, trade has dropped off considerably and funeral work is the chief outlet for flowers. Carnations are holding out well, though some varieties are showing the ravages of the season. Roses are still plentiful but of a depreciated quality. Sweet peas show a slight improvement in quality. Asters will soon arrive; in fact, a few extra early asters are already seen and find a ready sale. Among the growers there is great activity, but only in putting the houses in shape, not in building. Some remodeling is being done.

Various Notes.

Mr. Davis, superintendent of the Riverside cemetery, is building an iron-frame house, 30x90, for the growing of cut flowers and bedding plants. Thomas Quinn, one of Mr. Davis' assistants, slipped while pruning a tree recently, falling a distance of twenty feet. He is confined to his home with three broken ribs.

Mrs. Hoffman, wife of William Hoffman, Sr., is enjoying a vacation in the mountains.

The work of repairing benches and glass is going on at J. J. Kelley's, of Valley Falls.

Mr. Meade, of the Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., Boston, Mass., seedsmen, called on the trade last week.

Tree Warden E. O. Ronian, of Woonsocket, has secured the aid of the fire department in his war against the brown-tail moth.

Mr. Demers, of Jenks park, Central Falls, reports to the police the theft of many excellent S. A. Nutt geraniums from the circular bed in the front of the park.

Charles W. Morey, of the Woonsocket Hill Nurseries, Woonsocket, is receiving congratulations on the birth of a son.

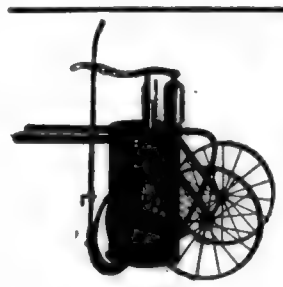
On the unlucky date of July 13 a terrific hail and rain storm visited this vicinity and inflicted heavy damages to the owners of crops of all kinds. Everything outdoors suffered severely except gladioli. Other plants were beaten to the ground and their leaves torn. The hail stones measured from five to twelve inches in circumference; many were as large as baseballs.



Clarence E. Smith reports a heavy loss in outdoor stock. In his greenhouses over 1,400 lights were broken.

H. W. Holton lost about 300 lights in his greenhouse. The heavy rain as well as the large hail stones did much damage to stock.

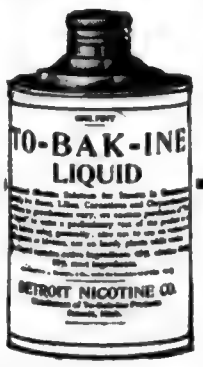
PLANTLIFE

PLANTLIFE has several advantages over liquid insecticides on the market. Containing refined tobacco dust it can be used to mix with the soil, acting as an excellent fertilizer, at the same time destroying worms and insects in the ground before they have a chance to reach the plant.

PLANTLIFE has been found very effective in ridding greenhouses of insects by dusting on plants. When dry, use for dusting about once a week.



Put up in bulk for greenhouse men; in packages for retail trade.

Bag of 100 lbs., $3.50.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Business was exceedingly slow last week, but stock is becoming quite scarce. Carnations, especially, are slowing up decidedly and the quality is poor. Roses are holding out fairly well and the summer stock is in evidence. Sweet peas, annuals and perennials of all sorts are plentiful and the quality is of the best. Some cold storage peonies are seen and the flowers hold up well.

The Outing.

Friday, July 17, the St. Paul Florists' Club, in conjunction with the Minneapolis Florists' Club and the Minnesota State Florists' Association, held an outing on the river. The steamer Red Wing and barge were chartered and a trip was made to Red Wing, Minn., a distance of forty miles from St. Paul. The steamer left the dock at 9:30 a. m. and arrived at the picnic grounds at Red Wing at 2:30 p. m., with about 450 florists and their friends. Dancing was indulged in on the down river trip. After lunch the balance of the afternoon was devoted to a sporting program, $100 in cash and some merchandise prizes being distributed. An auto ride around the beautiful little city was next in order and, after the various interesting industries had been visited, dinner was served. After that the party boarded a special train on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad and was whisked back to St. Paul at about 9 p. m.

This was no doubt the most interesting picnic ever attempted and all arrived home in the best of spirits and loudly applauded the committee for such an eventful day. The committee consisted of E. P. Holm, A. C. Hansen and F. Gustafson, of St. Paul, assisted by C. N. Ruedlinger, J. S. Taylor and Prof. Le Roy Cady, of Minneapolis. John Sten, the Red Wing florist, was head of a reception committee. A number of out-of-the-city guests were present.

Various Notes.

J. Christensen, one of the proprietors of the Acorn Greenhouses, in North St. Paul, has disposed of his interests in that business to his brother and is again manager at the Holm & Olson greenhouses.

A. H. Kinsman, of Austin, was a visitor for several days. C. F. R.

Evanston, Wyo.—Louis B. Westholder, who has been established here just a year, reports business in good shape. Although it is July, the temperature is cool, and frost was felt July 5. August is the only month without frost in this vicinity. Shipping business is excellent.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has been quiet here the last two weeks. Stock of good quality has been scarce, as the dry weather has been hard on outdoor crops and the intense heat has had its effect on house stock. Carnations are of poor quality, but there are enough of them, such as they are, to go the rounds. Roses have held their own as well as anything in the houses and the quality of some of them is surprisingly good. Killarney, White Killarney, Maryland and Sunburst predominate at present. Beauties are of somewhat poor quality and are also scarce, but this is just as well, as the demand is light. Gladioli are fine and are really about the most satisfactory stock we are handling; the bulk of them are America and Augusta. Lilies are plentiful and find a fairly good market. Valley is good, with the sales rather light and the supply correspondingly light. Funeral work is about all that is doing at presnt.

Various Notes.

There is some doubt about the florists having an outing this year in a body, as nothing has been done so far in that respect, but they may get together in the last week of this month, as that is generally the time they go.

The Livingston Seed Co. reports trade rather quiet in all lines.

The Columbus Floral Co. is still cutting some carnations, but reports that business is quiet.

The Indianola Florists are preparing to make a good display again at the state fair.

The Munk Floral Co. has been busy repairing benches, etc., preparatory to replanting their stock.

E. Metzmaier reports that business is quiet, but that there is plenty of hot work in store for him.

Sherman Stephens has changed his firm name to S. F. Stephens & Son, and his son will be with him from now on. They report business quiet, with a little spurt of funeral work now and then.

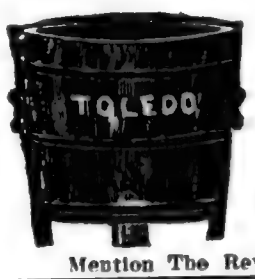
DES MOINES, IA.

Everybody is preparing for the show at the state fair. It is reported that the tomato crop is a bumper one this year. The bedding stock in and around Des Moines was soon cleaned up this season. S. A. Nutt is still a special favorite among the geraniums and a good many orders for it were turned down.

The Wilson Floral Co. is busy benching the stock chrysanthemums. This firm's carnations are the best they have had for several years and are in fine shape for benching.



Frank Page and Mr. Kurtzweil, of the Iowa Seed Co., have returned from the seedsmen's convention at Washington, D. C. Mr. Page prolonged his visit in the east, and on his return trip he called at the hospital in Rochester, Minn., to see his father, C. N. Page, who has undergone an operation. The operation was successful and the patient is doing as well as can be expected. The carnations at the greenhouses of the Iowa Seed Co. are in good condition and already the benches are being filled. Several of the newer varieties are being tried this year, including Matchless, Rosette, Gloriosa, Comfort and Pink Delight. The chrysanthemums also look much better than last season. Chrysolora has been added to the early varieties. L. Copeland has taken over the propagating department of the greenhouses, formerly in charge of J. Rogers, who is now with the Wilson Floral Co. Mr. Davinson, the superintendent, is expected soon to return from Denver, where business matters have kept him. Harry Berrickman, the shipping clerk at the greenhouses, is suffering from a partial paralysis of one of his arms, but is said to be recovering.

Carl Olsen, of this city, met with a painful accident recently while returning home from the greenhouses. He was knocked off his bicycle and his face was badly cut and bruised. W. D.

PRINCE ALBERT, SASK.

A hail storm, the heaviest in years, visited this city on the evening of July 7, accompanied by torrents of rain. The hailstones fell thickly and were of large size, some being fully two inches in diameter. The heaviest loser here was E. J. Coster, proprietor of the Saskatchewan Greenhouses, whose loss will probably total over $1,000 through broken glass and damaged plants. The large stones, falling in large numbers, broke hundreds of lights, and the heavy rain poured in through the openings.

Thomas Robinson, who has a greenhouse north of the river, suffered about $40 damage to his place.

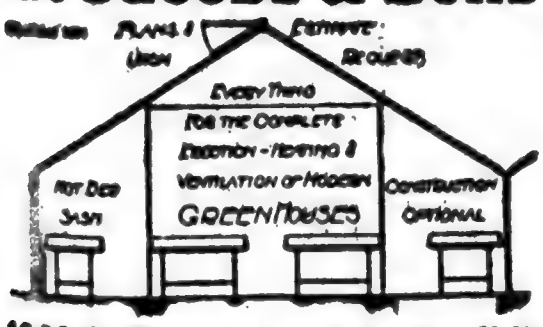
Scotch Soot

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.



We offer the genuine in original cwt. sacks, at CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Last week's market proved to be decidedly slow. The first of the week was fair and so was the close, but the intervening days were exceedingly poor. The supply in the market is a good average summer supply that an active demand would easily take up. The weather has moderated and is again pleasant. We had a few showers last week that were a great help to the rural districts.

Roses of all kinds are in good supply, but have a slow market. Even American Beauties have joined the ranks of the slow sellers. Carnations continue to sell well. Both lilies and gladioli are in good supply. Aster receipts are heavier and are now a regular factor in the daily market. They have been having a ready sale. The supply of greens of all kinds is fully adequate for present requirements.

Various Notes.

Wm. Murphy has gone to his cottage in northern Michigan. He will be away until early fall.

Joseph Hill was at the store of the E. G. Hill Floral Co. the first part of the week.

P. O. Coblenz, of New Madison, O., is again shipping his fine gladioli to C. E. Critchell. The first shipment arrived toward the end of last week.

Ed. Fries is cutting some fine gladioli at his establishment at Ft. Thomas. Mrs. Fries is seriously ill at her home in the Kentucky highlands.

John Evans, of Richmond, spent a few days in this city last week. Another visitor was Mrs. Gerlach, of Piqua, O. C. H. H.

Horticultural Society.

At the meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society Saturday evening, July 18, the announcement was made that the flower show of the Newport Flower Club and the Newport Horticultural Society would be given on the lawn of Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, at Marble House, August 13, 14 and 15. A committee from the society, consisting of Alexander MacLellan, Andrew J. Dorward, Oscar Schultz, James Bond and John B. Urquhart, was appointed to assist the committee from the Flower Club.

Various Notes.

Among the principal exhibitors at the Greystone Horticultural Society's exhibition Saturday, July 18, were William Gray and J. Robertson, of this city, who showed sweet peas, roses and antirrhinums.

Monday evening, July 20, Arthur Herrington, of Madison, N. J., addressed the members of the Newport Garden Club at the home of Mrs. L. Gillespie on "Some Suggestions for Better Gardening." W. H. M.

Putting Things Off

ALL through the months of January and February each year, every day's mail brings inquiries from growers who are "thinking of building." About 75% of this number just keep on "thinking." The other 25% turn their thinks into action and make something happen.

We have already completed a lot of houses for some of our customers. But there are several of them who are not "Put-offers" who for various reasons entirely beyond their control, were not able to build early.

To such of you, we can offer right now an unusual service in speed of delivery of materials and erection. We can turn out a completed job quicker than ever. KEEP YOUR STORE AND YOUR STORE WILL KEEP YOU

— POOR RICHARD'S ALMANAC

Time after time it has been demonstrated that an improvement in a Florist's facilities is followed by a prompt increase in his business

THERE has been a wonderful change in business conditions since Franklin published his Almanac, in 1732, but the "Ways to Wealth" are just as wise as they were nearly 200 years ago. There were no florists then —indeed, there was no United States— but the flower store man who today applies Poor Richard's maxims will find that, next to "Honesty is the best policy," there is nothing more certain than that the public will respond to the efforts of the retailer who "keeps" his store just a bit better than the average store is "kept." But it isn't so easy as it may look.

A Man's Job.

"Keeping" a flower store is a man's size job. It presents about as many sides as any occupation that will suggest itself, as the successful retail florist must be a financier, an artist, a merchant and an administrator—an organizer. If any phase of the subject is neglected the business will suffer, but if all are properly handled, a big, prosperous, successful establishment quickly is built up, and built to stay. The trouble is that not many men combine all the qualities demanded by this exacting vocation. Some are merchants and not artists, while more have the artistic temperament without the money-conserving faculty. The ideal organization, perhaps, is a partnership in which one man represents the artistic and the other the material aspects. If they work together their store will be well "kept" and will keep them in abundance, for the needs of the individuals will be no greater than the needs of the thoroughly well kept store.

The Essentials.

The unusually successful retail florist often is said to have a "genius" for the work. Carlyle's definition of genius was "an infinite capacity for taking pains," and that coupled with an equally great capacity for work about describes the qualities that make some florists stand out above others in the same line. Care and industry; close attention to details.

A first essential for a successful flower store is a suitable location and facilities in keeping with the location. The choice of a location is a matter of prime importance. The store must be where people can get at it—the right kind of people—flower buyers. In general, there are two tendencies: In the big cities the florists are moving away from the busiest downtown business streets, getting into the regions of specialty shops or the residences. Quite the opposite in the smaller cities, the florists who once were content to sell at the greenhouses have of late by hundreds opened stores in the center of town, as close to the heart of things as they could get. This has been a most important development.

With the location chosen, the fitting up of the store is the second consideration. The equipment must be adequate to handle a volume of business that will make the store pay. And the fixtures, the help and the service must be in accord with the class of trade to be catered to. If things are not so good as they should be, people will pass by to the place that is better, or if the store is too good for the neighborhood, its public must be educated to know that moderate-pursed people may with safety venture inside.

Luck in Location.

The most difficult thing about selecting a location for a flower store is to estimate the future. In rapidly growing American cities the character of a neighborhood often changes radically in a few years. Many a retailer has found that just as he became, as he thought, thoroughly established, the trade channels of his city changed direction and he was left high and dry. It was the experience in one hustling middle-western city that wholesale houses crowded everything else out of the district of the best flower stores, driving the florists' customers to a new retail section several blocks distant, while in another city what had been the best residence section gradually deteriorated as the business section spread. The florists were forced to move. In the second instance they could not follow their trade, as it had scattered, and so were forced practically to begin all over again. There are many such experiences.

Keeping Up to Date.

In only a few places can it with confidence be said that business locations will prove of fixed character; in most cases they will either improve or deteriorate. In selecting the spot for a flower store the florist must peer into the future. He must make up his mind what the character of the neighborhood will be ten or twenty years later, for the business must endure.

Having been fortunate in his choice of a location, the retail florist still misses his opportunity unless he develops the faculty of keeping pace with the steady improvement in the character of his neighborhood. There are innumerable instances where the flower store kept on year after year in the same old way, while its neighbors in other specialty lines made steady progress in the way of finer fronts, finer fixtures, finer merchandise, larger sales and better profits.

Every once in a while some florist awakens to the fact that his storekeeping methods have not kept pace with the development of the location; that he has not increased his volume of sales as fast as his neighbors, or that the appearance of his store and the quality of his merchandise have not kept up to the improvement that has been going on around him. Then he gets busy. A new front goes in, with modern display windows. Perhaps an adjoining room is acquired. New floor, new ceiling, new lights, new display refrigerator, new wall cases go in. The obsolete counter goes out; the salespeople meet the customers on an equal footing; the telephone service is improved; the delivery service looked over; the buyer gets orders to carry a better grade of merchandise; the designers and decorators are given a trip to some bigger city to see how the best stores do their work. And how the business booms!

How the Public Responds.

The wise retailer does not let himself fall so far behind that a complete overhauling of his establishment becomes advisable. He makes his alterations and improvements one at a time, little by little, keeping up with or leading the development of his neighborhood and avoiding the necessity of adding at any one time a large sum to his investment of capital. He "keeps" store every day—and his store "keeps" him.

The response to improved facilities, where the florist already has an established business, frequently is surprising. Not long ago a retailer moved his display refrigerator ten feet farther from the door, and put in a new floor, a wall case for ribbons, etc. His sales jumped twenty-five per cent. Another sold the old ice-box by the wall and put in a larger, modern one across the rear of the room. It greatly improved the view from the street and the increase in business was immediate. Any traveling salesman will tell of a dozen such recent instances.

A Montreal Store.

Take the store shown in the center of the preceding page. It is that of a florist who has been in business since 1851. The present location has been occupied ten years August 1. It is at the corner of St. Catherine and Guy streets, in Montreal, which has become, in the decade, one of the busiest transfer corners in a city of 600,000 people. Keeping pace with the changes in its surroundings, P. McKenna & Son in this room in the last year retailed approximately $100,000 worth of flowers.

TELEGRAPH DELIVERY.

European Discount.

The fact that the European retailers allow only ten per cent in their exchange of orders, and expect to allow only ten per cent when transacting business with the retailer of our country has been drawn to the attention of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery. All members are requested to arbitrarily deduct twenty per cent in dealing with foreign flower shops.

In case there is any controversy over the matter the same should be taken up with the secretary of the F. T. D. and proper provision will be made for taking care of the matter. A resolution requesting permission to mail all foreign orders net, that is, with a discount of twenty per cent subtracted, when dealing with foreign houses not permitting more than ten per cent, will be offered at the Boston meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery.

MANGEL MAKES COMMOTION.

Several weeks ago The Review referred facetiously to the commotion created by the appearance on the streets of Chicago of the new White delivery truck of John Mangel, the Palmer House retailer. The excitement now has progressed as far as the automobile trade papers, one of which has published the accompanying illustration and the following note:

"Chicago florists, who pride themselves on the use of distinctive motor truck equipment, have completely surrendered the palm of exclusiveness in favor of John Mangel, who has introduced on his motor truck the most striking body design ever applied to commercial service in Chicago if not elsewhere.

"Mr. Mangel, who caters to the high-class florists' trade, conceived a type of body which cannot be described by any of the names under which bodies are known in the motor car business, yet he has introduced a type that is novel, artistic and, he says, well suited to the florists' business.

"In vehicle lines Mr. Mangel's truck resembles a huge Sedan decorated with exterior frescoes of rose wreaths. In fact, it has some of the features of the Sedan, such as inside drive, large window areas and low waist line. But when the truck has been partly filled with floral pieces, all showing plainly through the large plate-glass windows, it is suggestive of a colonial coupé banked with flowers for a bridal couple.

"However, there is nothing sentimental in its purpose, even though its appearance seems to belie its commercialism. Its first appearance on Chicago streets drew such a large crowd that police were required to keep traffic open. Painted a vivid green, nature's own hue as a background for the moving floral display, the truck has given Mr. Mangel a great volume of advertising and has been a big stimulus to business. It is fitted with an electric lighting system by which the interior may be flooded with light and make it easily identified on the darkest street."

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—In the United States District Court at Grand Rapids, July 24, the H. A. Fisher Co. filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy, scheduling assets of $9,930.65 and liabilities of $18,635.81. Of the assets, insurance policies are scheduled at $6,000, leaving other assets at $3,930.65. About two-thirds the liabilities are accounts of Chicago wholesale florists and florists' supplies concerns. The matter was referred to Referee in Bankruptcy Banyon, of St. Joseph, Mich.

Boston, Mass.—A voluntary petition in bankruptcy was filed July 22 by James L. Carney. His liabilities are stated to be $11,406 and his assets $1,072.

SAMARITAN IS VICTIMIZED.

William F. Snyder, of Hopkinsville, Ky., recently turned Samaritan and suffered the not unusual experience of finding that his confidence was misplaced. He reports that he employed and befriended in various ways a man who was said to have been paroled from the Eddyville penitentiary. Finding the man competent to handle the florists' business, Mr. Snyder went on a visit in New York, leaving the new man in charge. During the proprietor's absence things are said to have been doing right along. According to Mr. Snyder's statement, business was good, as sales were made without regard to the value of the stock, but the money did not get into the cash-drawer. But the worst part of it was that the florist's employee visited a number of merchants in the town, either to make purchases or to pay bills, and in each case presented a check that called for cash change. It is surprising how many people are willing to give a stranger merchandise and real money in small amounts in exchange for a check they know nothing about. But in this case the failure of the bank to pay the checks got Mr. Snyder in bad, as the saying goes, for the merchants held him responsible, morally if not legally, for their losses. Telegrams were sent calling him home to straighten out the mixup.

Mr. Snyder says the man he befriended and trusted is known by several aliases. He describes him as about 42 years of age, five feet ten inches tall, weighing about 145 pounds, black eyes and hair, heavily tattooed on chest, arms and back. Of course he disappeared the day the merchants cashed the checks, but Mr. Snyder hopes he may soon have the pleasure of hearing that he has again taken up his residence at Eddyville.

PIERSON'S PALACE.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from the first photograph of the horticultural palace the F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., recently completed on the main automobile thoroughfare from New York to Albany. The retail business had increased steadily until it reached a point where Mr. Pierson felt that it would justify a really first-class store building and equipment. The plans were prepared by Lord & Burnham Co., Mr. Cobb, of that concern, being a close friend of Mr. Pierson, and how well the work was done is apparent from a glance at the illustration. The building had its dedication a few weeks ago, before it was finished, by being used for the June show of the local horticultural society.

OHIO GLADIOLUS SHOW.

Wilbur A. Christy, secretary and treasurer of the Gladiolus Society of Ohio, has issued the premium list for the second annual show of the organization, to be held at the Hollenden hotel, Cleveland, August 14 and 15. Copies may be had by addressing Mr. Christy at Warren, O. The medals of the American Gladiolus Society are offered for exhibits by amateurs and prizes are donated by Joe Coleman, C. Betscher, H. F. Michell Co., the Perkins-King Co., Munsell & Harvey, W. Atlee Burpee & Co., E. E. Stewart, H. J. Alford, N. L. Crawford and the A. H. Austin Co. Aside from the secretary, the officers are: President, C. Betscher, Canal Dover; vice-president, Mrs. A. H. Austin, Wayland; executive committee, H. J. Alford, Garrettsville; M. Crawford, Cuyahoga Falls, and R. E. Huntington, Painesville.

CANADIANS TO MEET.

The Canadian Horticultural Association will hold its seventeenth annual convention at Toronto next week, August 4 to 7. This is the organization of the florists in the Dominion and an unusually large attendance is expected this year, as Toronto is an excellent meeting place. Five business sessions will be held, on Tuesday and Wednesday, morning and evening, and on Thursday morning, with papers and discussions by leading experts. Entertainment features planned are many and varied, including visits to local establishments, the Dale Estate and Richmond Hill, the association banquet, an evening at Scarboro Beach park and a trip to Niagara Falls. The trade exhibit will be staged in St. George's hall, Elm street, in charge of George Douglas. Julius Luck, of Montreal, is secretary of the association.

A CALL FOR FUNDS.

Members S. A. F.:—Your committee appointed at the Chicago convention for the erection at the national capital of a suitable memorial to the late William Robertson Smith, "the Father of our Charter," has been continuously at work, and has decided that the monument should be useful as well as ornamental, in the shape of a memorial building or educational garden.

It is hardly necessary for your committee to remind you that Mr. Smith was for more than fifty years superintendent of the United States Botanical Garden, at Washington, D. C., and an honored member of the Society of Florists from the time of its organization.

Your committee, therefore, asks that you now send your subscription, addressed to William F. Gude, chairman, 1214 F street, N. W., Washington, D. C., so that the memorial may take tangible form at the earliest possible date.

We trust that your contribution will be a liberal one for this worthy cause, that the florists of the United States may show their appreciation of the man who did so much towards promoting and uplifting our calling.

Awaiting an early and favorable reply, we are,

Respectfully,
Wm. F. Gude, Chairman,
Richard Vincent, Jr.,
Harry Papworth,
J. A. Valentine,
John K. M. L. Farquhar,
William Robertson Smith Memorial Committee.

LAURUSTINUS NOT FLOWERING.

I have some laurustinus which were planted four years ago, but have never bloomed. They are growing fast, and the rapid growth may be one reason why they do not bloom. Is root pruning advisable? I have done it with good results to fruit trees, but do not know how it would work on laurustinus.

J. A. I.

The laurustinus, or Viburnum tinus, is probably making too strong a growth and a root pruning will be of assistance in promoting floriferousness. Do not prune too radically; cut a trench, say, three feet away and chop off all roots clean which reach that distance away.

C. W.

Hanover, Mass.—The greenhouse which is being erected by J. W. Beal is nearly completed.

Sweet Peas

EXPERT ADVICE ON SWEET PEAS.

Placing the Supports.

"After the plants have reached the height of about six inches," says A. C. Zvolanek, in his recently published monograph, "they should be given something to climb on. The best method, and the cheapest, is to run one wire at the bottom and one from eight to ten feet above each row, connecting these two wires with strings as is done in the case of smilax. Strings should also be run lengthwise of the row, about every ten inches, as the plants advance in growth. At the same time it is well, occasionally, to help the vines to climb the strings. The upper wire must be one of the strongest, for when the sweet peas are in full bloom they are usually ten feet high, and one row of 100 feet will weigh a ton. If, at any time, the wire should break, all the flowers would become bruised, crooked and of little value. In order to divide the weight, wooden or iron supports should be placed by the upper wire every eight feet.

Picking and Grading the Blooms.

"The flowers should be picked during the afternoon, as at that time they are in full bloom. Where many thousands of flowers are picked daily, the most experienced hand should go over the row first, picking only the best, with three, four or more flowers, with the longest stems, bunching them at once, ten selected flowers to a bunch. The second hand may go immediately after, picking the second grade, putting twenty-five sprays to a bunch; and finally the third hand should pick all the short and crooked flowers.

"If the flowers are to be sent a long distance to be sold the next day, pick all those flowers having three or more blooms and one or more buds. Remember that these flowers which you pick today will be distributed among the flower-buying public twenty-four to thirty-six hours afterward, and all must look fresh if you want good returns for them.

Packing and Shipping.

"As soon as a certain number have been picked, place them in water, so that they are sure not to be wilted. Flower pots about 6x6 are ideal for the sweet pea. Deep vases or large pails should never be used, for the blossoms may become wet and thus lose their fragrance.

"After the flowers have been in water for about three hours, they are ready to be shipped. Each bunch should be wrapped separately in fine wax or tissue paper, then packed in boxes 8x30. Pack each wrapped bunch in the box, moderately firmly, with the flowers to the ends and the stems in the middle. During extremely cool weather the boxes should be well lined with cotton sheeting, to prevent freezing. Between the stems use dampened paper or soft moss. Flowers packed in this way can be shipped 1,000 miles without losing either fragrance or color. If the flowers are to be shipped the next morning, they should be packed the evening before, and kept in a room where the thermometer registers about 50 or 55 degrees. They should never be left in water over night, or kept in a cool room, as this will cause them to lose both color and fragrance.

When to Sow.

"To obtain a good crop of flowers for the Christmas trade, seed should be sown, anywhere north of Washington, D. C., between August 10 and 20. It is difficult to prescribe just the right time, for if the weather should be exceptionally warm and bright in the fall when the seed is sown, the main crop will be ready early in November, when sweet peas are cheap. On the other hand, if the weather is cool and cloudy in the fall when the seed is sown, the flowers will probably be too late for the Christmas trade. It is much better to have the crop in January, for during that month and the following, the prices are usually just as high as during the Christmas week. The flowers should never be forced, for then the entire crop is apt to be lost. If the seed has been sown after August 25, in any place north of Washington, D. C., fine flowers will be produced just after New Year's, when they are most needed.

C. Schmieg.

Other Crops with Sweet Peas.

"One of the most successful things to grow after the sweet peas are over, is the tomato. If you have small and moderately warm greenhouses, or propagating beds, sow the tomato seed in November and then transplant into small pots and keep repotting until the plants are in 5-inch or 6-inch pots. When the sweet peas—we may say after Easter—are becoming short-stemmed, take them out and put the tomatoes, which should be in bloom, in their place. Plant them about 16x20, train to single stem, and you should have good returns in June and July, having the space ready for sweet peas again in August.

"Violets, also, are successfully grown in rotation with sweet peas. These should be planted the last day of September. The beds should be five to six feet wide, with a space twelve inches on the north side for one row of sweet peas, and all the rest planted with violets. Both of these flowers may be planted at the same time, as the violets need a low temperature, not much over 40 degrees. The sweet peas will grow slowly at first, probably not being over three feet in height by the last part of February. By this time the violets will have almost finished blooming, and anyway will be extremely cheap. Now is the time to raise the temperature to suit the sweet peas, and in a short time you will have a splendid crop of sweet peas, lasting until late spring.

"Chrysanthemums may also be grown with sweet peas. If you have a house with such early varieties as Golden Glow and Pacific, these will probably all have been cut by October 20. If sweet pea seed is sown in 4-inch pots September 10, there will be fine plants by the time the chrysanthemums are over. The soil should be prepared and the sweet peas planted at once, so that they will begin to bloom by the latter part of January. Other things may be grown between the sweet pea rows, such as all kinds of bulbs, and small ferns in flats.

Feeding the Plants in Bloom.

"After the sweet peas have been in bloom for some time, and have begun to shorten in stem, they should be fertilized. The best thing is liquid cow or sheep manure, or pulverized manure. Nitrate of soda should never be used, for it will do more harm than good.

"Another thing never to be used is hydrocyanic acid gas, for, although this destroys all insects, at the same time it destroys all the buds then in formation, so that there will be no flowers for many months to come.

Good Greenhouse Varieties.

"There are a great many varieties of the winter-flowering type of sweet pea, and all of the old grandifloras are well known. In place of the old type we now have the new winter orchid-flowering. Whoever has grown this kind will never return to the old grandiflora. The principal thing now is to select the best selling colors. So far the bicolor has always sold best. Of this variety we now have the Pink and White Orchid, which have no equal for midwinter flowering. In white there are the White Orchid, Bridal Veil, Venus and Mrs. M. Spanolin. In lavender the best are Lavender Orchid, lavender pink; and Lavender Nora, which is a clear lavender and of the winter Unwin type. It is of good size, and averages as large as any of the orchid-flowering type. In light pink we have Mrs. A. A. Skach, Mrs. J. Manda and Dolansky Orchid. In dark rose there are the Orchid Beauty and President Wilson. These have no equal. The best in orange pink is the Orange Orchid, but to this the Orange Nora and Orange Bird are close seconds; the latter two are of the winter Unwin type.

"The colors just mentioned are the best to grow in large quantities. There is little demand for the dark blue, purple, red or variegated. In the dark blue, the new orchid-flowering Mrs. M. Anderson is the best, following the Blue Jay of the winter Unwin. In red, the Red Orchid is the best. All light pink, dark rose and salmon pink varieties produce much brighter colors if made to bloom after the middle of January, when the weather is sunnier than in December."

"ALL LIT UP."

The caption applies, not to the smoker, but to the genuine Tampa "smoke" which he enjoys, in the accompanying illustration. There is no doubt of its being a genuine Tampa, for it was freshly made in Tampa, Fla., the home town of the smoker, F. A. Knull, who is shown seated in the office of the Knull Floral Co., in room 6, Court Arcade. The look of contentment on his countenance may be due to the cigar; perhaps it is due to the prosperity of the Knull Floral Co., for this company does a thriving business, both at this office and at its greenhouses, at Tampa and Madison avenues.

AN OLD-TIMER OF LONG ISLAND.

Well known to the trade in New York through the high quality of the stock he sends to that market and through his long connection with this line of business, is C. Schmieg, of Elmhurst, L. I., who is shown in the illustration on page 14. Mr. Schmieg is one of the leading growers of pansies, bachelor's buttons, hardy pinks, etc., for the New York market. This likeness of him is presented to readers of The Review through the courtesy of Fred W. Wagenfohr, manager of Hermann's Seed Store, New York.

OLSAN'S ONE-PIECE BUILDING.

Here we see the corner of Main and Kellogg streets in the thriving little agricultural and educational city of Ames, in Iowa. It is the building of the Olsan family—a home-made building erected without the aid of architect or contractor. Basement and two stories, 50x100, in it there are thirty-five tons of steel for reinforcing the concrete, but the building, from foundation to roof, was cast in one piece. Ames is in the region of big winds, but, as Mr. Olsan says, "the only way a cyclone can move this building is to roll it." Down in the corner in the foreground is a copper box, placed there with appropriate ceremony. In the box is a copy of the latest issue of The Review, placed there as the record of the state of the industry in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred eleven. The building never has been given its coat of outside finish, all that it needs to make it look like the work of a master builder—Mr. Olsan says he "still must sell a few carnations yet." Some day, when Ames is a metropolis, the Olsan block may pierce the sky, for the walls are thick enough to carry piled on stories.

The Olsan family is one of the best known in Ames. The father is a shrewd little son of the soil, whose twinkling eyes, sparkling behind a bushy white beard, give an instant impression of sound common sense and great good humor. He has five sons and two daughters. They run the business without outside assistance. The daughters run the Ames cafe, otherwise Olsan's lunch room, which occupies one of the stores in the Olsan block. You can see them standing in the door in the picture. The flower shop and seed store occupy the other half of the building. The greenhouses, 15,000 feet of glass, and the nursery are at Olsanville, just outside of town. There will be more glass there in 1915.

HYDRANGEA LEAVES BLIGHTED.

I enclose some leaves of Hydrangea Hills of Snow, and should like to have your opinion as to the trouble from which they are suffering. They were planted a year ago last spring and since then have done only moderately well. Last season the leaves were not so badly blighted. They are blooming, but only indifferently. W. A. S.

The hydrangea leaves suggested that the plant from which they were taken was too dry at the root and not sufficiently nourished. In well enriched soil of good depth I have never seen Hydrangea Hills of Snow have such leaves as those forwarded. I think more water and a generous mulch of well-rotted manure in the fall will improve your plants. Also be sure not to forget to prune them back well before the growing season commences.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Callas.

Early in August is sufficiently early to shake out and pot callas. The foliage will have dried away long ago if the pots were laid on their sides outdoors in a sunny spot toward the end of May. An 8-inch pot will accommodate three good-sized tubers. More frequently we see pots of this size containing a solitary root, but if the plants are well fed they will easily support three strong tubers. The majority of growers still grow the old variety Æthiopica, but an increasing number are using the newer Godfrey. The latter sort is not quite so large as the old sort, but is pure white in color and much more floriferous. Frequent inquiries come from growers who have bought Godfreys in 2½-inch or 3-inch pots and who wonder whether they should be rested, and why they do not flower. Young plants should not be rested, but grown along, preferably outdoors in rich soil, where they can get an occasional watering, and should be potted carefully in September. With this treatment the plants are wonderfully strengthened.

Callas like a fairly coarse but rich compost; one consisting of two-thirds fibrous loam and one-third old cow manure, with a good dash of fine bone added, suits them. After the pots are filled with active roots, a top-dressing of bone once a fortnight will be found much to their liking, as well as waterings of liquid manure.

Poinsettias.

Continue the propagation of poinsettias as fast as cuttings are obtainable. Now that we have hot nights as well as hot days, there should be no trouble in rooting them either in the greenhouses or coldframes. Be sure not to allow the cuttings to become too long before taking them, and always remember that those with a heel are the least liable to damp off. After the plants are established in small pots in a close, moist house, remove them to cooler and airier conditions. Euphorbia jacquiniæflora is a beautiful Christmas plant, the culture of which is similar to that of Euphorbia pulcherrima. It is readily salable when several rooted cuttings are placed in 5-inch or 6-inch pots, but where long sprays of its brilliant flowers are wanted, old plants should be given bench culture and tied to a roof, where they will produce wonderful arching sprays.

Begonias.

The winter-flowering begonias, such as Gloire de Lorraine and Glory of Cincinnati, now are making good headway and plants for early flowering should go into their flowering pots or pans. Keep flowers and runaway shoots pinched. Be sure the compost contains plenty of flaky leaf-mold and is porous; a heavy soil is unsuitable for them. While the plants need some shade, it should not be heavy, but they like a warm house. Late rooted cuttings, even such as are taken from the propagating bench now, will be useful, as there always is a big call for small plants, especially of Lorraine. Lorraine flowers earlier than Cincinnati and is the one for selling until early in December, when Cincinnati begins to assert its supremacy. A couple of years ago it looked as though Lorraine was to be a back number, but more of it now seems to be grown everywhere than a year ago.

Hydrangeas.

Hydrangeas in the open ground must be kept well cultivated. In periods of severe drought the plants will be much benefited if a good soaking of water is occasionally given. When the plants are grown in pots and tubs through the summer they want an open, sunny location. On extremely hot days they may wilt a little, but if kept well watered and sprayed well toward evening they will soon plump up. These pot-grown plants, by the way, are the ones to use for early forcing, as they will flower much earlier and more strongly than such as are potted up from the field.

The newer French hydrangeas are less robust than the old Otaksa and seem to take more kindly to pot culture than to the open field. There is a wide range of colors among them and there can be no question that for early forcing they are splendid, but for tub culture and later flowering the old variety still is invincible, as both foliage and flowers possess greater substance than the French varieties.

Cyclamens.

No matter whether cyclamens are grown at this season in greenhouses, moderately shaded, or in coldframes, they will now be making excellent growth. We have just given our plants their final potting into 6-inch and 7-inch pots, but there still is sufficient time for potting the plants which are to flower for Christmas and January, although I like to get the last potting done by the end of August. Let the compost be light and at the same time be such as to allow water to pass through it quickly. If slime gathers on the surface, the plants start to deteriorate. Good drainage, porous compost and careful watering, added to proper temperature and only necessary shade, will give stocky plants and a surface soil free from scum. Spray once in ten days with nicotine. Never mind if no insects are seen; aphis and thrips are liable to be present, while the dreaded mite is better controlled by nicotine than by any other remedy.

Kearney, Neb.—The Kearney Floral Co. was a prize-winner in the automobile parade here July 4. The special effort put upon the decoration was well repaid by the interest shown in it by the crowd of spectators.

FERNS AND ASPARAGUS.

Will you please tell me which is the better way to grow ferns, in solid beds or in benches? I shall also grow Sprengeri and plumosus. What kind of compost would you recommend for the ferns and what temperature would be required? Can I grow carnations successfully in the same house with ferns?

J. A. W.

The query does not state what ferns are to be grown, but if Boston ferns are referred to, a bench containing four to five inches of good carnation soil would answer well.

Asparagus Sprengeri and A. plumosus may also be grown in a bench five or six inches deep if it is purposed to cut them for sprays, but if plumosus is to be grown on long strings it would do better in a solid bed well enriched with cow manure. Asparagus will not grow satisfactorily in a carnation house, as it requires too much heat for the welfare of the carnations. A night temperature of 60 degrees is best for asparagus. W. H. T.

FERNS WITH OTHER PLANTS.

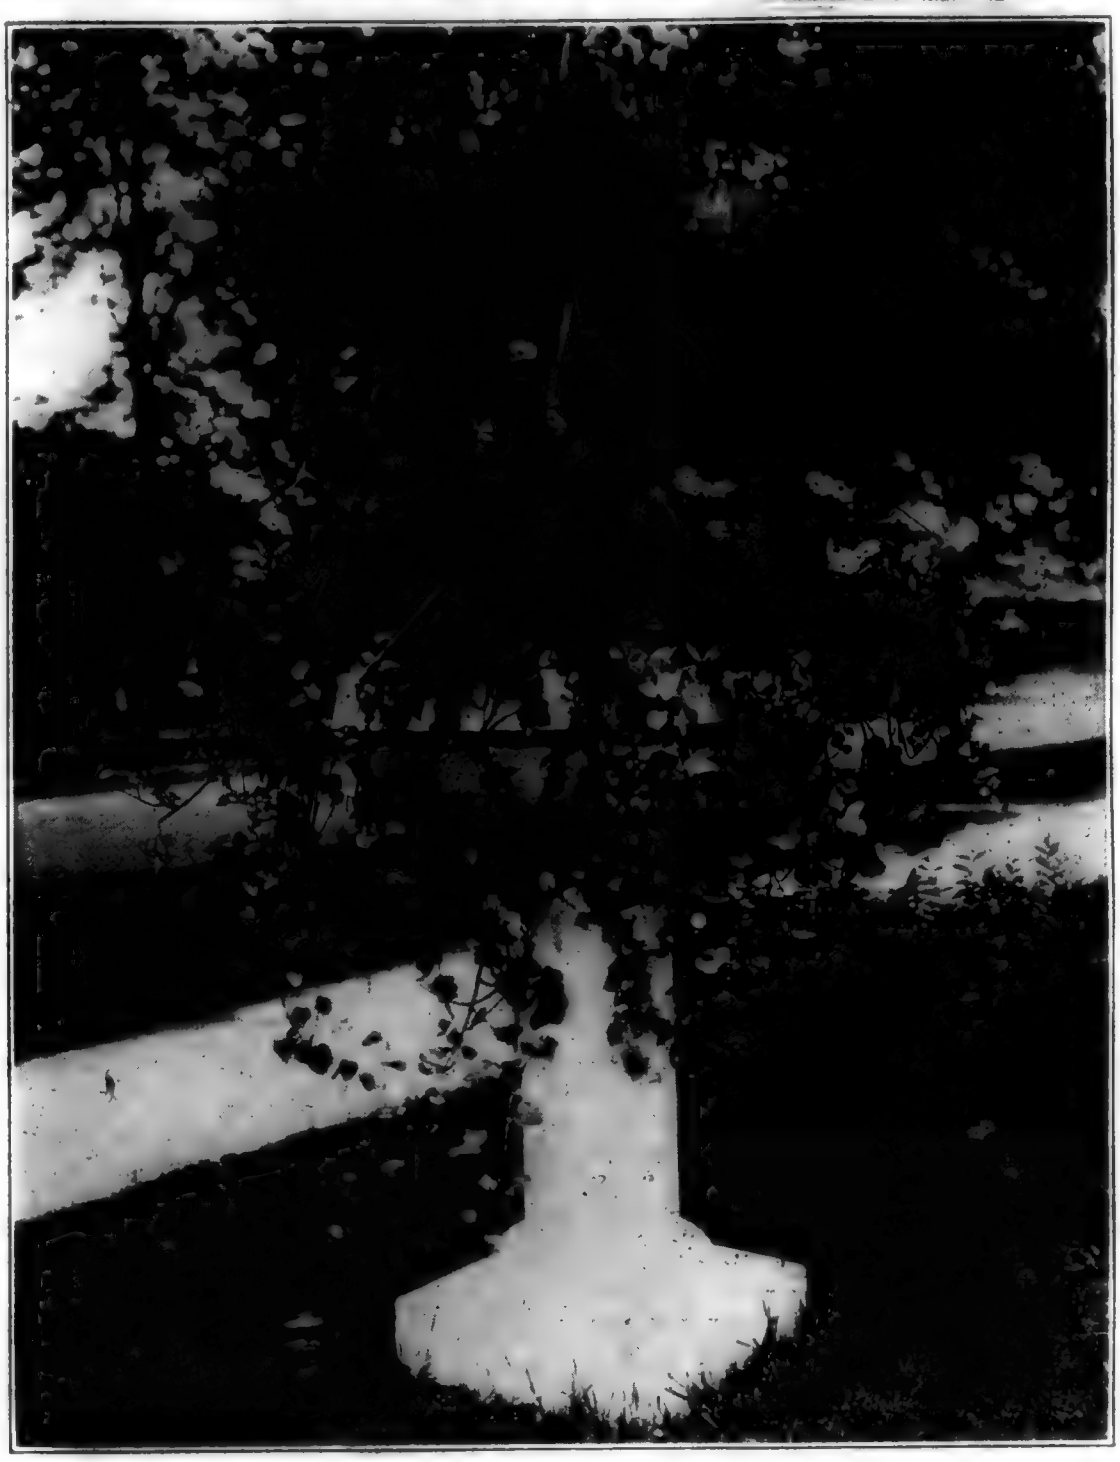
Could geraniums, ferns and carnations be profitably grown in the same house? H. P.

Of course these three plants do better in separate houses. Ferns like some shade and more moisture than the other two plants, but the nephrolepis will stand more sunlight than the other varieties of ferns and can be grown in a carnation temperature. Geraniums would do better in a house 5 degrees cooler than carnations, but at the cold end of the house will do quite well.

C. W.

IT IS NEPHROLEPIS PIERSONI.

We are sending under separate cover a fern of which we have lost the name. Can you give us the name of the variety? J. B.



The fern in question is Nephrolepis Piersoni, a form of N. Bostoniensis that originated with F. R. Pierson a number of years ago. W. H. T.

LAWN VASES GOOD SELLERS.

Perhaps it is because he is financially interested in a factory that makes, among other things, lawn vases of concrete, that F. A. Parkmire, of the Lakeshore Greenhouses, Chicago, finds them good sellers in spring. He is interested in them and pushes them—and what a florist pushes usually sells.

There has been complaint on the part of certain florists that the call for lawn vases, and the filling of lawn vases, is no longer what it once was. This, Mr. Parkmire thinks, is due to the fact that apartment houses are invading the districts of the complaining florists—for his part, he was wise enough to locate in a neighborhood exclusively private dwellings, each with its piece of land in lawn or garden, and he finds lawn vases to be filled on every hand.

The vase shown in the accompanying illustration is of concrete. It has a 36-inch bowl. A Dracæna indivisa occupies the center, surrounded by S. A. Nutt geraniums and white petunias, with vincas and English ivies around the edge. These lawn vases in Mr. Parkmire's section are making so good a showing this month that he expects to sell and fill more of them next season than this.

ROSES WITH OTHER FLOWERS.

Should roses be grown in a house alone, or could some other flowers or plants be grown in the same house?

H. P.

Of course you could grow some other varieties of flowers with roses, but if you want to do the roses justice keep the other plants away if possible. If you introduce a variety of other plants you will at the same time make it more difficult to keep your roses free from both insect pests and fungoid affections.

C. W.

PROPAGATING DRACÆNAS.

We placed both Dracæna Massangeana and Dracæna terminalis canes in the sand at the same time, and the terminalis shoots are well rooted and ready to be cut off the cane and potted up, while the Massangeana shoots are five to six inches high and show no signs of roots. What shall we do to get them rooted so that we can pot them?

H. N.

The best way to treat the young shoots of Dracæna Massangeana is to take them off the canes and root them in a sand bed in the propagating house. Give the cuttings some bottom heat, keep them moist and protect them from the sun, and they will soon root.

W. H. T.

WISTARIAS NOT FLOWERING.

Can you tell me why some Wistaria Sinensis do not bloom? The plants are healthy and the growth normal. I planted them four years ago, but never had a flower. I have seen some old plants which had never borne a flower. What causes this? Is there a remedy for it?

J. A. I.

It is not at all unusual for wistarias planted even longer than four years not to bloom. The same plants grown in pots or tubs might bloom profusely. Are you pruning your plants back sufficiently? Instead of root-pruning, pinch back the lateral growths well through the summer. This will encourage the production of flower buds. There seems to be in commerce a form of Wistaria Sinensis which never blooms; at least I have seen a number of plants, some quite old, which have never bloomed at all.

C. W.

POINSETTIA CUTTINGS ROTTING.

I have put in a batch of poinsettia cuttings from stock which I think was in good condition. I put them in water while making them, and then in sand. Three days after placing them in the sand I found that the cuttings had all turned black at the bottom. I have never had this trouble before and should like to know the cause of it.

W. R.

It is possible the water was not perfectly pure, or the receptacle holding the water may not have been quite clean. In hot weather great care must be taken when placing cuttings in water, as it soon becomes tainted and the slightest impurity spoils the cuttings, unless they are quite tough. The trouble, however, usually shows in blackened foliage, but if you left your poinsettias in the water long they would absorb so much water that they would be far more likely to damp off than if they had merely been sprinkled to keep them from wilting. Another point to remember is, never to give water to cuttings if it has been standing merely over night. Let it be always fresh from the faucet. There should never be wholesale rotting, such as you have had, unless the cuttings have had too much water before going into the sand or after, or a combination of both.

C. W.

ASTERS FOR CHRISTMAS.

When would be the proper time to sow aster seed to have the plants in bloom for Christmas?

A. D. E.

While I would not care to say that asters could not be flowered for Christmas, I would advise you against making any attempt to flower them at that time, when sunlight is at its minimum. Chrysanthemums last until Christmas, and I am afraid asters would have a poor sale even if you could grow them. It would pay you better to grow some more certain Christmas crop, such as violets, carnations, stevias, Paper White narcissi, Roman hyacinths, etc., for the holiday trade.

MORE VARIETY WANTED.

Advantage in Wide Range of Colors.

Last winter, during the propagating season, I spoke of the need of a greater variety of color in the carnation market, that being the time for laying your plans for the next season's planting. If you heeded the suggestions offered at that time, you perhaps have added a few varieties of a different hue to the inevitable list of Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress and White Enchantress. If you did not, it can still be done when you transfer the plants from the field to the benches. Make up your mind at once, and order the plants to be shipped to you when the beds are ready for planting.

To my mind, there is perhaps no greater danger threatening the carnation than this narrowing down to three or four staple colors, as is being done in the larger markets. That we need more white, pink and red carnations than we do of other colors is quite true, and that these must be grown in larger quantity no one will deny. But it is also true that to grow these colors to the exclusion of all the other beautiful and attractive shades robs the market of the means of bringing out the beauty in these staple colors by means of combination and contrast.

Effective Color Combinations.

What, for instance, is more beautiful than a spray of Enchantress finished off with a few fine blooms of Pocahontas, or a cluster of Rose-pink Enchantress and Yellow Prince? The same is true in making up table or mantel decorations; in fact, wherever you have a mind to use carnations. There is no question of the beauty of the staple colors, but the public likes contrasts. Have you never heard the comments at funerals or flower shows, where large numbers of people were gathered? Everyone notices the arrangements that are different from the regular run of such things, providing the arrangement is beautiful rather than radical. There is a wide difference between the two, not always appreciated by the designers, not only in our own profession but in other lines as well.

We sometimes hear retailers say that our trade "will not take" this or that. The fact in most instances is that the article had not been offered to their trade in the proper manner. The public everywhere will accept any flower that is beautiful, providing it is presented in such a way as to bring out its attractiveness. It might well be said that there is no flower that cannot be made attractive if it is given the proper setting, and that is where the artist in you becomes manifest. Anyone with a little mechanical skill can tie a bunch of Enchantress into a fairly good looking cluster, but how many can select just the right number of some other color to put with them, and the proper shade of ribbon for the bow, to blend with the blooms?

Holding the Popular Favor.

The designer who cannot produce these beautiful effects needs only two or three colors, but the real artist has use for every color procurable, at one time or another, and it is the wide range of colors found in the carnation that makes it so serviceable and popular a flower. To discard all but a few staple colors is to rob the carnation of its principal charm.

Moreover, when any one thing is offered in too great abundance the public becomes surfeited and turns it down in favor of something perhaps no better, but less common. So it stands to reason that any flower that is offered in a large variety of colors, and is therefore adapted to many different uses, has a better chance to hold public favor than one which possesses only limited adaptability.

So, if you are interested in increasing the popularity of the carnation among your trade, or even in holding the popularity it now enjoys, give this matter a little thought and see whether you will not arrive at the same conclusion as the writer.

HEIGHT FOR THERMOMETER.

At what height should the thermometers be placed in the greenhouse to show the temperature of the house? H. P.

Place them four and a half to five and a half feet from the ground. The thermometers should not be unprotected, as too often seen, but ought to be placed in receptacles with an overhanging top and with sides, to prevent the sun from striking the thermometer directly. You cannot get the true shade temperature unless this protection is given. C. W.

POULTRY MANURE FOR PLANTS.

Could pure, dried and pulverized poultry manure be used in the growing of plants and flowers? H. P.

There is great danger of injury to plants by the use of dry poultry manure. It is a powerful fertilizer and must be used with great care. If used as a light top-dressing, it acts as a good stimulant to plants of a robust nature. If added to the soil, give a light coating and be sure to incorporate it thoroughly with the soil. By scattering it outdoors between rows of growing plants, later running the hoe or cultivator over the ground, you will get better results from poultry manure and with less risk of damaging the plants than when it is used under glass. For such vegetable crops as tomatoes, corn, squash and melons, I have found this manure works finely, particularly for top-dressing. It can also be used to make liquid manure, but must be used quite weak. Do a little experimenting for yourself on a few plants and note results. C. W.

PROFITS IN ORCHIDS.

One is apt to judge by present conditions, so when flowers are either high or low, scarce or plentiful, then is the time to call attention to the other extreme in the swing of the pendulum that relieves this business of monotony. During July fine cattleyas have been so low in price that growers would despair if it were not for the certainty of the good time coming—which should begin in the next few weeks.

The accompanying illustration shows a Christmas crop of Cattleya labiata and C. Percivaliana at the establishment of the Albert T. Hey Floral Co., Maywood, Ill.—flowers that wholesaled without trouble at $9 per dozen. The Hey establishment is not a large one, but orchids are handled with much success—success by virtue of getting the crop at a time when there is a good market.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Shading.

We are now near the end of the period when orchids need the maximum amount of shade. After the end of July it will need gradual reducing on practically all varieties, the tender phalænopsis being an exception. It is always well to remember that while houses which are heavily shaded are cooler than others and the plants in them are of a greener hue, this does not mean that they are in the best condition, particularly when it comes to flowering time. It is a good plan to let the plants have a fairly good light; never mind if the foliage, especially on cattleyas, is a little pale.

Syringing.

We are at the hottest period of the year, and after a broiling day a spraying overhead is refreshing to nearly all orchids. This can be given to cypripediums about the middle of the afternoon. Cattleyas are also much benefited by a spraying over, and the afternoon is the best time to apply it. Always use a fine spray nozzle; the quantity of water from an open hose is too heavy and is liable to be harmful rather than helpful.

Potting.

This is not a season when much potting can be done, but where there is a collection of orchids there are few weeks in the year when some will not require overhauling. Newly imported cattleyas, such as labiatas, which arrive late, do better if not potted until they are pushing new roots and growths. The labiatas now arriving are small and quite costly. No specimen clumps are obtainable, and if a decent looking plant is wanted several pieces must be put together. Be sure to pot firmly and water lightly until the roots become active.

Ventilation.

Cattleyas should have the top ventilators wide open practically night and day now. They cannot tolerate coddling; only when the outside minimum goes below 60 degrees need the ventilators be lowered. Cypripediums want a stuffier and moister atmosphere, but some night ventilation for them is also a benefit. Even the dendrobiums making up their growths do better if not coddled up too tightly, to say nothing of phalænopsis and other East Indian genera.

Calanthes.

Calanthes now are in vigorous growth and have, or should have, their pots full of active roots. Feeding with cow manure water twice a week will now be of decided benefit. Start with it rather weak and give somewhat stronger doses later. To give the plants every chance for development, some of the more robust ones can be elevated on pots. While it is possible to feed calanthes with chemicals, the cow manure will be found much safer. Spray the plants over each afternoon unless the weather is cold and damp. Close the house about 3:30 p. m. This will permit a brisk heat to be bottled up.

Miltonia Vexillaria.

Plants of Miltonia vexillaria will soon be passing out of flower. As soon as the blooms have faded, dip the plants in a soap or nicotine solution to clean out the thrips, which are partial to this orchid and speedily disfigure the foliage if not sharply watched. Keep the plants on the dry side after flowering and stand them in a cool, airy house.

Cattleya Gaskelliana.

With the passing of Cattleya Mossiæ, the variety to fall back on is C. Gaskelliana. This will give flowers for a number of weeks. The flowers are hardly so attractive as those of C. Mossiæ, but are equally large and come in useful at this time, when cattleyas are getting scarce. Stand plants in flower in a cool and well-shaded place.

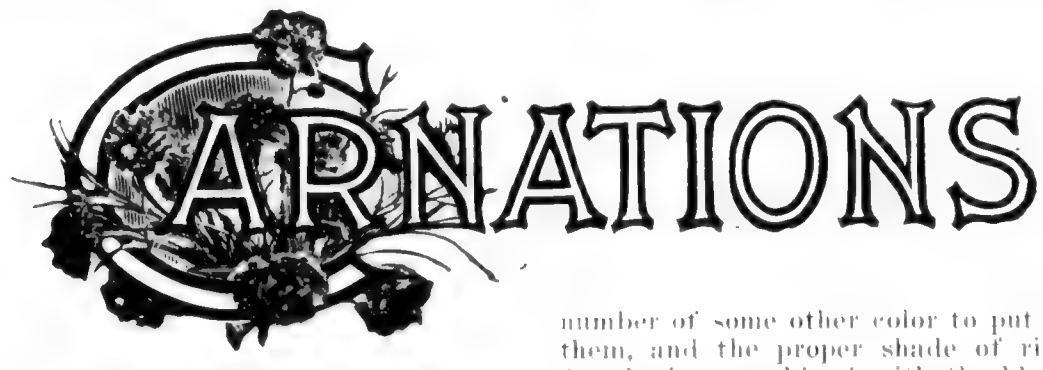
SPANISH IRIS.

I am thinking of growing Spanish iris outside for cut flowers and as I know nothing of their culture, would like to have you tell me what kind of soil to use, how close and how deep to plant and how to fertilize them. How long should they stay in the same place before separating and planting the new bulbs, and how shall I get the new bulbs? My location is in the state of Virginia. W. A. L.

Spanish iris is popularly, but quite erroneously, supposed to be tender. As a matter of fact, they are among the hardiest and most easily cultivated bulbs we have. A temperature of 25 to 30 degrees below zero has not harmed them in the least. The bulbs usually arrive about the end of September. It is better, however, not to plant them out at once, and in your latitude November 1 will be sufficiently early. If planted as soon as received the bulbs make a great deal of growth before cold weather, and while it is true that severe frost does not seem to harm these growths, I consider it an advantage to delay planting for a few weeks after the bulbs arrive. Spread the bulbs out thinly meantime, and keep in a cool, dry shed or cellar.

Spanish iris will grow in almost any soil and is not particular as to location so long as water does not lie on the ground in winter. This would cause the bulbs to rot. A somewhat light, friable loam is particularly good, however, and if somewhat sandy, all the better. Do not use any fresh manure for these, or, for that matter, any other bulbs. Let it be well rotted and incorporated. Plant the bulbs four inches deep; if in nursery rows they can go four inches apart, making the rows eighteen inches apart. A good way is to plant in beds three feet wide, running five rows to a bed and leaving a 24-inch path between the beds.

You ask how long bulbs can stay in one place. With suitable soil and by not cutting the stems down close to the ground, I have had beds flower well for eight and ten years. If you cut all the plants down close, you cannot, of course, expect much of a crop the year following. However, Spanish iris is inexpensive and you can afford to plant a new bed annually. The following are splendid varieties of Spanish iris for either open air culture or for forcing under glass. It is far better to buy named varieties than cheap mixtures: Cajames, bright yellow; Bronze Queen, bronze brown and yellow; Louise, porcelain blue and yellow, fine; British Queen, pure white; Midley, fine pale blue; Unique, dark blue standards, pale blue falls. C. W.



THE WASTE OF PRINTING.

No man whose name and address is known to the trade as a horticulturist can possibly order from a tithe of the catalogues he receives, and it may reasonably be presumed that prospective buyers are in the first place influenced by appearances and the general get-up to peruse some catalogues, while others are cast aside without a second thought. Hence the value of choosing a good paper, and a capable printer.

It is, however, equally important and necessary that the contents shall be good, the nomenclature and descriptions of the subject listed accurate, and if illustrations are used at all they must be true to life, and instructive in character.

No one can deny that there are many catalogues that reach the ideal in these respects. But there are others, shoddily produced, frequently inaccurate or uninformative or—all too often—slavish imitations of other folks' handiwork, revealing no vestige of originality or distinctiveness.

Such catalogues can be nothing more than a waste of money and material, and are just as incompetent to fulfill their purpose as a traveler or salesman who knows nothing of his business, and is incapable of either advising or persuading clients in regard to the goods he has to offer. H. T. J.

MORE VARIETY WANTED.

Advantage in Wide Range of Colors.

Last winter, during the propagating season, I spoke of the need of a greater variety of color in the carnation market, that being the time for laying your plans for the next season's planting. If you heeded the suggestions offered at that time, you perhaps have added a few varieties of a different hue to the inevitable list of Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress and White Enchantress. If you did not, it can still be done when you transfer the plants from the field to the benches. Make up your mind at once, and order the plants to be shipped to you when the beds are ready for planting.

To my mind, there is perhaps no greater danger threatening the carnation than this narrowing down to three or four staple colors, as is being done in the larger markets. That we need more white, pink and red carnations than we do of other colors is quite true, and that these must be grown in larger quantity no one will deny. But it is also true that to grow these colors to the exclusion of all the other beautiful and attractive shades robs the market of the means of bringing out the beauty in these staple colors by means of combination and contrast.

Effective Color Combinations.

What, for instance, is more beautiful than a spray of Enchantress finished off with a few fine blooms of Pocahontas, or a cluster of Rose-pink Enchantress and Yellow Prince? The same is true in making up table or mantel decorations; in fact, wherever you have a mind to use carnations. There is no question of the beauty of the staple colors, but the public likes contrasts. Have you never heard the comments at funerals or flower shows, where large numbers of people were gathered? Everyone notices the arrangements that are different from the regular run of such things, providing the arrangement is beautiful rather than radical. There is a wide difference between the two, not always appreciated by the designers, not only in our own profession but in other lines as well.

We sometimes hear retailers say that our trade "will not take" this or that. The fact in most instances is that the article had not been offered to their trade in the proper manner. The public everywhere will accept any flower that is beautiful, providing it is presented in such a way as to bring out its attractiveness. It might well be said that there is no flower that cannot be made attractive if it is given the proper setting, and that is where the artist in you becomes manifest. Anyone with a little mechanical skill can tie a bunch of Enchantress into a fairly good looking cluster, but how many can select just the right number of some other color to put with them, and the proper shade of ribbon for the bow, to blend with the blooms?

Holding the Popular Favor.

The designer who cannot produce these beautiful effects needs only two or three colors, but the real artist has use for every color procurable, at one time or another, and it is the wide range of colors found in the carnation that makes it so serviceable and popular a flower. To discard all but a few staple colors is to rob the carnation of its principal charm.

Moreover, when any one thing is offered in too great abundance the public becomes surfeited and turns it down in favor of something perhaps no better, but less common. So it stands to reason that any flower that is offered in a large variety of colors, and is therefore adapted to many different uses, has a better chance to hold public favor than one which possesses only limited adaptability.

So, if you are interested in increasing the popularity of the carnation among your trade, or even in holding the popularity it now enjoys, give this matter a little thought and see whether you will not arrive at the same conclusion as the writer.

PROFITS IN ORCHIDS.

One is apt to judge by present conditions, so when flowers are either high or low, scarce or plentiful, then is the time to call attention to the other extreme in the swing of the pendulum that relieves this business of monotony. During July fine cattleyas have been so low in price that growers would despair if it were not for the certainty of the good time coming—which should begin in the next few weeks.

The accompanying illustration shows a Christmas crop of Cattleya labiata and C. Percivaliana at the establishment of the Albert T. Hey Floral Co., Maywood, Ill.—flowers that wholesaled without trouble at $9 per dozen. The Hey establishment is not a large one, but orchids are handled with much success—success by virtue of getting the crop at a time when there is a good market.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Shading.

We are now near the end of the period when orchids need the maximum amount of shade. After the end of July it will need gradual reducing on practically all varieties, the tender phalænopsis being an exception. It is always well to remember that while houses which are heavily shaded are cooler than others and the plants in them are of a greener hue, this does not mean that they are in the best condition, particularly when it comes to flowering time. It is a good plan to let the plants have a fairly good light, never mind if the foliage, especially on cattleyas, is a little pale.

Syringing.

We are at the hottest period of the

HEIGHT FOR THERMOMETER.

At what height should the thermometers be placed in the greenhouse to show the temperature of the house? H. P.

Place them four and a half to five and a half feet from the ground. The thermometers should not be unprotected, as too often seen, but ought to be placed in receptacles with an overhanging top and with sides, to prevent the sun from striking the thermometer directly. You cannot get the true shade temperature unless this protection is given. C. W.

POULTRY MANURE FOR PLANTS.

Could pure, dried and pulverized poultry manure be used in the growing of plants and flowers? H. P.

There is great danger of injury to plants by the use of dry poultry manure. It is a powerful fertilizer and must be used with great care. If used as a light top dressing, it acts as a good stimulant to plants of a robust nature. If added to the soil, give a light coating and be sure to incorporate it thoroughly with the soil. By scattering it outdoors between rows of growing plants, later running the hoe or cultivator over the ground, you will get better results from poultry manure and with less risk of damaging the plants than when it is used under glass. For such vegetable crops as tomatoes, corn, squash and melons, I have found this manure works finely, particularly for top-dressing. It can also be used to make liquid manure, but must be used quite weak. Do a little experimenting for yourself on a few plants and note results. C. W. ear, and after a broiling day a spraying overhead is refreshing to nearly all orchids. This can be given to cypripediums about the middle of the afternoon. Cattleyas are also much benefited by a spraying over, and the afternoon is the best time to apply it. Always use a fine spray nozzle; the quantity of water from an open hose is too heavy and is liable to be harmful rather than helpful.

Potting.

This is not a season when much potting can be done, but where there is a collection of orchids there are few weeks in the year when some will not require overhauling. Newly imported cattleyas, such as labiatas, which arrive late, do better if not potted until they are pushing new roots and growths. The labiatas now arriving are small and quite costly. No specimen lumps are obtainable, and if a decent looking plant is wanted several pieces must be put together. Be sure to pot firmly and water lightly until the roots become active.

Ventilation.

Cattleyas should have the top ventilators wide open practically night and day now. They cannot tolerate coddling; only when the outside minimum goes below 60 degrees need the ventilators be lowered. Cypripediums want a stuffier and moister atmosphere, but some night ventilation for them is also a benefit. Even the dendrobiums making up their growths do better if not coddled up too tightly, to say nothing of phalænopsis and other East Indian genera.

Calanthes.

Calanthes now are in vigorous growth and have, or should have, their pots full of active roots. Feeding with cow manure water twice a week will now be of decided benefit. Start with it rather weak and give somewhat stronger doses later. To give the plants every chance for development, some of the more robust ones can be elevated on pots. While it is possible to feed calanthes with chemicals, the cow manure will be found much safer. Spray the plants over each afternoon unless the weather is cold and damp. Evansville, Ind.—Karl Zeidler has purchased the store of the Evansville Floral Co.

Plymouth, Mass.—The firm of Braunecker & Schlecht has been dissolved. Fritz J. Schlecht will continue the business.

West Islip, N. Y.—D. C. Arnold & Co. have been incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000 by D. C. Arnold, H. W. Thomas and W. Wincott, of Babylon.

Dallas, Tex.—The Lang Floral & Nursery Co. sold a lot, 176x245 feet, on Bryan street, west of Adair, to the city of Dallas for $17,500. The land is to be used for park purposes.

Cortland, N. Y.—The Hike-Allen Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $20,000, to do a seed, flower and market gardening business. C. D. Allen, C. V. Hike and M. J. Hike are the incorporators.

Sleepy Eye, Minn.—L. A. Glatigny, proprietor of the Palmyre Greenhouse, has sold his property and business to A. W. Harris, who has named his place the Ish-tak-ha-ba Gardens, for the Indian chief, Sleepy Eye.

Wyncote, Pa.—Joseph Heacock, president of the company which bears his name, states that the season of 1913-14 was the best in his many years of business experience, and he specially states that it was the best year for palms. He expects the season of 1914-15 to be still larger, however.

Paola, Kan.—Charles Hagemeyer has purchased the stock and business of Mrs. W. Z. Garman and leased her greenhouse. The business will be carried on under the name of Hagemeyer Floral Co., of which Mr. Hagemeyer is the manager. The erection of another house will be begun shortly.

Lynn, Mass.—Among the hardest hit by the discovery of the city engineer that the property owners on Western avenue were encroaching on city property are Wm. Miller & Sons. Their ornamental wall with flowers planted upon it will have to be torn down and moved back to what the new survey designates as the street boundaries.

Marshalltown, Ia.—The James L. Denmead Greenhouses have leased half of the store at 123 East Main street and expect to have it fully equipped to take care of the trade by September 1. Some stock will be kept at the store, but most of the orders, for the present at any rate, will be filled from the greenhouses at 408 South Ninth street.

Columbus, O.—The greenhouse property formerly operated by Bernhardt Buehler, at the corner of Mound street and the Harrisburg pike, has been leased for five years by Frank Hardesty and Howard Shorey. There are two greenhouses and a propagating house in the establishment and the two young men expect to build up a good sized business with these.

La Junta, Colo.—The B. C. Robinson Floral Co. has been purchased by the Valley Floral Co., of which C. E. Braun is the head.

West Hartford, Conn.—A new company has been incorporated here, under the name of the W. W. Thomson Co., to take over the greenhouses of W. W. Thomson and those of the Paul Thomson estate. The officers of the corporation are: President and treasurer, W. W. Thomson; vice-president, R. Roy Thomson; secretary, Herman J. Miller.

Clinton, Ind.—Herman G. Hershey has purchased the Sunnyside Greenhouses, which he leased a year ago and has been conducting with great success. He is planning to open a store here soon. He is also doing a good business at Marshall, Ill., where he resumed possession of his greenhouses after they had been in charge of a tenant for some months.

Charlotte, Mich.—The greenhouses of William Breitmeyer have been purchased by Ray A. Wietzke, of Owosso, who has been engaged in the florists' trade in that town. Mr. Wietzke, who has just recently married, has brought his bride to Charlotte and taken charge of the business. Mr. and Mrs. Breitmeyer have no definite plans at present, but expect to move from here shortly.

Hightstown, N. J.—Ferris C. Waite has taken over the greenhouses of Jos. H. Black, Sons & Co., who will retain the nursery.

Ogden, Utah.—It is estimated that the damages resulting from the fire at the greenhouses of B. Van der Schuit when they were struck by lightning July 15 amount to nearly $400. The furnace room and work room suffered most from the fire, while many panes of glass in the greenhouses were broken.

Salina, Kan.—A man of about 65 years, employed by Edward Tatro July 20 for light work about the greenhouses, committed suicide four days later by taking a dose of Paris green. The man gave his last address as Pine Bluff, Ark., and said he had no relatives. He had only $2.40 in cash and a trunk containing his belongings. Mr. Tatro reports the work on his new range of eight greenhouses progressing rapidly.

Newton, Ia.—Mrs. James Lister has sold out and Wm. F. Behring, formerly of Davenport, Ia., has charge of the business. The business was established over forty years ago and has grown, as it earned a warm spot in the hearts of the people of Newton. The greenhouses and one acre of ground have been sold, while Mrs. Lister retains the home and the rest of the ground in the tract. About October 1 Mrs. Lister, with her daughter, Anna E. Moss, who has been associated with her in the business, and her son, Sidney Moss, will go to Washington, near Portland, Ore., and will remain there indefinitely, as Mrs. Lister needs the change of climate and the rest.

South Bend, Ind.—W. D. Rettic says if business keeps up as well as it has of late, he will make some improvements, in the way of new buildings.

Newcastle, Ind.—Myer Heller, president of the South Park Floral Co., arrived here June 26, after spending several weeks among rose growers in England, France and Ireland.

West Grove, Pa.—Robert Pyle, president of the Conard & Jones Co., will spend the month of August in New England. Of course he will be at Boston during convention week.

Houston, Tex.—George M. Cosh is on a trip to Europe and while abroad intends to make a study of flower shows there, in order to get suggestions for the state show here next November.

Denver, Colo.—David Beugley, of the Elitch-Long Greenhouses, and W. T. Whitehead, of the Haines Seed Co., were judges at the annual sweet pea contest conducted by the Denver Post.

Anderson, Ind.—J. S. Stuart, of Stuart & Haugh, who is state vice-president for northern Indiana, is circularizing the trade in the interest of the S. A. F. He believes northern Indiana will show up as strongly as any part of the country when it comes to the prosperity and growth of the trade this year.

Coffeyville, Kan.—Mrs. W. G. Coupland, of the Forest Park Floral Co., is spending the summer at Eureka Springs, Ark.

Erie, Pa.—L. A. Spoden has obtained a permit to build another greenhouse at his range on Parade street, at an estimated cost of $800.

Groton, Mass.—Herman Huebner is now in Europe on a trip that is a combination of business and pleasure. He expects to return about September 1.

Beacon, N. Y.—Benj. Hammond, secretary of the American Rose Society, who is a leading citizen here, has organized 171 boys and girls into a home gardening club, to compete for prizes.

Wichita, Kan.—F. Kuechenmeister and wife recently returned from a five weeks' vacation at the Colorado health resorts, during which they attended the Elks' golden jubilee at Denver, and Mr. Kuechenmeister is waiting for rain, so that carnation benching can be hustled along.

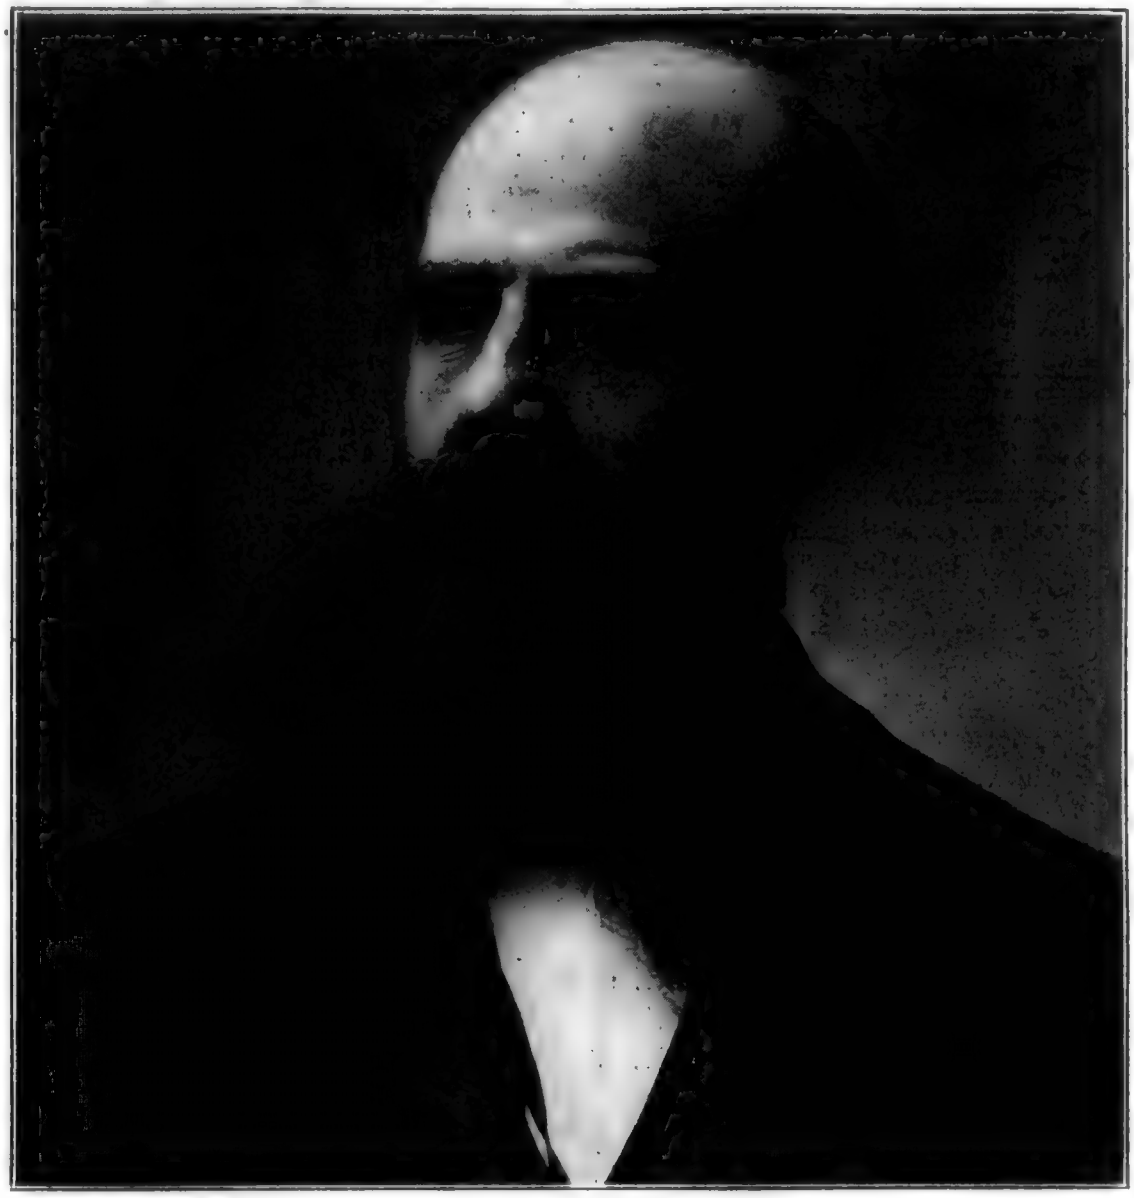
Boulder, Colo.—Commercial growers did their share to make the annual flower carnival a success. Irises and daisies from the Rockmont Nurseries, phlox from the Sutherland Nursery and roses and gladioli from S. Knudsen, proprietor of the North Boulder Greenhouses, received honorable mention.

OBITUARY

Theodore Bock.

Theodore Bock, one of the best known older florists in the United States, ended his life by shooting himself in the head at the home of his brother, George Bock, in Hamilton, O., Monday, July 27. Despondency as the result of ill health caused the deed. Mr. Bock was 68 years of age. He retired from business a year ago, the Heiser Nursery & Floral Co. buying most of the stock and greenhouses. Since then he had been doing nothing, his failing health not permitting.

Theodore Bock's name has been appended to many well written and valuable articles which have appeared in The Review. His services were frequently called for as a judge at flower shows in Indianapolis, Chicago and Cincinnati and it was as a chrysanthemum grower that he made his greatest success. Several good varieties owe their origin to him. He was in business in Hamilton twenty-seven years, catering to a general retail and cemetery trade. Before that he was employed as a florist in the White House greenhouses under Presidents Arthur, Hayes and Garfield. He was not married, but is survived by several relatives in Germany, of which he was a native; in Canada, and in his home city.



Thomas Mansfield.

The unexpected death is reported of Thomas Mansfield, for more than twenty years a florist at Lockport, N. Y., and for a long term a subscriber to The Review.

Mr. Mansfield was 75 years of age. He was about his business as usual July 23, but on the following morning was stricken by heart disease and expired almost immediately, in his home adjoining the greenhouses at 481 Hawley street. He is survived by his wife, four daughters and one son—Mrs. Charles Fraser, Lockport; Mrs. William Midgley, Loraine, O.; the Misses Mary and Salina Mansfield and William Mansfield, who will carry on the business their father had conducted successfully for two decades. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon, July 26, at the home. The interment was in Glenwood cemetery. There were many present, and many flowers.

Ruby Bartholomew Leslie.

The death, July 23, of Mrs. Ruby Bartholomew Leslie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bartholomew, of Dayton, O., comes as a great surprise and shock to her many friends. The deceased had been connected with the florists' trade a good many years and leaves a large circle of acquaintances to mourn her loss. Mrs. Leslie was born at Lily Lake, Ill., and July 14, 1903, when 18 years of age, removed to Dayton with her parents. She was associated with the Miami Floral Co., as designer and bookkeeper, for ten years. For the last two years she had assisted her father in his business. Mrs. Leslie was also an earnest and active worker in the church. Besides her husband, Claud Leslie, she leaves a little daughter 2 weeks old. The funeral services were held Saturday afternoon, July 25, from the residence, 1117 South Broadway, and from Miami U. B. Chapel. Burial was at Woodland cemetery. K. E. Y.

Theodore Bock.

Gottlieb Steinbrenner.

Gottlieb Steinbrenner died July 26, at the age of 72, at his home in Cleveland, O. Born in Wurtemberg, Germany, he came to America in 1874 and soon after settled in Bucyrus, O., where he worked for his brother for one year, after which he operated a truck farm on his own account. In 1892 he removed to Cleveland and worked nine years at another trade, starting in the florists' business in 1900, at 7710 Loraine avenue, where he conducted a general greenhouse business till 1912, when he turned the establishment over to his son. Funeral services took place July 29. Interment was at West Park cemetery. F. A. F.

Martin M. Cummings.

Martin M. Cummings, of Reading, Mass., who formerly carried on an extensive florists' business, died Sunday morning, July 12, at 4 o'clock, from cerebral hemorrhage and hardening of the arteries. He was born seventy-eight years ago in Ireland. He is survived by a son, John M. Cummings, of Reading. Mass was celebrated by Rev. Francis Walsh, Tuesday morning, July 14, at St. Agnes' church. Burial was in Laurel Hill cemetery.

George H. Keyes.

George H. Keyes, president of the recently organized Meneray-Omaha Nursery Co., of Omaha, Neb., died early Tuesday morning, July 14, after a lingering illness, at his home, at 3222 Blondo street, Omaha. He was 59 years old and is survived by his wife. Burial took place Friday, July 17, in Forest Lawn cemetery.

RED SPIDER ON HARDY PHLOX.

Will you kindly let me know what I can do to get rid of red spider on hardy phlox? I have been bothered with the pest for the last two seasons. I have sprayed three times this season with kerosene emulsion and also with strong tobacco tea. Last season I gathered all the stems and leaves in fall and burned them, thinking I was rid of the pest, but this year it is as bad as last. As I grow a lot of phlox and cannot sell it when it is covered with this pest, the loss is heavy. R. M.

Once red spider has got a secure foothold on hardy phlox, it is difficult, if not impossible, to clean it out. Spraying, such as you have done, is the best remedy, added to pressure of water from a spray nozzle. Spider usually attacks plants in periods of drought, and when they are moist at the root and growing freely it rarely does much harm. If you can water your phlox artificially, so that the roots will be moist, you can banish the spider. A mulch will aid in keeping the roots cool and moist in hot, dry weather. Sprayings from the hose will refresh the plants and prove distasteful to red spider. Give the phlox a deep, rich, moist soil and water freely; then you will not have much red spider.

Waterbury, Conn.—Ralph Dileo, on Hamden avenue, has obtained a permit to build a greenhouse.

FLORISTS' REVIEW

Established, 1897, by G. L. GRANT.

Published every Thursday by THE FLORISTS PUBLISHING CO.,
530-560 Caxton Building,
508 South Dearborn St., Chicago.
Tele., Harrison 5429.
Registered cable address,
Florview, Chicago.

Entered as second class matter Dec. 3, 1897, at the post-office at Chicago, Ill., under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscription price, $1.00 a year. To Canada, $2.00; to Europe, $3.00.

Advertising rates quoted upon request. Only strictly trade advertising accepted.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1914: President, Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis; vice-president, Patrick Welch, Boston; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Thirtieth annual convention, Boston, Mass., August 18 to 21, 1914.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THE average salesman says what he must to get the order, while the average advertiser does his level best to fill mail orders in a way that will bring a repeat.

WHAT this trade wants is not so much better business as it is better business methods. Careful business methods conserve what one has; careless methods fritter it away.

GIVE good stock and good service and you will be recalled favorably, even if you do charge more than the other fellow. Cut the quality and service to fit the price and you lose, for quality is remembered long after price is forgotten.

IT is one of the interesting features of the year to date that florists generally have enjoyed a better business than has been the case in most other lines. Beyond question, there has been a sharp recession in general business—the decreases in railroad gross earnings are enough to prove that—but the florists' trade has, on the whole, been as good as ever. The decreases in certain places, due to acute local conditions, have been fully made up for in other sections, where the appreciation of flowers is spreading rapidly.

WHAT IS ADVERTISING?

Here is a new definition of advertising that to florists will seem particularly apt:

"Advertising—the force which enables the modern business man to disregard the distance between himself and his prospective customers."

TREATING ALL ALIKE.

What would you think of a florist who took ice from every iceman in his town—just because they were icemen?

Yet it would be much more sensible than the policy of advertisers who give an order to every publication that asks for it—without regard to circulation. "Give" is used advisedly.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

TWO YEARS.

Crossley, Robert, Mansfield, Pa.
Lutz, Ernest L., Boonville, Ind.
Langohr, M., Bozeman, Mont.
Wealthy Avenue Floral Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.

OUR EUROPEAN REPRESENTATIVE

Early in the morning of July 2 1 made a call at the Berlin Flower Market, which consists of a large building, with no partitions, but divided into small stalls where the growers themselves sell their products. The market contains a comprehensive selection of really fine plants. In the cut flower department, roses constituted the bulk of the stock. With few exceptions, these are grown outdoors and are short and stocky. I found some excellent Kaiserin and Killarney in white, Ulrich Brunner in red and Caroline Testout in pink.

In the afternoon I visited the greenhouses of W. Löhr, at Nowawes, as I had noticed that his roses were among the best in the Berlin market. This gentleman has extensive rose plantings, mostly outdoors, and all arranged so as to be watered with a sprinkler system, as artificial watering seems to be essential for the sandy soil in this locality. Mr. Löhr married a London lady. He speaks fairly good English and can also read it, so he asked me which was the best American trade paper. Upon my recommendation of The Review, he asked me to order it for him, which I herewith do.

Saturday, the glorious Fourth, we celebrated with the American colony at Gruenau, a suburb of Berlin, and next day we started on our big tour down to Mailand, or Milan, Italy.

Albert F. Amling.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Business is decidedly quiet, more quiet than it has been at any time this month or this season. With few exceptions, everybody is taking in less money than a year ago at this time; perhaps not much less, but there is no snap in business and typical vacation conditions prevail.

The supply of stock is a great deal heavier than it ever before has been in summer; indeed, the supply this week is much heavier than the market ever before has had in the last week of July. Probably it is the unusually heavy supply that is responsible for the weak state of the market. The demand this summer has not increased anything like in proportion to the supply. The result is that prices suffer; one must handle, at wholesale, considerably more flowers than a year ago to realize the same money. The depreciation is particularly heavy on roses. Last year good roses were not particularly abundant at this season and those

RUSSELL

WE ARE READY FOR YOUR ORDERS

THERE is no rose that has been so popular in the last few weeks as the new Mrs. Russell. Try some. We are prepared to fill your orders. Also large crops of Milady, the best red; Killarney Brilliant, the highly colored Killarney, and Bulgarie, the widely popular light pink. These roses will prove big sellers for you.

BEAUTIES

We shall be glad to keep you supplied with good summer Beauties—any length. We ALWAYS have large cuts of Beauties and you can get them here every day in the year.

ASTERS

We recommend this stock as quite out of the ordinary for this early date and dry season. Grown under irrigation, these Asters are not only the best in market, but the best we ever have seen at this time of year. White, pink, lavender. Try some. You'll want more. Of course we have short Asters, too, for work.

GLADIOLI

We do not handle the mixed stock dumped on the market by growers of bulbs. Our Glads are grown by specialists who grow for cut flowers only and who start with the right varieties, grow them right, cut them right and pack them right. Plenty of America, King and Augusta.

FANCY LILIES

These are home-grown Lilies, true Giganteums, grown from perfectly healthy bulbs. They will reach you in excellent condition and make money for you. Can supply in quantity. Also can furnish Rubrums and Auratums of fine quality.

VALLEY

We always have Valley—the famous Chicago Market Brand.

ORCHIDS

You can get here as many fine Cattleyas as you need.

NEW FANCY FERNS

By ordering of us you can get all the Hardy Cut Ferns you need. Our stock is good; we never ship anything but the best on the market.

who had them were doing excellent business. This year there are roses almost everywhere and the grower who is cutting only the same quantity as last July is taking in not more than two-thirds the money, probably not much more than half the money in most cases.

The principal change in the market since last report is the great increase in the supply of asters. Practically every wholesale house now is choked with the lower grades of these. The best asters are selling fairly well, but there is an enormous supply of stock which can be used only for the cheapest work—small flowers, open centers, dirty color and short tems. There are thousands of asters for which no offer is refused, 10 cents per bunch being an excellent price. The dry weather appears to be responsible for the large proportion of low-grade and almost unsalable stock.

Gladioli also have come in heavily. The four popular varieties, in the order named, are America, Mrs. King, Augusta and Pink Beauty. This week there are heavy shipments of mixed stock from those whose business is the growing of gladiolus bulbs. These spikes are roughly handled, packed in barrels or big cases, and are not to be compared with the carefully handled stock of named varieties grown by the cut flower specialists. But the low-grade stock pulls down the price of all the rest.

There has been a further shortening of Beauties. The supply today is equal to the demand, but is only a small fraction of what it was a few weeks ago. On the other hand, there has been a large increase in the supply of Mrs. Russell. This rose has been planted heavily this season and has sprung into great popularity. Most of the growers who have it are cutting in quantity this week. In the last few days there has been considerable deterioration in the quality of Russell. The flowers are smaller and the edges of the petals are faded, apparently the result of the hot weather. The rose still sells better than anything else on the list. Second in request probably is Bulgarie. Sunburst sells well, but is not in large supply.

The abundance of asters has eased the demand for white roses. Killarney Brilliant comes stronger every day and sells better than Killarney. There is little call for red roses.

Carnations are in light supply, but nobody misses them. There is some field-grown stock, good flowers, though small. Giganteum lilies are abundant and selling at low prices. Auratums are more plentiful, with rubrums less so. Valley and orchids sell steadily for special work.

The green goods market is even more quiet than the cut flower market. The price of smilax has eased off.

Various Notes.

The H. A. Fisher Co., of Kalamazoo, filed a petition in bankruptcy July 24, scheduling assets of small amount and liabilities of $18,635.81, as told on page 12, of this issue. It is reported this action followed pressure by two Chicago wholesalers to collect their accounts. Several months ago the Fisher concern became unable to meet its obligations and a majority of the local creditors appointed a committee consisting of P. C. Schupp, John Zech and Paul R. Klingsporn to handle the case. They secured a payment of twelve and one-half per cent, the money being furnished by a relative, in return for which further time and, in some cases, further credit was given. Not being willing to let the matter run farther, two creditors last week withdrew their claims from the hands of the local committee and started independent action. At the time the trouble first developed it was stated that the largest creditor had accepted Mr. Fisher's personal note for his account and that the other indebtedness on the market was approximately $9,600. This was reduced twelve and one-half per cent by the cash payment in February, but it is understood further credits extended have put the total about where it was before.

Arthur Pasternik, of Bassett & Washburn's, is at Saugatuck, Mich., for two weeks.

The anual show of the North Shore Horticultural Society, at Lake Forest was made much of by the society editors of the city papers, which probably will result in the gardeners being given more support by their wealthy employers.

O. W. Frese reports a letter from H. Papenburg, of New Decatur, Ala., with reference to the City Park Greenhouses there. These greenhouses recently have been operated by E. O. Fisher, who bought considerable stock in this market, as well as of other florists through the country. When Mr. Fisher left New Decatur, H. Papenburg, according to his letter, was obliged to take over the greenhouses to secure himself on a financial transaction. He now is running the greenhouses, but he is a hardware merchant, not a florist. He is looking for a partner who knows the business.

"Uses and Abuses of Cemeteries" is announced as the subject for discussion at the meeting of the Retail Florists' Association August 3. The title does not quite express the idea. The trade gradually is awakening to the fact that the best that can be said for the cemeteries is that they are competitors of the florists in the wholesale markets; they nearly all refuse to permit a florist to do work in the cemetery for lot owners.

The daily papers insist that Peter Reinberg, as a candidate for president of the board of county commissioners, will represent the hope of the Hearst-Harrison faction of the democracy at the approaching primary election. Florists, without regard to party, are anxious for Mr. Reinberg's success at the polls.

After watching the operation of the new express rates for some months, E. E. Pieser has come to the conclusion that on the whole the new rates will not save anything for florists. There are many instances of reduction in rates, but Mr. Pieser has found enough increases to fully offset all reductions. As an illustration, the new practice of billing shipments of Massachusetts ferns at the exact weight instead of at the even weight has added about 25 cents per case to the cost.

F. F. Scheel, of Shermerville, is one of the carnation growers who reports having made more money in the season of 1913-14 than in 1912-13. His place, under his management five years, contains 36,000 feet of glass and is in first-class condition. His stock is sold by Kyle & Foerster.

that arrangements have been made for the association members who will attend the S. A. F. convention at Boston to make the trip on President Wirth's special train, leaving Chicago on the Lake Shore railroad at 8 p. m. August 16. This is the train that will carry the Chicago Florists' Club and the delegations from many western, northern and southwestern cities. G. K. Thompson, general agent for the Lake Shore, says he has received a request from the road's San Francisco agent to reserve seven berths for the party coming from there to try to take the 1915 convention back with them.

Frank M. Johnson will combine business and pleasure on a trip east in the interest of the A. L. Randall Co. The pleasure will come in taking Mrs. Johnson for her first visit to New York and Boston, which latter point will be reached during the convention.

A. L. Vaughan and family are planning to visit W. E. Lynch at his farm home, near Springfield, Mass., following the S. A. F. convention at Boston.

Carl Ickes is much pleased with the start made by the Ickes-Braun Mill Co. Although the factory building is not yet quite finished, several cars of greenhouse material have been shipped. The office was finished this week and the telephone installed—Humboldt 11.

One of the cases pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission concerns the freight rate on coal burned at the Peter Reinberg greenhouses. As the big establishments have grown, the freight on fuel has become so important an item of the yearly expense that it is well worth watching.

E. C. Amling returned this week from a ten days' automobile trip that extended as far as La Crosse, Wis. H. Wehrman and John Michelsen went with him as far as Devil's Lake, where they picked up H. N. Bruns.

Jack Beyers has returned from a brief excursion to Utah and is employed temporarily by Zech & Mann.

August Poehlmann, Adolph Poehlmann and their wives are planning to attend the Boston convention. Possibly John Poehlmann and wife may go. T. E. Waters will start a couple of days early, to stage the company's exhibit.

Miss Selma Allenbaugh has taken the place made vacant in the office of the E. C. Amling Co. by the resignation of Miss Adelaide Amling, whose marriage will take place in the early autumn.

At Winterson's Seed Store remodeling is in progress, the entrance to the cut flower and supply departments in the basement being moved back to the building line, to conform to city regulations. The Wabash avenue entrance of Weiland & Risch and the stairway to the store of the J. B. Deamud Co., both in the same building as Winterson's, also extend beyond the building line, but the agent has informed these florists that changes here will be postponed until the city takes action to compel them.

At the store of Wietor Bros., C. A. Alles says the call for young stock of chrysanthemums still is brisk, in spite of the lateness of the season.

Winterson's Seed Store received its first shipment of Harrisii lily bulbs July 27.

A. G. Smith, of Benton Harbor, Mich., is shipping large quantities of gladioli to this market, principally America.

Charles Klehm says he can afford to experiment with the balance of his peonies, having already taken in more money than he did in the whole of last season. He intends to string out

Mr. Kummer reports a fine season and is expecting an increase the coming winter.

BOSTON.

The Market.

There is but little of an encouraging nature to report on market conditions. Demand is at about its lowest ebb, and fortunately, receipts have fallen off considerably. Most of the carnation men are busy replanting and are out of the market temporarily. The quality of such as are now coming in is better than a year ago, but they are largely neglected when good asters are procurable. Some really good roses are coming in, but the majority are short-stemmed and have little substance. Specially good just now are Cardinal, Taft, J. L. Mock, Double White Killarney, Killarney Queen and Russell. That one-time favorite, Kaiserin, now is little seen, Double White Killarney having largely displaced it, and few Carnots are seen. Sweet peas are shorter stemmed. They cleaned up well July 25, but, with other flowers, hung fire the remainder of last week. There still are too many gladioli and prices are low. Valley goes slowly, also lilies of all sorts. Gypsophila, double bachelor's buttons and Chinese larkspurs meet with a fair sale. Gardenias are few, and for cattleyas the demand continues slight. As yet shipping trade to the fashionable shore and mountain resorts is much below that of other years.

Important Sale of Peonies.

E. J. Shaylor, of Auburndale, the well-known local peony specialist, called up the writer July 20 and informed him that he had sold his collection of peonies of over 150 varieties to T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., of West Newbury, Mass. Mr. Shaylor started peony growing about ten years ago and got together what was one of the choicest collections in America. His exhibits at the Boston shows were always noteworthy, and I am glad to say that he still is likely to exhibit occasionally, as he retained his seedlings, some thousands in number, and a plant of each named variety. He will not engage, however, in the sale of peonies again before 1917, but will give much care to his seedlings, some of which have already proved to be gems.

The members of T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., who have secured this superb collection, are known all over America as great peony fanciers. The veteran, T. C. Thurlow, father of the members of the purchasing firm, did a great work with peonies, and his sons are following in his footsteps. With the addition of the Shaylor purchase, they will have an almost unrivaled collection at West Newbury, Mass., which has long been the Mecca for lovers of choice hardy plants. Only a few weeks ago Messrs. Thurlow secured a gold medal from the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, and their many friends and well wishers are glad that they had the courage to so greatly strengthen their collection. Most of the peonies purchased will be moved to West Newbury in Convention Notes.

Everything seems to be coming along swimmingly for the S. A. F. convention. The various committees are busy at work and no stone is being left unturned to make the coming meeting the greatest ever. Boston's summer temperature is much lower than that of New York, Philadelphia, Washington and other big eastern cities, and the heat that is oppressive in inland cities is always tempered here with a refreshing east wind. Visitors can therefore reasonably anticipate comfortable climatic conditions while in the Hub, and even if it is a little warm, the broad Atlantic is at our doors, where the breezes always are cool and refreshing at this season.

The convention garden is coming along splendidly. The growth made by the plants since a previous visit early in July has been really surprising. The Japanese garden of Farquhar

Florists' Display Refrigerator

The McCray keeps flowers fresh longer than any other. Its system of refrigeration maintains an even temperature of the proper degree for the preservation of cut flowers and entirely eliminates the great loss that is caused by imperfect refrigeration.

The McCray is built to permit an attractive and inviting display of your flowers, its various compartments being of different sizes to accommodate the different lengths of cut flowers.

The interior linings are of either opal glass, bevel plate mirror or white enamel and are very handsome and easy to clean. The exterior may be of any finish desired to match the interior of your woodwork or other fixtures.

The handsome appearance of the McCray is an improvement to any store and is a great stimulant for increased sales and pleased customers. Investigate the McCray and ascertain why they are the best for florists.

ciety will be held August 8 and 9. A splendid exhibition is assured.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ward, of Montvale, have been enjoying a vacation at Long Beach, Gloucester. They still continue to make small shipments to the market.

W. H. Donohue, of the Boston Cut Flower Co., left July 25 for six weeks' vacation, to be spent in Maine, with headquarters at Poland Springs.

William J. Patterson, of Wollaston, is the first local grower to send dahlias in quantity to the wholesale market.

At the store of H. M. Robinson & Co., J. L. Mock is much liked as a summer rose. Flowers on 24-inch to 30-inch stems here carried splendid flowers. Other good sellers are Taft, Killarney Queen, Beauty and Double White Killarney.

George W. Homer, the ever genial and courteous assistant manager at the Boston Flower Exchange, started on his vacation July 27. He will stay on the Massachusetts coast, fishing and swimming being his favorite pastimes.

Norris F. Comley has eighteen houses planted with cucumbers at his Burlington establishment, marketing an average of 100 boxes daily. A hybrid between White Spine and Telegraph he thinks well of. He has five other houses planted with Terrace Hall tomatoes.

H. S. Rogers, of Penn's, left July 25 for the moosehead region of Maine, where the big land-locked salmon trout and other members of the finny tribe abound. The duck farm window at Penn's continues to draw interested crowds.

Vernon T. Sherwood, of Charlestown, N. H., and late of Boston, is to enter the commercial business there, growing carnations, bulbs and a general line of stock.

Jackson Dawson, of the Arnold Arboretum, hopes that many of the visitors to the S. A. F. convention will call on him. He will be glad to show them everything of interest in this most noted of American arboretums.

J. L. Russell, of the force of Joseph Breck & Sons, has been visiting his old home in County Down, Ireland. Later he will visit some of the English seed-growing establishments and hopes to reach Boston in time for the convention.

Carter's Tested Seeds, Inc., report good business for the first season. At present, grass seeds are in active demand. J. F. Thomas and W. J. Collins are taking good care of the exhibit in the convention garden, which is quite attractive.

Large crowds of visitors are already looking over the convention garden. The daily press is giving it much publicity. Mayor Curley is quite enthusiastic over the garden and its possibilities.

Frank J. Dolansky, while the cattleya market is at its low ebb, is handling quantities of well-grown rubber plants and other foliage subjects at his stand in the wholesale market.

The Market.

The progress of the summer season is marked by changes in the cut flower market that came slowly but surely. Asters and gladioli are the ruling flowers in these closing days of July. When something choice is wanted there are roses, orchids and valley, while Easter lilies are as fine as in winter. Asters are abundant. The early varieties are in full crop. They bring less money than a week ago. The market is critical and good flowers are not so easy to find as lower grade stock. Gladioli are too plentiful. The novelties and finer varieties sell well, but the ordinary stock is not at all easy to market at any price. Roses are less plentiful than a week ago. This is particularly noticeable in the better grades. Beauties can still be had, both from the east and local places. Maryland is in good supply. Some of them are fine for the season. The novelties afford a welcome variety. Carnations are over with many growers; a few still have good stock. Lilium rubrum is a pleasing addition. It is a good keeper. Valley has been neglected, but Easter lilies are good stock. There is a scarcity of shipping orders and a little local business is about all that is done.

The round trip will cost $12; state rooms will be extra, from $1 to $2 each way.

The Florex Gardens.

The excellent results after the herculean efforts expended on the big house represent only part of the season's progress at North Wales. A new carnation house, begun in February and completed in May, is filled with a promising lot of young plants. They are mostly standard varieties, with the addition of Ruth, their own seedling. Another house is being lengthened with an additional 130 feet, to double its present capacity. Two new horizontal return tubular boilers have been added, a manure tank and a water heating system. A pretty good record for one season. The carnation plants are divided between indoors and the field. Those grown indoors are set close together in the benches. The new house planted from these benches is filled with double rows. Every other row will be lifted when the next house is ready for planting. Indoor culture is greatly preferred to outdoor.

Prince d'Arenberg, Mrs. George Shawyer and Mavourneen have been added to the rose list. Mavourneen is a sport from Killarney, an even, deep pink, considered beautiful by many expert judges. Sweet peas, snapdragons and Asparagus plumosus are all grown in quantity proportionate to the size of the place. The asparagus is in particularly fine shape. A bed of outdoor sweet peas bore freely throughout June and still is doing well. The dairy, run as an adjunct to the greenhouses for the sake of the manure, is steadily progressing. There are thirty-one Holstein cows and heifers. Milk is shipped to Philadelphia. A silo has been built and large crops of hay and oats have been raised for the cows and horses. Conditions generally denote activity.

The Market.

Last week closed in the midst of the hottest wave of the season, with business practically dead, rose shipments largely small buds and short-stemmed, and the retail department of the trade literally "closed for repairs." In addition to all this, the grasshoppers and the army worms are getting in their deadly work, and New York state and, in fact, the whole eastern section of the country is being devastated by these pests, causing incalculable damage.

As to the cut flower market, one saving fact is the Newport season, which is at its height, and this, with the demand for the steamer trade, keeps away stagnation and uses about everything first-class that arrives. There is no difficulty in disposing of all the special Beauties and teas that arrive, but these are few. Most of the rose stock shows the effect of the extreme heat and is almost unsalable. The select Mock, Shawyer, Sunburst, Double White Killarney, Double Pink Killarney and Killarney Brilliant are improving and bring fairly satisfactory prices. No high-grade carnations are arriving. Most of the stock is sleepy. Anything at all choice brings $1 to $1.50 per hundred. The greater part of the shipments do not merit over 50 cents per hundred.

There seems to be no end to the lily supply this season. Even the best of these in quantity seldom go above $3 per hundred. In quality the high standard remains. Rubrums also are fine. Valley is abundant and prices are receding.

There seems to be still an oversupply of orchids and a large number of varieties. There is no recession in the quantity of the sweet pea arrivals, but few sell at prices encouraging to the growers. Asters are already "too numerous to mention" and prices have receded to the dog-days level. The gladiolus flood has already burst its barriers. Every wholesale house seemed to be supplied fully on Saturday. The demand for pails in which to hold them was the largest ripple of the overflow.

W. Z. PURNELL, Snow Hill, Md.

joys a daily vacation at seashore resorts.

Chas. Miller, of Walter Sheridan's force, is spending three weeks with his family in the mountains.

Charles Schenck and family are at Rockaway Beach.

Thomas Martin, with Traendly & Schenck, will motor a week at Rockaway and two weeks in Dutchess county in his own machine.

Frank Traendly and family will be at Rowayton, Conn., until the convention.

Fred Kervan and family return this week from a two weeks' holiday at Walden, N. Y.

P. Donigan, of M. C. Ford's force, is off for the Adirondacks, and Charles Schinnel and family returned from their vacation at Delaware Water Gap, Monday, July 20.

Peter Duff, of Orange, N. J., is in Scotland, but is expected to return in time for the gardeners' convention at Boston during S. A. F. week.

William Kessler's store, at 113 West Twenty-eighth street, is rapidly being redecorated and rearranged for the fall opening. Mr. Kessler is back from the mountains.

Peter F. McKenney is at Atlantic City, recovering his strength after an operation for appendicitis.

The store at 111 West Twenty-eighth street is being arranged rapidly for the opening of the Greek Wholesale Cut Flower Co., August 1.

Mrs. Paul Meconi, who is enjoying the summer at her old home in Germany, is expected to return early in September.

The annual garden party of the employees and friends of Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., was held Saturday evening, July 25, in the spacious grounds, rose gardens and buildings of the firm. Hundreds of Japanese lanterns and electric lights added charm and brilliancy to the general decorative effects. Fred Atkins, Mrs. Atkins and the committee extended a hearty welcome to the 200 guests. Refreshments, music and dancing were on tap until midnight. L. C. Bobbink is in Europe, and cabled greetings. The whole affair was most enjoyable and reflected great credit on Charles Atkins, Miss Hennesy, Leo Osternei and their committee of management.

George Blake, of Bonnet & Blake, Brooklyn, was married July 15 in Rochester, the bride being his deceased wife's sister. They returned from their honeymoon in Canada July 27.

John Lewis Childs reports that his new whitest white gladiolus, Snow King, is to be disseminated in 1915.

Walter Siebrecht is pitching into preparations for the autumn season, after a six weeks' holiday with his family at Lake George and the Adirondacks.

J. Austin Shaw.

The building at 129 West Twenty-eighth street, occupied by the Growers' Cut Flower Co., has been sold by I. Randolph Jacobs and Everett Jacobs to Lee J. Kreshover.

William Scharf, of A. M. Westwood's staff, is spending his vacation of two weeks at his father's place at Bayshore, L. I., and cruising about the Great South bay. William Tripp, also with A. M. Westwood, has returned from his vacation of two weeks at Dorchester, Mass.

Seven flower and fruit merchants doing business on Vesey and Barclay streets, between Broadway and Church street, were fined $10 each in the Centre street police court last week, on evidence furnished by Howard Birnbaum, superintendent of complaints in the office of Borough President Marks, who is on a crusade against sidewalk-obstructing merchants.

Allentown, Pa.—Lewis S. Baker is adding a greenhouse to his range on Turner street.

Opelika, Ala.—The Opelika Floral Co., owned by Forney Renfro, is under the management of A. H. Jackman. Little outdoor stock has been available so far this season, as there were three months at a stretch without rain. Every crop except cotton has suffered accordingly.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Gentlemen:

During the past year I paid you $18.20 for a half inch advertisement in the Retail Florists Department of The Review. I received through this small advertisement, from January 1, 1913, to December 31, 1913, orders to the amount of $566.00. They came by mail and telegraph from New York to San Francisco and from New Orleans to Minneapolis. Since I allowed the senders 20%, the record is as follows:

Total value of orders	$566.00
Less 20% allowed senders.. .. .	113.20
Net value of orders..... .:.	452.80

Here is an addition of $452.80 in business which could not otherwise have been obtained and at an expense of only $18.20.

Since my advertisement appeared only in The Review it goes to show what the retail florists through the country lose if they do not use this medium of advertising It also goes to show that The Review is not only there with a big "R" but that it has three more big "R's" - Readers - Reliability - Results!

Yours respectfully,
J J Beneke

The Southwestern Market.

Business at the wholesale houses continues about on the usual summer level, for the local trade only, as shipping trade has lost out completely these hot days. Light-colored stock had a good demand, as the large buyers had considerable funeral work last week. The feature of the market was good receipts of asters, not of the fancy grades, but just ordinary sorts in all colors. The supply of roses at the wholesale houses has been large. There was a good supply of Mrs. Russell and Killarney Brilliant, and also of extra good Beauties in all lengths. The great bulk of the stock, however, consisted of Killarney and Kaiserin. These are becoming better each week as to stem and flower. Carnations are exceedingly scarce; that is, the fancy sorts, but the ordinary grades are plentiful. Gladiolus spikes are coming in heavily. America, Chicago White, King and Augusta had an excellent demand, but the market contains thousands of the common sorts and these are selling cheaply; almost any price will buy them in thousand lots. Easter lilies and Shasta daisies had an excellent demand. Our growers still are praying for a few days of rain, which would do a world of good to outdoor stock. Outside of ferns and asparagus, there was little demand for anything in the green line.

The Picnic.

The event of the year among the florists took place at Ramona park July 22. Mr. J. Pluvius behaved and Old Sol was on the job early; so perfect weather greeted the florists, nearly 400 of whom attended, with their wives, families and friends. It was by far the best attended picnic the club has ever held. The trustees in charge of the arrangements had everything in readiness when the crowd began to arrive. Great credit is due them for this, the most successful and enjoyable of all the club's picnics.

The various athletic events, sixteen in number, created more excitement and interest than ever among the younger folks, and the old ones, too, exhibited more than usual interest in these events.

There were large entries in all the ladies' events and four or five heats were necessary in some of the classes. The tug of war for the ladies and that for the men were especially exciting, as also was the chicken race. But the most exciting of all was the baseball game. One team was made up of retailers and the other of wholesalers. Excitement ran to a high pitch when the score was 4 to 0 in favor of the wholesalers, and in the fourth inning the retailers made eight runs. Umpires Newcomb and Gorly had a hard time clearing the field of the crowd, whose sympathy was evidently with the retailers. The great pitching of Edgar Sanders held the wholesalers to five runs in all. George Schriefer, of the wholesalers, also pitched winning ball in all but one inning, when the big crowd of retailers got his goat and batted out eight runs, all that the retailers got in the five innings played. The catching of Oliver Sanders for the retailers and of E. Ganz for the wholesalers was highly commended. Two big league scouts were at the game looking over the talent. Charlie Barrett, the Browns' chief scout, was much taken with the Sanders brothers' batting and will report them to Manager Rickey.

A fine band of music kept the big crowd in good humor and the young folks busy in the dancing. This, with boating, fishing and games of all kinds, kept up until midnight. Everybody remarked that this day would be long remembered by all.

The results of the various athletic events were as follows:

Seventy-five-yard dash for men, directed by Al. Gumz—K. Ogle, first; Oscar Ruff, second.

Backward walk for growers, directed by Arthur Kring—August Hartman, first; W. A. Rowe, second.

Flag race for girls under 14 years, directed by W. S. Wells—Marie Dahn, first; Virginia Cerny, second.

Twenty-five-yard dash for young ladies, directed by H. Schlechter—Miss G. Ogle, first; Manda Basham, second.

Pot-throwing contest for ladies, directed by Frank Sanders—Jessie Sanders, first; Mrs. Baumgarten, second.

Ball scramble for small boys, directed by Walter Young—Irwin Hoffman, first; Gus Cerny, second.

Chicken race, directed by Paddy Patton—Robert Holm.

Doughnut-eating contest, directed by A. Goellner—O. Flanagan, first; Julius Hecht, second.

Ball-throwing contest for married ladies, directed by Charles Kuehn, Jr.—Mrs. Kinzel, first; Mrs. W. A. Rowe, second.

Peanut race for girls under 15 years, directed by Al. Gumz—Linda Hecht, first; Jessie Taylor, second.

Needle-threading contest for ladies, directed by W. S. Wells—Laura Sanders, first; L. Erlinger, second.

Hop, step and jump for young men, directed by J. J. Bentzen—Oscar Ruff, first; R. Holm, second.

Ladies' tug o' war—Won by team made up of retail ladies.

Men's tug o' war—Won by Bergstermann's team of retailers from Joseph Hauser's team of growers.

Seed-guessing contest—Julius Hecht, first; A. Jablonsky, Jr., second.

In the baseball game the score by innings was:

	1	2	3	4	5	R	H	E
Retailers	0	0	0	8	0	8	12	2
Wholesalers	0	3	0	1	1	5	8	5

Various Notes.

racing was indulged in. The Angermueller car, with H. Schlechter at the wheel, came in first and the W. C. Smith car second. If you don't believe they went some, ask Guy Reburn and Robert Newcomb, of Chicago, who were in the Smith car.

Oscar Kuehn, official photographer of the Florists' Club, was on hand, but after the games were finished the hour was too late to take a satisfactory picture of the big crowd.

The regular Indians in camp near the park were after Paddy Patton's scalp for trying to impersonate Hiawatha, and except for the prompt interference of the trustees and the park manager, poor Paddy would have fared badly at their hands.

The trustees, F. Windler, William Ossick and J. Connon, deserve great credit for the manner in which they handled this affair. The crowd was larger than heretofore, more sociability was displayed and there were better prizes and larger entries in all contests. This speaks well for their management.

R. J. Windler, state vice-president of the S. A. F., put in a busy afternoon talking convention and signing up new members for the society, as well as rooting for the retailers at the ball game.

Belleville, as usual, was well represented by the Ogle brothers, H. Emunds, E. W. Guy and G. Grossart and their families. They declare it was the best picnic the club has yet held.

George Waldbart, F. C. Weber, F. H. Weber and the Metropolitan Floral Co. closed shop at noon and came out and mixed with their employees in the half-day outing. It is to be hoped that other west end and downtown stores will follow suit next year. The north and south sides will follow in line.

The many friends of C. A. Kuehn and J. F. Ammann missed them greatly. This is the first picnic, it is believed, that these families have missed.

President Vennemann, Secretary Deutschmann and Treasurer Pilcher, of the County Growers' Association, with their families, were on hand early and said they spent a most pleasant afternoon.

The largest man present was Charles Connon and the largest lady was Mrs. Joseph Hauser. Their combined weight was something like 500 pounds. Webster Groves, where they both live, must be a healthy place.

Jules Bourdet and W. S. Wells, the next president and vice-president of the Florists' Club, in company with President Pilcher and Vice-president Jaenicke, were out in full force, mingling with the crowd and generally showing themselves to be good fellows.

Walter Young, who represented C. Young & Sons Co., is some worker and ladies' man. He was on the jump all day, assisting the trustees in all the events.

Charles Wors spent the whole afternoon presiding over the guessing contest table. For a sticker to one job on so hot a day, he deserves a medal.

Gorly, both clothed in Palm Beach suits, spent a most pleasant afternoon, meeting many friends in the various branches of the trade.

Alton, Ill., was represented by Mr. and Mrs. George Madsen, and St. Charles, Mo., by Edwin Denker and a party of friends. They came a long way, but seemed to be glad they came.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Sanders and family returned from an automobile trip to St. James, Mo., just in time to motor to the picnic grounds, and carried home several prizes.

Julius Dilloff, representing Schloss Bros., New York, got in too late to attend the picnic, but made up for lost time by calling on the trade and booming the Boston S. A. F. convention.

The County Growers' Association will hold its monthly meeting August 5. President Vennemann says there are a lot of important matters to be transacted and he requests a full attendance.

Paul Heil, Fred Mohrman and Albert Heitz, employees of F. H. Weber, left July 25 for a vacation trip east. They will call at Cincinnati, Philadelphia, Atlantic City and New York, and will return home in two weeks, when the boss will take his vacation. J. J. B.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Business last week was at a low ebb, and wholesalers and retailers alike are complaining. The weather has been extremely warm, the mercury hovering around the 100-degree mark during the entire period. The several rain storms have done little to better this condition. Sales are confined almost entirely to the actual requirements of funeral work and the retailers are buying stock only as they obtain orders, with the result that the ice-boxes usually show a poor assortment. Most of the worry is thus thrown upon the wholesalers and commission houses, for they are expected to have just what the retailers want when they want it, and as wants are few, a large quantity of stock daily finds its way to the refuse heap. Gladioli are being received in large quantities and are in marked favor because of their keeping qualities. There is no demand for orchids or gardenias, and on all stock summer prices prevail.

Various Notes.

William F. Gude, his two sons, Granville and Ernest, and George W. Hess, superintendent of the United States Botanical Gardens, spent the week end at Barnegat bay, where they were the guests of Commodore Westcott.

George H. Cooke and Samuel Simmons spent the week end at Chesapeake beach, where they had some good fishing.

Florists are invited by the Department of Agriculture to send inquiries to the office of horticultural investigations regarding their problems. In referring to its work, a bulletin of the department states that among the work which has been of practical value to the florists and gardeners of the country is the demonstration of a method of growing Bermuda lily bulbs from seed and of the relative value of blind and flowering wood for rose cuttings, as well as the value of plants which produce abundant bloom as parent stock from which to take cuttings. The theory of the stability of the first generation hybrid and its trueness to one parent type has been demonstrated on a commercial scale with carnations.

William F. Gude, chairman of the committee on the proposed Smith memorial, last week sent out a large number of letters calling upon the florists of the country to contribute towards this project. Within three days Mr. Gude was gratified at receiving several replies with checks inclosed, and so the work of the committee has received its start in earnest. It is expected that during the coming month the bank balance will jump by leaps and bounds and that a creditable showing will be made prior to the convention in Boston.

Although the army worm is disappearing from this city, yet it is said that the pest is merely hibernating and that in the fall it will reappear. Its disappearance, according to authorities, indicates merely that it is burrowing beneath the ground preparatory to spinning the cocoon from which will emerge another army when the grass has again grown in sufficient proportion to give food. The worms have yielded to some extent to the application of various poisons, but many of the garden spots of the city have already been ruined.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington is scheduled for Tuesday evening, August 4, at 1214 F street, northwest. At this meeting plans will be completed for the trip to the Boston convention, and President Cooke urges that all members attend.

The Market.

Pittsburgh is like most other cities at this time of the year; the florists keep their shops open from habit and do not complain if they do not have many visitors in a day. They keep their shops as cool as possible and all their decorations are arranged to give the appearance of coolness, and probably those who are in the stores are more comfortable and happy than those who are on their vacations; at least, they do not have to spend so much money or strain their imaginations so much to make themselves believe they are having a good time.

There are plenty of good roses, lilies, Beauties and valley to take care of the trade. Asters are quite plentiful. Gladioli are a glut on the market; the best bring a fair price, but the rest, which is the greater part of the stock—well, I would be ashamed to tell what they bring. I know that some of the language they bring forth would condemn any man—but then, it's summer and an exceedingly dull one at that.

Various Notes.

Ed. McCallum and his bride are home from their honeymoon and have settled down to housekeeping.

Among those taking vacations are: Geo. Marshall, gone to Wildwood, N. J.; Marie Lager, to Niagara Falls and Canada; T. P. Langhans, to Allison Park; Wm. Calligan, to Cleveland, Detroit, Mackinac and Chicago.

Fred Burki and his family made the trip to Buffalo, Rochester, Detroit and home again in his automobile without a puncture or mishap of any kind.

J. W. Smith and family are summering at Canfield, O.

Joseph King is saying "Goo-goo" to a new baby boy, so he will not need a vacation.

At present writing it looks as if this city would send a party of eighteen or twenty to the Boston convention, all

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL, by Wm. Scott, the greatest book ever written for florists, sent by The Review for $5.

I WAS flooded with a tremendous torrent of orders for my tomato plants, until that rushing stream, which lasted for three consecutive days, swept away every plant I had in the house, numbering tens of thousands. All of it came through The Review. You have no competitor.—H. J. Potomkin, Muncie, Ind.

...THE...
Chrysanthemum
By Arthur Herrington
Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., June, 1915.

W. ATLEE BURPEE and family sailed from London last week and are due in Philadelphia about August 1.

C. E. KENDEL, secretary of the American Seed Trade Association, returned to Cleveland last week after his vacation. He expects to issue the annual report about September 1.

THE report submitted at the annual meeting of the A. A. Berry Seed Co., of Clarinda, Ia., showed an increase in the wholesale grass seed business of the company last year.

AXEL KNUDSEN, of Minneapolis, states that he has decided to dispose of his business to accept an appointment as American representative of L. Daehnfeldt, Ltd., seed growers at Odense, Denmark.

THE New York Sun has raised its voice against the congressional seed distribution. "The best use that can be made of them is to feed them to the stock." The Sun's garden editor is E. C. Vick, of the Rochester family.

No change was made in the officers of the Dakota Improved Seed Co., of Mitchell, S. D., at the annual meeting of the directors and stockholders, held July 15. W. S. Hill was reëlected president and treasurer, and W. A. Wheeler was reëlected secretary and general manager.

HARRISII ARRIVING.

The first of the 1914 crop of Harrisii bulbs reached New York July 20, on the boat from Bermuda. They were consigned as follows:

Consignee—	Cases
Crossmond, L. D., & Co	77
Hempstead, O. G., & Son	8
Outerbridge, A. E., & Co	37
Vaughan's Seed Store	112
Wells Fargo & Co	20
To order	1,086
Total	1,340

THE DUTCH BULBS.

Instead of coming to hand earlier than last year, the Holland bulbs will be a few days later than usual. The season was early, but the sequence of wet days on which no work could be done in the field resulted in delaying the lifting, while it added to the work of cleaning and curing the bulbs. Tulips turned out a good crop, it is thought, as to quality as well as quantity. There is said to be a scarcity of yellow varieties, but otherwise the supply promises to be adequate. Hyacinths had not all been lifted at the date of last advices, but it is the general opinion that the crop will be a fairly good one. Blue hyacinths are scarce and high in price. Narcissi and daffodils

Handsome Is— Who Handsome Does

A Rose—under any other name—would be just as sweet. The Lily—Biblically referred to so majestically, that Solomon in all his glory did not compare to a single lily on the field—would be as emblematic of purity and perfection—under any other name. Monuments of appreciation to Horseshoe Brand Lily Bulbs should be erected, for the high efficiency in lily bulbs now existing, due to standards as set by Horseshoe Brand. Today, practically, only the amount of bulbs counted for the required crop need be obtained—the loss being at a minimum; what amount you formerly had to order, on account of loss, before Horseshoe Brand Lily Bulbs were introduced—that is still fresh in your memory. Horseshoe Brand Lily Bulbs did handsome in bringing the standard of quality up to what lily bulbs are at the present time—and handsome is he that appreciates the efforts. Horseshoe Brand Lilium Formosum, new crop, are now on hand ready for immediate delivery—if potted now would flower from Christmas time on—just when good prices are realized. Send us your orders for prompt or future shipments. The Joy Book with prices on request.

NON-WARRANTY CLAUSE UPHELD

In Courts of Washington State.

The Washington Supreme Court lately affirmed judgment in favor of the Seattle Seed Co. in a case wherein it was unsuccessfully attempted to hold the company liable in damages for claimed inferiority of 7,150 pounds of seed peas sold to certain customers (139 Pacific Reporter 866). Two points were involved in the suit. First, it was claimed by the company that, although an order for the peas, upon which a written contract was subsequently based, called for Alaska or Early Alaska peas, the contract did not specify any particular variety. And then the company relied upon the fact that there was enclosed in each sack of seed a printed slip bearing the following notice:

"The Seattle Seed Co. gives no warranty, express or implied, as to description, quality, productiveness, or any other matter of any seeds they send out, and they will not, in any way, be responsible for the crop. If the purchaser does not accept the goods on these terms, they are at once to be returned. The acceptance of seeds under these conditions shall constitute your consent to the purchase."

The Judge's Argument.

In affirming judgment in favor of the company, the court said: "On the whole, therefore, we are inclined to believe that the writing of November 8 must be accepted as the contract of sale. Assuming it to be the law that a written contract does not preclude proof of a collateral or prior agreement concerning the same matter upon which the written contract is silent, and which does not contradict or vary the writing, the only proof that could be added to this writing would be 'Alaska or Early Alaska peas,' and we will still have the sale and delivery made subject to the printed condition contained in the seed bags, which the court below has found to be a condition of the sale. There is also in this record evidence that a general custom prevails in the seed trade of making all sales subject to the conditions named on the printed slips. This, coupled with the evidence that the printed slips were placed in each bag of seed, is sufficient to support the finding that the sale was made without warranty or condition, and warranty or condition that the seed was true to name cannot be inferred. Blizzard Bros. v. Growers' Canning Co., 152 Iowa, 257, 132 N. W. 66; Leonard Seed Co. v. Crary Canning Co., 147 Wis. 166, 132 N. W. 902, 37 L. R. A. (N. S.) 79; Ann. Cas. 1912D, 1077. In each of these cases, as in the one before us, there was no evidence that the purchaser read the printed matter denying any express or implied warranty, similar to the language on the printed slips in this case, but the court in each instance held the purchaser was bound." S.

Creighton, who overruled a motion for a new trial. John M. Sheehan, counsel for the plaintiff, George Demint, had prepared an exhaustive brief, but did not file it when the new trial was denied; instead he prayed for an appeal to the Appellate Court, which was granted, bond of $200 to be filed in sixty days and brief to be filed in ninety days.

This is a straight non-warranty case. The following is a statement of the facts by R. H. McAnulty, of McAnulty, Allen & Humphrey, counsel for the defendant:

"This was a suit brought to recover damages claimed by reason of defendant having delivered an early variety of sweet corn to plaintiff, whereas he claimed to have bought a late variety. Plaintiff claimed that he asked for Mammoth sweet corn, but claimed there was delivered to him some unknown variety of early sweet corn. The case was tried first in the Justice Court before a jury and won by the defendant. The plaintiff appealed. His theory was that when a person purchased of a dealer in seeds there was an implied warranty that the seed delivered was the variety asked for.

"In the Circuit Court, to which the case was appealed, defendant relied particularly upon the custom and usage of seedsmen in selling seeds without warranty, and the court allowed the defendant to show custom and usage of seedsmen in this city and throughout the country to sell seeds with the non-warranty clause. Doubtless it was upon that evidence that the jury found for the defendant in the Circuit Court.

"The evidence was that plaintiff had plowed up an old strawberry bed June 23, 1913, after the strawberry crop had failed on account of drought. It was planted to corn June 24. There was about four acres of it, and the amount of damages claimed was $39.25. It was a small amount to litigate over, but the principle from the seedsman's standpoint was important. Believing the truth to be that the failure of the crop was to be attributed to the excessively hot weather, with the long period of drought, coupled with the fact that the ground was broken late, we showed the government weather reports, the temperature and precipitation for each day from May 1 to September 1, 1913."

THE GOVERNMENT SEED SHOP.

The congressional distribution of free seeds for 1915 will be conducted under the following paragraph of the agricultural appropriation bill:

"Purchase and distribution of valuable seeds: For purchase, propagation, testing, and congressional distribution of valuable seeds, bulbs, trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings, and plants; all necessary office fixtures and supplies, fuel, transportation, paper, twine, gum, postal cards, gas, electric current, rent outside of the District of Columbia, official traveling expenses, and all necessary material and repairs for putting up and distributing the same; for repairs and the employment of local and special agents, clerks, assistants, and other labor required, in the city of Washington and elsewhere, $257,000. And the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby directed to expend the said sum, as nearly as practicable, in the purchase, testing, and distribution of such valuable seeds, bulbs, shrubs, vines, cuttings, and plants, the best he can obtain at public or private sale, and such as shall be suitable for the respective localities to which the same are to be apportioned, and in which same are to be distributed as hereinafter stated, and such seeds so purchased shall include a variety of vegetable and flower seeds suitable for planting and culture in the various sections of the United States: Provided, that the Secretary of Agriculture, after due advertisement and on competitive bids, is authorized to award the contract for the supplying of printed packets and envelopes and the packeting, assembling, and mailing of the seeds, bulbs, shrubs, vines, cuttings, and plants, or any part thereof, for a period of not more than five years nor less than one year, if by such action he can best protect the interests of the United States. An equal proportion of five-sixths of all seeds, bulbs, shrubs, vines, cuttings, and plants shall, upon their request, after due notification by the Secretary of Agriculture that the allotment to their respective districts is ready for distribution, be supplied to Senators, Representatives, and Delegates in Congress for distribution among their constituents, or mailed by the department upon the receipt of their addressed franks, in packages of such weight as the Secretary of Agriculture and the Postmaster General may jointly determine: Provided, however, that upon each envelope or wrapper containing packages of seeds the contents thereof shall be plainly indicated, and the Secretary shall not distribute to any Senator, Representative, or Delegate seeds entirely unfit for the climate and locality he represents, but shall distribute the same so that each

seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

22—KENILWORTH STRAIN—The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are from 3½ to 4 inches; it is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings, rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.

24—KENILWORTH SHOW—An extra fine strain of large flowers; the immense flowers are of circular form and great substance; a beautiful collection of colors and markings.

26—KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE—Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower or for exhibition purposes, for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 inches long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well.

28—MASTERPIECE—A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance, large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stems.

30—GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES—A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich velvety colors, reds are particularly conspicuous; the petals being distinctly marked with three or five large dark blotches.

NEW SEED NOW READY

All sorts and mixtures, except the new Pansy Princess, are $5.00 per oz.; $1.25 per ¼-oz.; 5000 seeds, $1.00; trade packet of 1000 seeds, 25c; any 5 pkts., $1.00. Please order by number.

PRINCESS

20—The New Upright Pansy

This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing, and extremely weather-proof, enduring many storms without damage to its flower. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture, on heavy stems carried well above the foliage. Attractive by the brilliancy of its colors.

CLUB ROOT ON CUCUMBERS.

Can you tell me what causes club root on cucumbers? Is there any preventive? H. H.

Club root is caused by a fungus which develops within the cells of the roots, causing them to become distorted and often to die. After the plants die the spores become mixed with the soil, ready to fasten on some other host plant when conditions are favorable. Many of the common weeds are subject to club root, but it is not usually troublesome on cultivated plants if the soil conditions are favorable, particularly in regard to moisture. I have not heard of any cure for club root when once it has appeared. When a house has shown the trouble, it would not do to plant another crop there without changing the soil or giving a thorough sterilization. C. W.

BLIGHT ON CUCUMBERS.

My cucumber vines are dying. The soil is moist and is well worked. I am sending a leaf from an affected plant. If you can suggest a remedy it will be greatly appreciated. S. A. B.

The leaf forwarded was affected by blight. Of late years this has been destructive to both cucumbers and melons outdoors. It does not usually make its appearance until we get the first really cool nights, followed by extremely hot days, late in July or early in August. Personally, I believe the cold nights accompanied by heavy dews start the trouble. The oldest leaves always go first, but the whole plant soon becomes affected, the blight spreading rapidly. So serious has this disease become that some large cucumber growers have abandoned their culture. I have in mind one firm which annually had 500 acres of pickling cucumbers and had to drop them entirely.

There is no sure remedy for this trouble. I have tried the effect of spraying with Bordeaux mixture and other fungicides long before the blight appeared. This does help in some measure, but is not a cure by any means. After blight has appeared, spraying is useless. I regret not being able to give you more encouraging information. Cucumbers under glass, even without heat, do not take the blight. I have tested seed from affected plants and they remained perfectly clean. C. W.

The Market.

Business has been quiet during the last week. Stock in general is so plentiful and the demand is so light that it is next to impossible to realize what stock is really worth.

Carnations are shortening up and this is a distinct relief after the glut that has been with us for some time. A few new carnations are being shown, but the quantity is negligible. The fact that growers of this stock are throwing out the poorest stock first keeps the quality of the cut up to the standard which it has maintained for some time. Roses are in good supply and the quality is exceptionally good for this time of year. Mrs. Russell, Sunburst, Ward and Killarney are all selling well, although the short-stemmed stock predominates.

Asters are making their appearance and the quality of the stock is good. It will take a little time, however, for them to supplant carnations on the market. Some exceptionally fine valley is displayed on the market, but the demand is small. Gladioli are in good supply and the stock is much better than the sales. Local trade is confined mostly to funeral work and the trade in general is having a much needed rest.

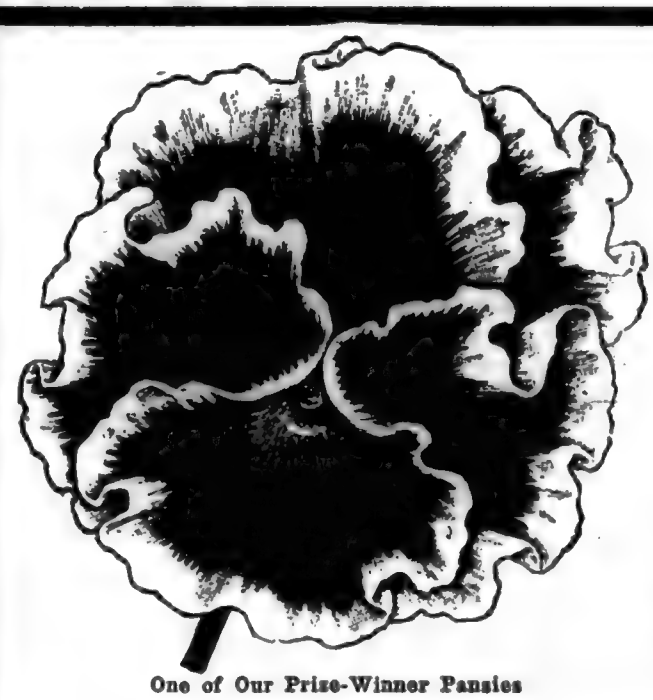
DETROIT.

The Market.

The market is pretty well supplied, or oversupplied, with all stock except roses. Roses clean up right along. Asters are coming along nicely and a good supply will soon be available. Gladioli are overplentiful. Lilies also are more than equal to the demand. Carnations are rapidly diminishing in size and will soon be over for the season.



Various Notes.

The annual outing of the Detroit Florists' Club will be held at Bois Blanc island July 31. A fine program of sports has been arranged by the committee, Robert Rahaley and Hugo Schroeter. A number of valuable prizes will be awarded. The feature of the day will, of course, be the ball game between the retailers and wholesalers.

With Henry Forster back on the job, E. A. Fetters will take a short rest at his summer home on the Canadian shore.

Mrs. Hugo Schroeter and her little son are visiting with relatives at Newport, R. I., and Boston.

Miesel Bros. are building a neat retail store adjoining their greenhouses on Mack avenue. This part of the city has been growing rapidly and where the Miesels formerly confined themselves almost entirely to plant growing for the market, they now do a big retail business.

C. H. Maynard, of the Flower Growers' Co., says he is well pleased with the outlook. The first three months of his business were better than anticipated.

Tuesday, July 28, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Plumb leave for Quebec via the St. Lawrence river. August 1 they sail from Quebec for England and other European points, to return in about eight weeks.

Stewart Potter, of Schroeter's, is spending a two weeks' vacation fishing at the St. Clair flats. Miss Helen Ott, of the Schroeter clerical staff, will spend the next two weeks at her home at Sutton's Bay.

Albert Sylvester, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, returned July 27 from a well-earned vacation.

B. Schroeter celebrated his seventy-third birthday July 27. There are few men in the trade who have seen as many years of actual service as Mr. Schroeter and who still are as spry as he.

John Klang and a party of friends will motor to Chicago, leaving Detroit August 1.

A miniature bathing beach in the window of the Bemb Floral Co. is attracting much attention. Scattered about on the beach, diving from springboards, sitting in the sand and in various other positions, are many bathers garbed in the latest costumes. These figures, made of bisque, are in themselves works of art, while the beach and surroundings are splendidly portrayed.

The Market.

Summer conditions prevail everywhere and are rather discouraging to the trade in general. There is plenty of variety in stock, but the quality is just average for the season. Carnations are gradually becoming scarcer, but are still plentiful enough to meet the demand. Roses are hardly a salable product, with the exception of Ulrich Brunner, which is of fine color and quality. Sweet peas are a drug on the market; there seems to be no uniform price asked.

Various Notes.

Herbert & Fleishauer, of McMinnville, made the first shipment of asters last week, which were of good quality. They say they have some surprises for the market this season.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Chappell left last week for a trip to New York and Virginia and will be absent for about six weeks.

C. B. Knickman, representing McHutchison & Co., of New York, was calling on the trade last week.

Fred Wiederman is being congratulated, the occasion being a baby girl.

E. R. C.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

"Too much of all kinds of stock," was the remark of a wholesaler the other day, but half an hour afterward the same wholesaler had the telephone wires hot trying to buy valley and orchids, of which the supply had run out. And this is true of other kinds of stock; the highest quality only finds a market at anything like a fair price. Yet we still see funeral pieces going out made of stale flowers, ready to fall, while there are plenty of good flowers going to waste in the stores. All kinds of garden flowers are being peddled about town by owners of back lots, and this naturally makes matters worse for the trade grower. The lavender and yellow centaureas are now at their best and are fine for making up into sprays for funeral work. Every season brings a greater variety into the orchids shown in the stores and the hybrid lælio-cattleyas are becoming much more generally known than formerly.

The new fern, Glory of Mordrecht, is not coming up to expectations here as a cut fern, but the plants are pretty and stand well in the stores. Greens of most kinds are plentiful and good. Boston ferns are in much better supply. Though there are not many flowering plants, the probability is that there would be little demand for them. The pretty variegated pteris, P. argyræa, sells well.

Various Notes.

S. Murata has left for parts unknown for his vacation.

John Morley paid a flying visit to this city last week, in company with Mrs. Morley and their daughter, who will stay for a while, visiting friends.

I sold over 35,000 chrysanthemum plants this season on my 1-inch ad in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. Of course that paid me well and I am very pleased. You will hear from me again as soon as I can work up stock.—Frank Wilhelm, R. F. D. No. 6, Los Angeles, Cal., June 13, '14.

The store of the Los Angeles Flower Market is a pleasant place these warm days, as the depth of the store keeps it cool, while the large kentias are green and refreshing to the eye. Large standing wreaths of magnolia help out the decorative scheme.

A. Hunt, manager of the flower department of the Homburger store, is away on his vacation.

A. P. Houbert, of Washington, D. C., was a caller last week.

C. Box, of Hollywood, is sending in fine cut roses to the Redondo Floral Co., the firm that formerly ran the Hollywood greenhouses.

Mrs. Wilton, manager for C. H. Kolle, of El Paso, Tex., has been in town on a buying trip, and incidentally enjoying the ocean beaches and other forms of amusement.

At Wright's Flower Shop I noted some elegant flowers of moth orchids, notably a pretty rose-tinted form of Phalænopsis Aphrodite.

H. W. Turner's new delivery car is now in service and is a good standing advertisement for his wares. It is a Chalmers forty horse-power, with an aluminum-covered body, finished steel gray; a neat and most attractive car in every way. This will give splendid service to his patrons, eliminating the loss of time between Montebello and the city.

R. W. Saakes had a most attractive window last week, in white and blue. The display consisted of forget-me-nots, blue larkspurs and Easter lilies, a pretty combination.

Things are moving along finely at Staiger & Mundwiler's. Mrs. Fred Mundwiler has given her husband another pledge of affection in the shape of a baby girl. The engagement of Paul Staiger to Miss Ella Rohde is also announced. Congratulations are due to both these good fellows.

Owing to the refusal of one of the smaller seedsmen to come into line for Saturday afternoon closing, the majority of the others have withdrawn the privilege of the usual weekly half holiday for their employees. As far as can be seen, only one of the nurserymen and one of the seedsmen are closing their places of business.

Landscape work keeps up well for the season. Howard & Smith, Ed Rust and the Germain Seed & Plant Co. are all busy. There is a big demand for large trees of all kinds, as many people wish to make a quick display for next season, when the big shows are running. Inquiries for imported nursery stock are numerous and seem to foreshadow a banner season for 1915.

move stock, which had been almost a glut. Carnations are of medium quality, with just about enough for the regular demand. Roses are almost a thing of the past, so far as local supply is concerned. The few that are coming in are small and short-stemmed. Sweet peas, which have heretofore been of excellent quality, are beginning to show the effects of the continued hot weather, both in quality and quantity. Many of the growers have already discontinued sending them to market. Gladioli and auratums are beginning to appear and will soon be had in quantities. Stock thus far shown is of good quality.

Various Notes.

Samuel Younken, manager of the store of Hoyt Bros., was called in to help in getting out the large number of funeral orders his firm had received one day last week. He has been enjoying a two weeks' outing at Newman lake, occupying the Holt cottage.

The sweet peas supplied by H. W. McKenzie are easily the best on the market. The Spencer varieties are grown, Countess Spencer being especially fine. Orders during the last week taxed his gardens almost to the limit.

F. L. Ziegler is outfitting his store, at 901 First avenue, with a big refrigerator, which will add greatly to the appearance of the store.

Henry Reimers is displaying in his windows the first gladioli of the season.

The Market.

Business is as usual at this time of year and there is an oversupply of almost all flowers. Carnations continue to be a glut, even more so than in past seasons. This is caused by the unusual number of plants carried over. Some growers are planting little young stock, depending on their old plants to supply their requirements for the coming winter. Roses are plentiful, the outside plants yielding fairly good blooms. There is not so much mildew to be seen as usual at this season. Asters are now arriving in quantity, and gladioli are of good quality and fairly plentiful. Sweet peas are getting rather short of stem, but there is a good demand for them. Funeral work is the main source of income nowadays, and of that lately there has been a good deal.

NEW SWEET PEA

MONROVIA

For several years this has been the best seller on the Los Angeles and other local markets, and I have decided to offer it to the trade as long as the stock lasts at

Monrovia begins to flower when only about one foot high and continues to bloom profusely until it reaches 4 feet high outdoors. It will make a splendid greenhouse variety, as the buds do not drop under any conditions The color is a deep purple outside, inside heliotrope, and it is unquestionably the finest winter-blooming purple in existence. The seed has been carefully reselected from large pods only. It was gathered in April and May in the foothill section, and is consequently mature and of high germinating power. It is an exceptionally stout grower and throws long stemmed flowers all through the season, four to six flowers to the stem. This offer will be withdrawn as soon as present stock is exhausted.

way of Bothell to the farm of Hollywood Gardens, where they were hospitably entertained by the proprietors. Of course, the main point of interest was the greenhouses, where the planting of carnations is almost completed. The earlier planted stock is looking excellent and the plants now going into the benches are fine and should prove good producers. The chrysanthemums, which followed tomatoes in three of the houses, are also looking well, and the party was much edified by the pains taken to exclude the tarnish bugs, cheesecloth being used to cover all the ventilators. Mr. Anderson deserves credit for the excellence of his stock and the clean and neat appearance of everything around this interesting plant. The ornamental grounds and flower and vegetable gardens were afterwards visited, and the party was taken charge of by Mr. Nyberg, who is curator of this department and whose accomplishments in beautifying the vast grounds are certainly noteworthy. There were quantities of new roses to see and admire, and the shrubbery and other plants were well worth a visit. The quantity of vegetables and fruit grown to supply the army of over fifty workers on this estate impressed the visitors. The dairies were the next item, and here the absolute cleanliness of cows, barn and workers was observed. A large herd of pedigreed Holstein cows supplies the milk, which is driven by motor to Seattle every day and eagerly bought by householders there. The herd of pedigreed Duroc Jersey hogs was afterwards inspected, and here, also, the clean condition of hogs and surroundings was especially noticeable. Mr. Stimson has one of the most up-to-date farms in the country, 700 acres of land, most of it cleared of trees. The visitors had not time to see the chicken ranch, which is in a distant part of the estate. After being made welcome to a hearty dinner, the party started on their way, journeying by way of Redmond. J. J. Bonnell conducted them to his nursery at Kirkland, where another example of reclaiming the wilderness was visible. Mr. Bonnell only acquired this ground—fourteen acres—three years ago, and he now has it almost all cleared and planted. The ground is eminently adapted to the growth of conifers and ornamental shrubs, as evidenced by the healthy appearance of everything planted, some holly trees having put on three feet of stem already this year. The soil is of a peaty nature and retains moisture much better than the average. He showed huge laurels in quantity, and all the conifers were making sturdy growth. His plan is to import the small plants from Europe and grow them on to marketable size here, thus saving freight charges and insuring better roots and more sure-to-grow trees to purchasers. A flock of ducks and geese, not pedigreed, but useful in devouring chickweed, is kept here. The land is on the outskirts of Kirkland, and while valuable now for nursery purposes, is yearly acquiring more value by the proximity of this growing suburb.

Various Notes.

Carl Melby has secured the contract to plant the flower boxes placed in front of the site of the new building of the Metropolitan Co., on Fourth avenue. This is a new departure here.

Generally the builders make things as unsightly as possible during the erection of a building, but here there is an ornamental appearance to even the hoarding and it is about to be capped by flower boxes filled with geraniums and trailing plants. While on the subject of flower boxes, note should be taken of the excellence of the appearance of the boxes in front of the Bon Marche. There are about 600 feet of them and they are certainly a fine sight just now. C. Hoffmeister planted them and is well worthy of his meed of praise for the effective display they make.

M. Lewis, of Cœur d'Alene, was visiting his friends in the trade here last week. He reports good business east of the mountains.

Fred W. Gust, of the Rosery, was successful in winning first prize for a decorated automobile in the Potlatch parade, and Tom V. Rhoades, of the Crescent Flower Store, got a first prize in another class of the same parade.

During the last three weeks rose shows have been held on successive Mondays in the rooms of the Commercial Club. The prizes were not of much consequence, the object of the shows being to ascertain if it would be possible to hold a large rose show here at this late time of year. The results were highly satisfactory. The quantity and quality of the blooms and the clean condition of the foliage proved that there would be little difficulty in the accomplishment of such an undertaking. As the Shriners' convention takes place here next July, the Pacific Northwest Rose Society has in view the holding of a rose show during the convention.

The Tacoma florists held their annual picnic Wednesday, July 22. Seattle florists were invited, but not many of them could respond, as the stress of other engagements kept most of them at home. John Holze and his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Hoffmeister went over and all report a highly enjoyable time.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE death of George H. Keyes, president of the Meneray-Omaha Nursery Co., of Omaha, Neb., is recorded in this week's obituary column.

THE Cluny Nurseries, Ltd., of Calgary, B. C., has gone into voluntary liquidation, the Trusts and Guarantee Co., of Calgary, being appointed liquidator.

G. L. WELCH, the new secretary-treasurer of the Kelsey Nurseries, at St. Joseph, Mo., gave evidence of the prosperity of this line of business by purchasing a touring car recently.

IT seems perfectly plain that the demand for fruit trees, especially apple and peach, is not what it was a few years ago but that the call for ornamentals increases steadily.

M. I. KILBURN, manager of the Northern Colorado Nursery Co., at Loveland, Colo., was severely injured July 18 when repairing a tire on his automobile. Pumping air into the tire forced it off the rim, and as it flew up it struck Mr. Loveland across the face, making a cut five inches long.

MUCH ADVERTISING NEEDED.

"Consciously or otherwise," say W. A. Taylor and H. P. Gould in their latest article, "the search for the ideal in fruit varieties goes on. Each year sees new varieties brought to light and introduced to the trade. A few of these persist and in time become important in the fruit industry, but the great majority are never widely known, because in reality they do not meet any special need. A new variety in order to attain enduring importance in the fruit industry must represent a high standard of excellence in all particulars, and in at least one particular it must surpass in some region or regions other sorts already in cultivation. And as a rule its merits must even then be persistently and extensively advertised; else its dissemination will be very slow.

"It is exceedingly difficult for a new variety, even of the highest merit, to crowd out a mediocre variety that has been extensively planted by many fruit growers. For this reason a variety may be old, as measured by the age of a man, before it becomes generally known. The Stayman Winesap apple, for instance, originated nearly half a century ago, and for many years it has been known in several sections among fruit growers, but it is only during the last twelve or fifteen years that its real value has become widely appreciated."

THE NEW ENGLAND QUARANTINE

July 23 the Secretary of Agriculture issued Notice of Quarantine No. 17, effective August 1, extending the New England quarantine against the gipsy moth and brown-tail moth. Roughly speaking, the quarantine applies to that section east of a line through Westfield, Mass., Hartford, Conn., and Barre, Vt. The regulations provide that "Coniferous trees, such as spruce, fir, hemlock, pine, juniper (cedar), and arbor vitæ (white cedar), known and described as 'Christmas trees,' and parts thereof, and decorative plants, of the area quarantined for gipsy moth, such as holly and laurel, known and described as 'Christmas greens or greenery,' shall not be moved or allowed to move interstate to points outside the quarantined area.

"Forest plant products, including logs, tan bark, posts, poles, railroad ties, cordwood, and lumber, and field-grown florists' stock, trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings, and other plants and plant products for planting or propagation, of the area quarantined for the gipsy moth, excepting fruit pits, seeds of fruit and ornamental trees and shrubs, field, vegetable, and flower seeds, bedding plants, and other herbaceous plants and roots, shall not be moved or allowed to move interstate to any point outside the quarantined area unless and until such plants and plant products have been inspected by the United States Department of Agriculture and pronounced free from the gipsy moth."

This notice of quarantine amends and supersedes Notice of Quarantine No. 10, promulgated June 24, 1913.

DAVEY GETS INJUNCTION.

John Davey and his sons, Martin L., James A. and Wellington E. Davey, trading as the Davey Tree Expert Co., with offices at 225 Fifth avenue, New York, can now trim and doctor the trees of the wealthy without competition. United States Judge Learned Hand has granted an injunction against Robert C. Buttolph, James W. Isinger and James T. Thomas, of the Buttolph-Isinger Co., restraining them from employing the patented tree surgery methods of the Daveys. The defendants were formerly employees of the Daveys.

PROMISING NEW FRUITS.

A new fruit, in the eyes of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, is one not widely known. The Yearbook list, 1913 edition, recently issued, includes: Banana apple, disseminated as Winter Banana in 1890, by Greening Nursery Co., Greening, Mich.; McCrosky apple, quite generally known in Tennessee for fifteen years; Opalescent apple, disseminated prior to 1891 by the Dayton Star Nurseries, Dayton, O.; the Lizzie peach, originated in 1889, by J. W. Stubenrauch, Mexia, Tex.; the Flowers grape, discovered in 1819, in North Carolina; the James grape, known since 1867; the Triumph persimmon, commercially propagated since 1887; the Lue orange, introduced to the trade in 1912, by the Glen St. Mary Nursery Co., Glen St. Mary, Fla., as Lue Gin Gong, and the Boone chestnut, introduced to the trade by E. A. Riehl, Alton, Ill., about 1906.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

We have had a whole week of light showers, but hardly enough moisture to saturate the surface of the ground. The hot weather is broken, however, and this puts new life into things generally. The last month has been the hottest in the history of Nashville. Outdoor stock has suffered terribly, especially trees and shrubbery that were planted this season. Some of our growers have a good many outdoor rose plants and use the Skinner system of

CALIFORNIA PRIVET HEDGING

For the coming Autumn and next Spring's sales

I have to offer over a half million California Privet, consisting of two years old in 1½ to 2 feet, 2 to 3 feet and 3 to 4 feet; three years in 3 to 4 feet, and one year in 12 to 18 inches and 1½ to 2 feet grades. The two and three year grades were carefully cut back the past Spring, are well branched and strictly first-class.

I am prepared to offer exceedingly attractive prices, especially in carload lots.

Being the introducer of the California Privet as a hedge plant away back in the early seventies, it is perhaps not claiming too much to say I am headquarters for it.

irrigation when it is needed. There are no roses being cut from these plantings. While gladioli are coming in pretty freely, the spikes are short, with undersized flowers, and are burned by the sun. This week should see better stock. Asters are making their appearance in small numbers, but are of poor quality, not being well filled in the center. Roses are scarce. In fact, we have seldom seen so little in the iceboxes as at present, and much that we do see has been shipped from Chicago. The heat drove people from the city early this season, so that there has been little real business for several weeks. Last week, however, stock was well used up by a run of funeral work.

The growers have been busy renovating their greenhouses and planting their fall stock. Some of our best growers give their empty benches a coat of coal tar, letting the tar dry pretty well before refilling with new soil. They say that it not only prolongs the life of the wood, but is a powerful insecticide as well. They say that they avoid much trouble with pests in this way. Flats are also thus treated before being used for the planting of seeds.

Various Notes.

McIntyre Bros. had a pretty window decoration last week, showing a country scene, with two rustic houses and a well-kept lawn, decorated with palms and ferns. Their plant display room has a comparatively bare look at present, as stock is well cleaned up.

H. S. Joy has returned to Nahant, Mass., from his visit at home.

At the Joy store most of the help are off on a vacation and those remaining are sweating over a heavy lot of funeral orders. They have had a pretty hard time with their outdoor stock this season, but the houses were never in better condition at this time of year.

It is reported that Frank Cornell has sold the old place and is rebuilding in the northeast part of the city. He will add cut flowers, in a small way, to his pot plant business. He does not contemplate opening a store, however.

At J. F. Corbitt's place everything is in shape for an increased business in growing plants for the trade. Mr. Corbitt means to devote his space largely to bedding plants this year.

Geny Bros. have been inconvenienced of late in getting in and out with their delivery car, as the street has been torn up for repaving. From present progress it looks as though the new pavement might be down by Christmas. The Genys have been fortunate with their outdoor crops this season and are well supplied with stock.

F. J. Monahan, representing L. Baumann & Co., of Chicago, was in the city last week. S. S. Skidelsky was also a caller in the city recently.

Our local florists' organization, from which good results were expected, seems to have died "a-borning." Boys, get together and do something. The profession is worth it.

Haury & Sons have their place in even better shape than usual for a good fall business. The new houses were erected a little late last season for best results, but they are ready for business this time. F. B.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

The Market.

The summer trade increases year by year, and although home gardens are cultivated more extensively than ever, there is a demand for greenhouse-grown stock in the dog days that shows to what an extent the flower-buying habit has grown on the general public and is quite encouraging.

The army worm has done a vast amount of damage lately within a radius of 100 miles and has made itself felt already in the immediate neighborhood. All the pests imaginable are out this year; their presence is attributed to the dry weather, which has continued almost uninterruptedly for the last eight weeks.

At the Dale Estate.

Golden Glow chrysanthemums are being cut in small quantities at the Dale Estate; this establishes a record for early mum cutting. Mr. Parsons, the grower, is proud of his achievement, but is losing a good deal of sleep at night in anticipation of the bug trouble, which is just about due. The many new varieties of mums listed this year have created an abnormal demand for this class of stock, and the plant trade this year is heavier than it has ever been.

Good sweet peas are being cut in large quantities, and gladioli are due this week from the fields near Simcoe. Centaureas are being sent out for the first time and antirrhinums, which have not been grown here for seven years, are meeting with considerable demand at the hands of the florists.

A large part of the first crop of roses has shown much better blooms than during many previous seasons, probably owing to the fact that building operations have not interfered with growing conditions this year. White Killarneys are doing particularly well and the various new kinds of yellow and pink roses show great promise for the near future.

Various Notes.

The convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association is close at hand; the first session opens Tuesday, August 4, at St. George's hall, Toronto. The executive committee has been hard at work during the last few weeks, making preparations, and it is to be hoped that judicious portioning out of business and pleasure will attract still more members to this worthy organization. Members of the association are to be the guests of Miller & Sons, Bracondale, and later of Sir Henry Pellatt, Tuesday afternoon, August 4, and Wednesday a special train will bring them out to view the Brampton greenhouses.

Chas. W. Norton, for seven years a designer at the Dale Estate, left Monday, July 20, to take up work in connection with the Children's Aid Society. On the eve of his departure, Mr. Norton was the recipient of an address and a handsome armchair from the office and shipping room staff.

Holidays are the order of the day. T. W. Duggan has gone to Muskoka; W. G. Peacock to New York and Boston; E. Hipkin and son to England; Miss B. Dale to Quebec, and H. G. Mullis to Aylsmer. W. G. P.

Greensboro, N. C.—Howard Gardiner is building an addition to his greenhouses.

FIELD-GROWN PLANTS OF CARNATIONS EVERYBODY NEEDS

JOY! We have been handling it for a little over two years and ought to know something about it. JOY!

It's a real red. It is the kind of Carnation that proves the florists' friend. Shipped over a distance, it will look as good on arrival as when sent. This feature appeals to us because we know what it means to the man who is depending on us.

JOY has been described by Mr. E. H. Blameuser, of Niles Center, Ill.—the man who raised it—as "a strong grower, early, very free and continuous bloomer, with strong calyx and good stem." That should be good enough for anybody.

FIELD-GROWN CARNATION PLANTS

This is not the ordinary run of surplus stock, the leftovers from a grower's own planting—it is stock grown by a specialist on purpose to sell to the trade. Everybody knows that our cut blooms are the finest it is possible to produce, and that our business in rooted cuttings has reached enormous proportions because of the fine quality of the stock we ship—well, these field-grown plants are of the same high quality as the rest of our product. They were grown specially to win your approval.

THE STORRS & HARRISON CO., Painesville, Ohio

COLLEGE STATION, TEX.

The nurserymen since time immemorial have taken an active interest in the annual meeting of the Texas State Horticultural Society, and this year the newly formed state organization of florists also had a leading part. The meeting was held here July 27 to 29 and brought out an attendance of approximately 1,500, of whom forty or fifty were nurserymen and twenty or thirty florists. The Texas State Nurserymen's Association held its regular midsummer meeting July 27, for the discussion of trade topics, and on the evening of July 28 gave a banquet in Mess hall, at which the subject for consideration was the conservation of the Texas flora. President J. S. Kerr occupied the chair at the business session, but F. T. Ramsey was toastmaster at the banquet. Committees from the various state organizations interested were present by invitation and a movement was set on foot that is expected to result in a more beautiful Texas.

There were several nurserymen on the program of the State Horticultural Society, and three florists also were down for talks. R. C. Kerr, president of the florists' association, told of the purposes of that organization: "The Texas State Florists' Association was organized," he said, "with one great aim, to grow our own stock as much as possible, to develop native flowers and shrubs and to keep Texas money in Texas." In another part of his address Mr. Kerr said: "The florists of the state will get together each year, exchange ideas and study plans by which we can create a greater demand for flowers and plants. We will educate the people in the care and culture of flowers by holding annual shows and exhibiting our specimen flowers, plants and decorative work. Seeing and admiring these flowers naturally will create a desire for flowers and plants for the home, and this will in turn create a desire for shrubbery and trees and all the products of horticulture. Horticulture in the great state of Texas has the greatest field for development of any section of the country. Coöperation is most important, and if the Texas State Horticultural Society, the Nurserymen's Association and the Texas State Florists' Association will join hands and work for a more beautiful Texas, I predict this one day will be the horticultural center of the country."

Stamford, Conn.—Lord & Burnham Co. has the contract for the erection of a greenhouse, 34x149, a palm house, 25x45, and a potting shed, 17x17, to cost $15,000, for J. B. Cobb, Strawberry Hill.

GERANIUMS

WE HAVE approximately three-quarters of a million Geraniums in 2 and 3-inch pots, ready for immediate shipment, for those who want to have winter-blooming plants—and there is a growing demand for nice 4-inch plants in bloom all winter.

We are now booking orders for fall and winter delivery. Do you think it pays you to bother with your own stock when you can get good 2-inch plants next winter at $18.50 per 1000, just when you want them and in the right proportion of varieties to suit your demand? It is our business to save you this trouble; we grow them by the millions. A personal inspection of our establishment invited.

SPECIAL—You will have to have Maryland and Scarlet Bedder next season, or not have the best.

If you have not received our catalogue and price list, write us.

FIELD-GROWN
CARNATION PLANTS.

This is not the ordinary run of surplus stock, the leftovers from a grower's own planting—it is stock grown by a specialist on purpoose to sell to the trade. Everybody knows that our cut blooms are the finest it is possible to produce, and that our business in rooted cuttings has reached enormous proportions because of the fine quality of the stock we ship—well, these field-grown plants are of the same high quality as the rest of our products. They were grown specially to win YOUR approval.

The Market.

We have been sweltering under a typical mid-July hot wave, but in spite of such a handicap business is up to the average, although somewhat low prices have been the rule. Asters are of rather inferior quality. They are of the Queen of the Market variety. Owing to the hot weather and drought, they did not reach their normal size. Gladioli are plentiful and are cheap in the poorer grade, but good Americas still command a fair price. A good demand for lilies was in evidence, with only an average supply. Roses are on the wane, especially the Killarneys. A few Kaiserin, Radiance and Maryland are seen and are sold readily, but Killarney is unsalable at any price. Carnations are almost over and by another week will be out of the market entirely, as numerous growers are cleaning out the benches for new stock, and no outside blooms have yet been seen. It is probable there will be a poor supply of carnations until the indoor crop arrives in the fall. Valley was a drug and little of it was moved at any price. Asparagus plumosus was plentiful and could be bought at almost any figure. A large lot of stock was moved in the wholesale markets, but the prices were necessarily low.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held at the club rooms July 27. Vice-president Hamilton presided. Owing to the extremely warm weather the attendance was rather small. The outing committee reported through its chairman, F. C. Bauer, that a balance will be turned into the club treasury. R. Vincent, Jr., reported on the arrangements for the trip to Boston by boat. A party of about forty will go from this city, being joined by a body of Washington florists, headed by Wm. F. Gude, and a good sized delegation from Pittsburgh, headed by E. C. Reineman, besides other florists from nearby cities. Altogether, the boat will be almost given over to the florists, who will stop over a day in Norfolk and arrive in Boston Monday, August 17, about 9 a. m. A committee of Boston florists will meet the members of the Baltimore and other delegations and take care of them until the convention opens, Tuesday, August 18.

Various Notes.

John Eberhart has moved his store from 330 North Howard street to 323 North Howard street, second floor.

Mrs. H. J. Quick has been seriously ill with appendicitis for the last week, at her home, but the attending physicians hope to cure her without an operation being necessary.

F. C. Bauer, of Govanstown, who has been on the sick list, is able to be out again. Work on his rebuilding is moving along rapidly.

Samuel Feast & Sons are still showing peonies, having a large vase on display in their Charles street window last week.

Charles Siegwart's new greenhouse is coming along fast and will soon be ready for planting. The glazing was practically finished last week.

Charles R. Francis, of White Marsh, is erecting a new dwelling, which he expects to be ready for occupancy by September 1.

Harry Ekas cut some of the first dahlias of the season July 25.

John Wagner, of Towson, is making a considerable change in his greenhouses and is erecting an addition to his present range.

The dreaded army worm has made its appearance in the northern part of the city and has done great damage to lawns in this section. The Roland Park Co. had forty men at work last week spraying arsenate of lead on the lawns in this beautiful suburb and, according to present report, this has brought the pest under control. In some sections the pest suddenly attacked a lawn and before night had reduced the spot to one of bare ground.

W. F. E.

PAWTUCKET, R. I.

The Market.

Most of the business being done now consists of funeral work, for which a good supply of stock is available. Some good asters are now coming in, which are taking the place of carnations for most occasions, on account of their better keeping qualities. The weather has been rather hot and few stores are carrying any cut stock other than that required for immediate use, window decorations being composed mostly of ferns and other potted plants.

Various Notes.

F. Hoffman is sending some excellent gloxinias to the Providence market.

John Meekin, formerly with A. W. Vose, of Woonsocket, is now in the employ of E. A. Chipman, also of Woonsocket.

W. E. Sword, of Valley Falls, has purchased a greenhouse from an estate in Central Falls.

A. R. Field, of North Taunton, is building an addition of sixty feet to his greenhouse.

James Hamilton, of Warwick Neck, was a visitor in Boston last week.

T. F. B.

Sycamore, Ill.—A splendid stock of geraniums is going fast at the Swinbank greenhouses. Carnations and snapdragons make a fine showing.

Arkansas City, Kan.—The additions during the last year of a lath house, a Kroeschell boiler, a 500-barrel cistern, an irrigating system and other equipment at the Smith Greenhouses have not made the facilities for production at this establishment large enough, and the erection of another house this summer is contemplated. There is at present 14,000 feet of glass in the range and a lath house, 50x125.

Rapid City, S. D.—Plans for more glass at the range of Reimers Bros. will probably have to be abandoned on account of the loss inflicted by the hail storm of July 2, which is reported to exceed $3,000. The most serious loss was of stock plants in the fields; carnations were badly broken and many entirely destroyed. The firm does a large market gardening business, and although root crops will revive to some extent, tomatoes, cabbages, beans, vines, etc., are almost a total loss. In addition, considerable glass was broken.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

THE COAL MARKET.

A real awakening, a real acceleration of the market! Such is the unwonted, unfamiliar announcement that comes from the coal men now, after weeks of monotonous, unvarying tales of woe and stagnation in trade. Such a report is real news, for it is something new. It is not a strong, decided improvement in business, the authorities say, but it is a genuine improvement as far as it goes. The sort of improvement to which we have recently been accustomed has been described as merely "technical" or "sentimental" or "psychological," and has consisted mostly of vague and doubtful signs of possible future betterment. The present improvement, on the other hand, consists of an actual though only slight increase in sales, with inquiries which betoken a greater increase soon. Even inquiries have lately been few and far between; now they are beginning to arrive, the forerunners of the business revival.

Of course, inquiries are not equivalent to orders, but in this case almost every inquiry is an indication that an order will soon be on its way to some dealer—if not to Smith the Coal Man, then to the Jones Coal Co. or some other concern. In the marketing of staple commodities, such as coal, a large proportion of the inquiries materialize in business for somebody; the contract that does not go to one firm must inevitably go to some other firm, and so, in any case, the volume of business is maintained. There is at least room to hope, then, that much of the needed coal will yet be moved before winter approaches dangerously near.

As to smokeless coal, of course the higher price in August has helped to push business in the last week of July. August 1 "the circular price on smokeless mine-run will advance from $1.25 to $1.40. This fact is appreciated by the retail dealers who want to get advantage of the 15 cents a ton reduction. Therefore, they have been buying more coal in the last week or ten days than they had bought in the preceding month. This is giving a bigger volume of business to the eastern producers. A great many retailers who have been taking some coal on their contracts are specifying more heavily on contract. This is meaning a rather intensified movement of smokeless in the last few days of July."

A HOUSE FOR POT PLANTS.

I am building a greenhouse 21x50. The side walls will be six feet high and will consist of three feet of glass and three feet of wood. I expect to grow pot plants in the house. The boiler pit is sunk six feet in the ground. There will be two benches, each five feet wide, in the middle of the house, and one on each side, each three feet wide. Please tell me how much piping will be needed to heat such a house here, in northern Ohio, and tell me also what will be the best arrangement of the piping. E. A. H.

To heat the house described, I would suggest running three 2½-inch flow pipes to the farther end of the house, where they should be connected with fourteen 2-inch returns. Place one of the flows on each wall plate and the other about two feet below the ridge. Arrange the returns in four coils with one coil of four pipes upon each side wall or under the side benches, and the others in two coils of three pipes each under the middle benches.

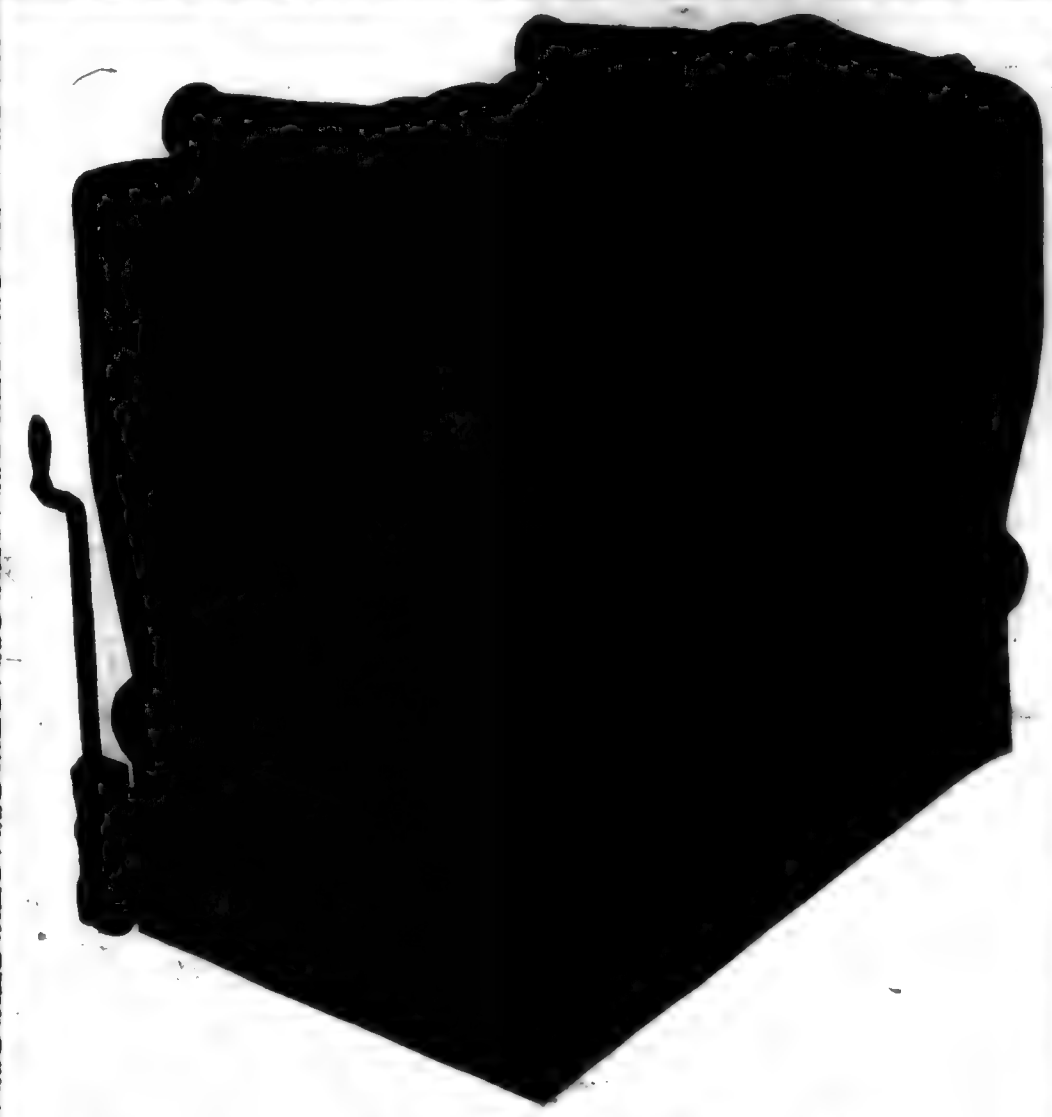
Give the flow pipes a fall of about one inch in ten feet and connect the highest point of each pipe with the pipe leading to the expansion tank. It would simplify matters if 3-inch pipe could be used for the main flow and return pipes to connect the 2½-inch flows and returns with the boilers, in which case the pipe to the expansion tank could be connected with the highest point of the main flow pipe. This will do away with all occasion for air valves in the pipes.

A UTAH CARNATION HOUSE.



I intend to build a greenhouse to be used for growing carnations. The house will run north and south and will be 21x100. It will have concrete foundations and will have two and one-half feet of glass in each side. I can buy a boiler here, made by Our Own Mfg. Co., Canton, O., and rated for 1,450 feet of radiation. Will it be large enough to take care of this carnation house in zero weather? Please inform me, also, how this house should be piped to give the best results. I am a beginner in greenhouse construction. The house will have a full gable end to the north and a half gable to the south, where it will be connected to the potting shed and workroom. A. P.

The boiler mentioned should be amply large to heat the house, as but little more than 750 square feet of radiation will be required and a boiler rated for 1,000 square feet of radiation should be large enough to handle it.

To heat the house described to a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees in zero weather, I would suggest the use of three 2½-inch flow pipes, of which one could be upon each plate and the other about two feet below the ridge, and nine 2-inch return pipes arranged in three coils. Place one coil on each wall or under the side benches and the other under the middle bench. Give the flow pipes a slight fall and attach the expansion tank to the highest point, which should be near the boiler. When using a hot water system it is always well to have the boiler so located that its top will be below the level of the return pipes, as then there is seldom any trouble about securing a good circulation. If this cannot be readily arranged, the circulation will be greatly improved by attaching a mercury generator to the expansion pipe.

AN ADDITION FOR LETTUCE.

I am sending you a sketch of my greenhouses, showing the location of the heating pipes, which heat the present house satisfactorily. The present house is used for violets and I expect to add a house for lettuce. Kindly advise me as to the best way of heating the proposed lettuce house to a temperature of not less than 40 degrees at night. I have an upright sectional boiler about five feet high, with a grate diameter of about twenty-two inches. The boiler room is excavated to a depth of six feet, so that the top of the boiler is one foot below the level of the greenhouse floor. Last winter the coldest outside temperature in this part of Montana was 30 degrees below zero, but the thermometers have

Put It to Yourself This Way—

SHALL I deliberately put my money into a wrought iron boiler that is going to cost me a lot to be retubed in a few years, or shall I buy a cast iron boiler that will last at least a quarter of a century?

Shall I put my money into a wrought iron boiler, twice the size I need now, or shall I buy a Hitchings cast iron one the right size, and add more sections to it when I add more houses?

Shall I buy one big wrought iron boiler and be compelled to run all that big grate—no matter what the weather or shall I buy a battery of Hitchings boilers and use one boiler when I need only one, and two only when I need two?

In short, shall I listen to clever sales talk or shall I let my common sense decide it?

When shall we ship the Hitchings?

BURNHAM WATER LINE ITS IMPORTANCE

WITH the water boiler the entire boiler and all the mains and coils are filled full of water. There are no empty spaces. With a steam boiler only part of it is filled, and a space above the water is necessary for the expansion of the steam so it will be "dry" and not go into your mains water logged.

The size of this dome has much to do with the economy of any steam boiler.

To keep manufacturing costs as low as possible every boiler maker strives to reduce the amount of iron in his boiler as low as possible. The cutting down on the size of the steam space or dome is a favorite way. Small domes produce "wet steam." Wet steam has neither the heat nor the rapidity of circulation of dry steam. Small domed boilers also frequently "boil over," the water partly or entirely leaving the boiler, which you can at once see is a pretty serious thing.

The above sections—the left-hand one from a water boiler and the right-hand one from a steam boiler of the same size—show you the difference in their height, which difference is the space given to the Burnham Steam Dome.

In our new 36-inch Burnham the steam boiler is 6 inches higher than the water.

This liberal sized dome is only one of the Burnham's economy points—the others are equally important.

If it's economy you want, then you want the Burnham—the only greenhouse boiler made especially for greenhouse work.

been known to register as low as 50 degrees below zero here. W. F. U.

The sketch shows the present house to be 20x48, heated by two 2½-inch flow pipes and ten 1¼-inch returns, and it is stated in the sketch that a temperature of 55 degrees was maintained last winter, when the outside temperature was 30 degrees below zero. The proposed lettuce house is to be 12x30 and will run out from the middle of the south end of the present greenhouse. It is to have two benches and a middle walk. The boiler is at the north end of the present house.

LET US TELL YOU ABOUT THEM

Mention The Review when you write.

The letter does not state whether steam or hot water is used for heating, but I am inclined to the opinion that it must be steam, from the size of the pipes, and from the fact that while it would be an easy matter to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees when 10 below zero, it would be a difficult matter to keep up a temperature of 55 degrees when 30 below zero, with hot water. For heating the proposed house with steam, I would reduce the present flow pipes to 2-inch at the end of the present house and would carry them either on the plates or under the ridge to the farther end of the lettuce house, and would connect each of them with two 1¼-inch returns. For hot water I would use the flow pipes as suggested, and eight 1¼-inch returns.

If steam is used, the returns could be under the side benches and could be connected with one return on each side of the middle bench in the main greenhouse. For hot water it would be well to join all of the returns in the lettuce house to a 2½-inch return and connect this with the boiler.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

We are having regular July weather and irregular July business. There is an abundance of asters, gladioli and lilies, including both giganteum and speciosum. Valley and snapdragon also are plentiful. There is little call for anything except asters, the best of which are sold out early each day.

Gladiolus Show.

The joint exhibition of the Ohio Gladiolus Society and the Cleveland Florists' Club will be held August 14 and 15 at the Hollenden hotel. Arrangements have been completed for a banner exhibition. A special feature that is sure to attract the public will be the use of the gladiolus in retailers' display. All the leading stores are coming in on this and there will be a fine demonstration of table work, also many decorated baskets of gladioli, and the use of the flower will be shown in many other ways. The state organization is furnishing the stock with which the retailers will work. The officers of the Ohio Gladiolus Society are: President, C. Betscher, Canal Dover; vice-president, Mrs. A. H. Austin, Wayland; secretary and treasurer, Wilbur A. Christy, Warren; executive committee, H. A. Alford, Garrettsville; N. Crawford, Cuyahoga Falls; R. E. Huntington, Painesville.

Cleveland to Boston.

The Cleveland party attending the S. A. F. convention at Boston will have a special car. It will be attached to the president's special on the Lake Shore railroad when it passes through Cleveland Monday morning, August 17, at 7:30. This train will carry President Wirth and his party from Minneapolis, the Chicago organizations, and florists from all points west of Chicago. Those who wish to travel in the Cleveland car should notify Frank A. Friedley, secretary of the Cleveland Florists' Club, 95 Shaw avenue, East Cleveland.

Club Outing.

The Cleveland Florists' Club held its annual outing July 22 at Puritas Springs. It was ideal picnic weather and a record crowd attended, between 300 and 400. There was an excellent program, the prize winners being as follows:

Baseball—Retailers, 19; Wholesalers, 3.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held July 8, at Pembroke hall, with President Henry Gaut in the chair. John Fogerty and Fred Titus were elected to active membership, and two petitions were received. Special prizes for the fall shows were received from C. F. Cartledge, W. K. Kinnear, R. Meserole, E. M. Underhill and the Glen Cove Echo.

The exhibits for this meeting were all sweet peas, and the display was better in both quantity and quality than in any previous monthly competition for two or three years. The judges were J. F. Johnston, R. Marshall and A. Jenkins. The awards were as follows: Henry Gaut cleared the boards by taking all three prizes, for twenty-five pink, twenty-five white and twenty-five any other color, as well as receiving a cultural certificate for a vase of Isobel Malcolm. Herman Boettcher received a cultural certificate for twelve vases in twelve varieties, and George Ashworth received honorable mention for a vase of Flora Norton Spencer.

It was resolved that this society send a collective exhibit of vegetables, representative of the society, to the New York state fair at Syracuse, August 31. It was also resolved to use the official scale of the national societies in judging carnations, chrysanthemums and roses at our future shows, and a committee was formed to draw up a scale of points for judging vegetables.

The exhibits for next meeting, August 12, will be six kinds of vegetables.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

The usual summer quietness is now in evidence, and while there is a slight demand constantly for cut flowers, aside from funeral work, there is comparatively little doing among the downtown stores. Among the growers, however, preparations are being made for a greatly increased business next season. Roses remain in good stock. Carnations are nil, but asters are beginning to make their appearance and will fill the wants during the next couple of months. Gladioli are also abundant and find ready sale.

Building Operations.

It is many years since this section has witnessed so much new glass going up as has been the case this spring. On all sides new houses have just been completed or are about finished. J. A. Budlong & Son Co. has recently completed six new houses, each 250 feet in length, in addition to the range off Pontiac avenue, at Auburn. These will be devoted almost entirely to roses, one being put to Beauties alone.

Joseph Koppelman is having two large houses erected at East Providence, where a few months ago he purchased the entire property of the Brookside Greenhouses. E. E. Howard, of Auburn, has one new house; Albert Holscher, of Johnston, two new houses; Samuel Kinder, one new one, on Hope street, Bristol; William Pratt, a new one, 40x100, at Long Meadow; Olney H. Williams & Sons Co., two new ones at their range on Hartford avenue, Johnston; and Andrew Olsen, one house off Pawtucket avenue, near Silver Spring, in East Providence.

Various Notes.

Louis J. Reuter, of S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., Westerly, was a business visitor in New York last week.

From all sections of the state come discouraging reports of the invasion of the army worm and its destruction. The state board of agriculture has taken vigorous steps to assist in checking the pest and several of the tree wardens and others in the various towns are lending their assistance.

Neal Ward, tree warden at Cumberland, has just completed an inspection of all the trees in the town streets and will soon purchase at least 100 to replace those taken out.

Joseph Koppelman has transferred to Lizzie Max land with improvements thereon on Pawtucket avenue, East Providence.

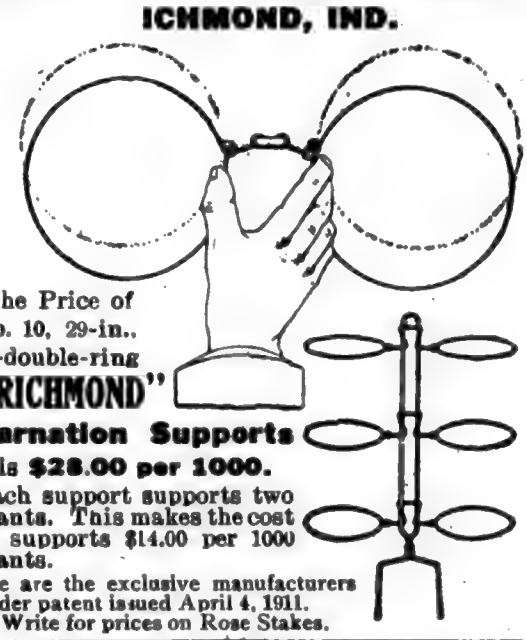
The Supreme Court last week awarded the W. E. Barrett Co. $15,500 damages against the city of Providence in connection with the cutting through of Waterman street and the taking of the firm's building on Canal street. The commissioners only awarded damages of $8,000.

Alex. Carberry, with Burke & Burns, who underwent an operation last week at St. Joseph's hospital, is improving slowly.

Mr. Meade, representing the Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., of Boston, was a visitor in this city last week.

Walter Sword, of Valley Falls, is reconstructing a large greenhouse at the place which he recently purchased in Central Falls.

Johnston Bros. furnished the majority of the pieces for the funerals of Superintendent of Public Buildings Edward Steere and Miss Watson, principal of one of the city grammar schools, who were drowned by the overturning of a canoe a few days ago.



Leo Engel was a visitor to New York last week, accompanied by his wife

Miss Bessie Nichol, daughter of the late Walter Nichol, of Hampden Meadows, was married last week.

Bailey's Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture.

First volume just off the press. Remaining volumes will be issued as soon as possible. The following are a few of the features to be found in this new work:

KEY TO IDENTIFICATION OF PLANTS.

This is a device to enable one to find the name of a plant. The name thus found is quickly referred to under its alphabetical location, where full information will be found in regard to it.

SYNOPSIS OF PLANT KINGDOM.

This is one of the most important features of the new edition. It constitutes a general running account of the classes, orders and groups of plants, with a brief sketch or characterization of 215 of the leading families comprising those that yield practically all the cultivated plants. These family descriptions give the botanical characters and the number of genera and species and the ranges.

THE GLOSSARY.

This is an analysis of all technical terms that are used in the work and in similar works.

TRANSLATION AND PRONUNCIATION OF LATIN NAMES.

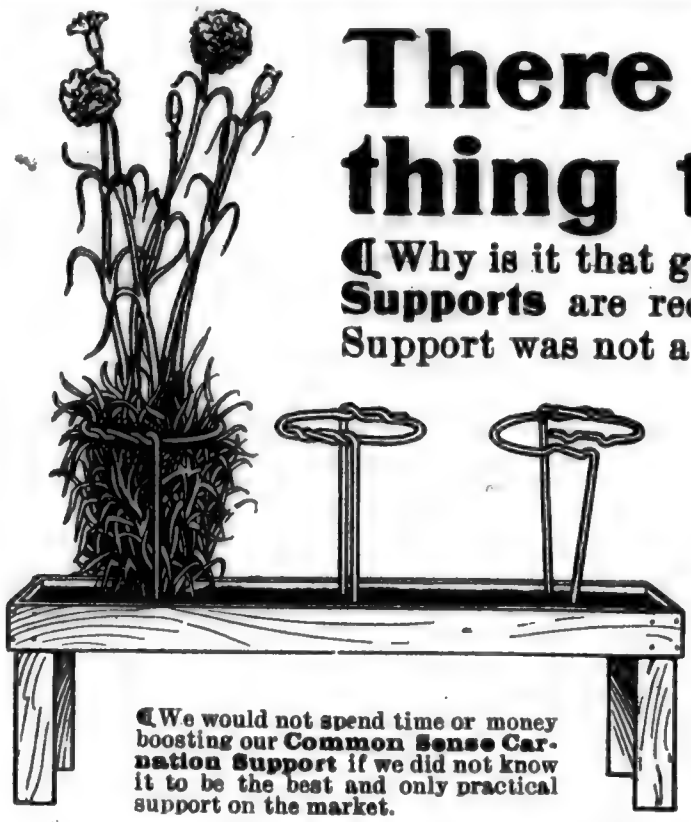
In Volume I is inserted a list of between 2,000 and 3,000 Latin words used as species—names of plants, giving the English equivalent or translation and the pronunciation.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

There are 24 colored plates, 96 full-page sepia halftones, and more than 4,000 engravings which serve as guides in the text.

CLASS ARTICLES.

Special effort has been made to secure the best cultural advices for the plants requiring peculiar or particular handling.



GENERAL INDEX.

The final volume will contain a complete index to the entire work, enabling the reader to locate volume and page of any subject he has in mind. With the Index, Key, Synopsis and alphabetical arrangement of the Cyclopedia, any reasonable question asked by the consultant will receive a ready answer.

This work consists of six large quarto volumes, more than 3,600 pages, 500 collaborators, approximately 4,000 genera, 15,000 species and 40,000 plant names. Price, $6.00 per volume; $36.00 per set. Can be paid for one volume at a time.

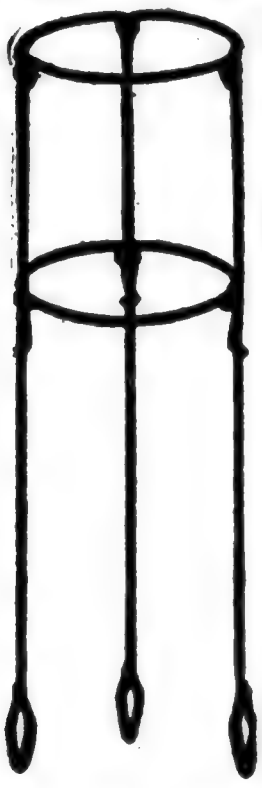
Made with No. 13 Galvanized Wire, with patent spring lock; 7 inches in diameter.

ORDER NOW and have them when ready to bench.



Its Strong Points Are As Follows:

Not a bulky mess of wire.
Easily set up and taken down.
Holds the plants right in place.
Gives plenty of light and air between the plants.
Opens at both ends, so all shoots can be put in easily.
Never in the way when cutting flowers.
Acts as a stool for your plants.
You can plant more plants to a bench.
It pays for itself on extra blooms cut.
You'll cut better blooms, on erect, stiff stems.
They will last for years.

And the price is so low that you cannot afford to be without them. Try a thousand or two, or use them on a few of your benches and note the difference in your cut and quality of stock over the other methods of growing.

The Market.

With plenty of stock on the market, the retail florists cannot complain. Most of the retailers report the number of sales as exceeding last year's record, but for the last two weeks business has been below the standard of last year, which means more work and less money received on each sale. The wholesalers report stock moving well and that business is all they could expect. Carnations seem to hold a fair price and are of excellent quality. These carnations are received from Colorado. Roses are plentiful, but prices range much lower than last year. Quality is excellent. Asters are plentiful. Gladioli are abundant and prices on these have dropped considerably, although good stock still realizes fair prices and sells readily. Some of the stock received shows the effects of the dry weather. Gypsophila is not coming into the market as fast as it did at first. Green stock is plentiful and arrives in good shape.

Various Notes.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held July 20 at the store of H. Kusik & Co. Discussions on summer business and other interesting topics were held. The next meeting will take place August 3 at the store of the George M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. Every florist in the city should attend the meetings, as some good ideas and suggestions can be gathered.

Mr. Kane, of the Peterson Floral Co., has been under a specialist's care for some weeks as the result of getting a bug in his eye, and it is feared it will not be possible to save the eye.

William Foith met with an accident two years ago while placing a boiler in his greenhouse. The boiler rolled over, catching him and dislocating his hip. The injury seemed hardly noticeable at the time, but it became worse. After he had been treated for tuberculosis of the hip, it still gave him quite a bit of trouble, and he now is in the hospital, with the dislocated hip in a plaster cast. He expects to be able to be around in three or four weeks.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. is cutting some good roses. At the store there has been plenty of funeral work to keep them busy. Fred Fromhold and Hugo Neff are on a three weeks' vacation trip. Charles Heite and Miller Carter spent three weeks in the Ozarks, fishing. W. J. B.

Scotch Soot

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business last week was fair. The supply continues large. Prices at the best are only fair. The bulk of the call is for gladioli and lilies. The supply of the former is large and only the best are meeting with an active call. Giganteum lilies are shortening up and clean out each day. The best asters have a good market.

Rose cuts continue large; in fact, too large for the requirements. Only such varieties as Taft, My Maryland, Russell and the like have a ready sale. Killarney opens quickly and sells poorly. The American Beauty supply is large and good. Carnation receipts are light and rather uncertain. In fact, the last of the old cut is coming into the wholesale houses. Other offerings include a few dahlias. The supply of greens is fully sufficient for immediate requirements.

Various Notes.

At the trustees' meeting at the Savoy July 23 it was decided to arrange to hold the September meeting of the Florists' Society at the Hotel Gibson.

Who is the most polite and courteous telephone patron in this city? Nobody but our popular Avondale florist, Miss Edith Kyrk! This honor and distinction was voted Miss Kyrk at the annual outing of the telephone employees, held at the Zoo a few days ago. Miss Kyrk did not know of the incident until she read of it in the daily papers. Those who know Miss Kyrk say it was a happy and deserved selection.

The Market.

Business is running on about as usual for this time of the year. Now and then there is a little spurt, but it does not last long. The supply of stock is more than the market can absorb. Some of the large rose growers report that the crop of roses at the present time is large, but that the demand is light. Retailers are making fine displays of gladioli, which are in their glory right now, and are pushing this flower. Asters, too, are beginning to come in. The weather has been hot and dry. Many lawns and flower beds have been ruined by the army worm and florists are taking precautions against any invasion by this pest.

Various Notes.

The tremendous wind and hail storm that swept over this city July 24 did much damage at the houses of Krueger Bros., in East Toledo. Starting at the boiler, the tornado blew down a brick wall eighteen inches thick and then, descending upon the houses, literally blew to pieces a strip of house about 140 feet long. It was a fortunate thing that no one was hurt, as there were several working in these houses at the time. Will Krueger estimated the damage at about $3,000, and said that the young crops of roses in the houses were not damaged to any great extent.

Sunday closing, which was inaugurated by the Toledo Florists' Club some time ago, has proven a great success and the average florist is tickled at the chance to get away from his business for a short time at least once a week. All downtown retail establishments with one exception are now closing at noon on Sundays.

The July meeting of the Toledo Florists' Club was held at S. N. Peck's and was one of the best of the summer. The success of the annual picnic was the main topic for discussion and everybody expressed himself as well satisfied with the way the affair went off. Due to the extreme heat, it was decided to hold no meeting during August and to postpone the election of officers to the first Tuesday in September. The next meeting will be held at Emil Kuhnke's place in East Toledo.

Paul Timm is using these quiet days to good advantage in repairing and fixing up his houses. He has erected a long fence in the rear of his place to hide a large dirt pile from the sight of the neighbors. John F. Oswald, who is Mr. Timm's right bower, is spending his vacation with his family along Lake Erie at a summer cottage. Miss Luella Trost, of the same establishment, is spending her vacation in southern Michigan.

Miss Helen Patten has hied herself to the woodland dale and northern Michigan lake and stream.

Mrs. M. S. Klunder and daughter, of Chicago, are visiting H. E. Klunder, manager of the Art Floral Co.

900 MILES

From New Castle, Ind., to Fargo, N. Dakota

Yet Smedley, the florist there, writes us as follows:

"Your regular shipments arrive in very satisfactory condition in spite of extremely hot weather."

These roses shipped from here when it's 104 in the shade pass through Chicago, Wisconsin, Minnesota and part of North Dakota.

We also ship daily through Ohio, Kentucky and part of Georgia to Atlanta.

You, Mr. Florist, know that these roses must be grown right, cut right and handled right to ship so far and be satisfactory.

Dealers tell us that our roses make them more clear money than any they have ever handled, because of reaching them in better condition. No rehandling from the time they are cut till they reach the store man.

Let us ship you $5.00 or $10.00 per week or any amount you can handle. Or if you have a rush order, wire it to us.

Beauties, which are the best of all summer roses, are cutting freely now of the lengths most salable, 10-inch, 15-inch to 30-inch, and sell at 5c to 15c and 20c. Sunburst is a splendid summer rose and sells at 3c to 6c. We are also cutting good Taft, Killarney, Ward, Kaiserin, Shawyer, Hadley, priced at 3c to 6c.

Assorted Roses, - $2.00 to $4.00 per 100

We have, growing, 85,000 roses in perfect condition. Give us a trial, and see the difference in prices and service.

CONVENTION NUMBER

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

WILL BE ISSUED AUGUST 20

It will contain a full report of the Big Boston Convention—trade NEWS—the account of events that have just happened—NOT text copied from histories and geographies, in competition with hotel guide books.

These Special Numbers of The Review have become an institution in the trade. No advance in rates: $1.00 will buy an inch; $30.00 will buy a page—subject to contract discounts. We want your patronage—according to your needs—but we want THE COPY EARLY.

If you want to reach the whole Trade before the visitors start for the Convention see to it that you have strong advertisements in the Pre-Convention issues of August 6 and 13.

WE ARE WHOLESALERS DOING A STRICTLY WHOLESALE BUSINESS

"Art is Selection" said James McNeill Whistler

The selection of artistic creations in Ribbons, Chiffons and Novelties is the function of our business.
Since art is universal we make the universe our market. For this reason our fall novelties are not alone the product of America, but Asia as well as Europe has contributed.

One of our salesmen is on his way to show you the finest collection of ribbons and chiffons we have ever assembled.

The larger plants are unusually fine.

FICUS CHAUVIERII
This is an old variety taken up again by us. We believe we have the only stock of this variety in the country. It is in a class with the old Ficus Elastica, being very hardy and doing equally well for both inside and outside decoration. This plant has already given great satisfaction.
6-inch pots, 18 inches and 36 inches high,
$6, $9 and $12 per doz.
Large plants.....$1.50 and $2 each

FICUS UTILIS
A species that came to us through the Botanical Gardens at Washington, D. C., which promises to be a valuable addition as a decorative house plant. The leaves are thick and leathery and are from 18 inches to 24 inches long, one-half as wide, of a rich, holly-green color, with midrib and veins of an ivory white which stand out prominently.
6-inch pots, 24 inches tall.....$2.50 each

NEPHROLEPIS SCHOLZELI
This is an ideal crested Fern, holding the same relation to all other crested varieties that the Scottii holds to the old Boston.
2¼-inch pots.....$6 per 100; $50 per 1000
4 -inch pots, heavy,
$20 per 100; $180 per 1000
6 -inch pots, heavy.$6 per doz.; $45 per 100
8 -inch, ¾ pots....$12 per doz.; $90 per 100
11 -inch tubs.....$24 and $30 per doz.

NEPHROLEPIS TODEAOIDES

Vital Roof Facts

WALK into one of our big Iron Framers; look along the roof and at certain intervals you will see the rafters are criss-cross braced. You will also see the same is true between the posts. They brace the roof against any swaying lengthwise. But it's not a question of just judgment where those braces shall go. To simply judge their location is taking a long chance and a dangerous chance. Their location must be based on four things: Expansion, contraction, wind pressure, and the pressure of the house itself when it gets even slightly off the exact plumb.

The vitalness of all this part of right roof framing is fully given in the August 1st issue of Florists' Exchange. Hunt it up and take time to read it. If you don't take the Exchange drop us a card and we will gladly send you a copy of the ad.

When you are ready to talk over the building of a safe and sure house, say when and where and we'll be there.

Glimpse of the criss-cross roof bracing in one of our 60-foot houses.

PLANTLIFE

PLANTLIFE has several advantages over liquid insecticides on the market. Containing refined tobacco dust it can be used to mix with the soil, acting as an excellent fertilizer, at the same time destroying worms and insects in the ground before they have a chance to reach the plant.

PLANTLIFE has been found very effective in ridding greenhouses of insects by dusting on plants. When dry, use for dusting about once a week.

Put up in bulk for greenhouse men; in packages for retail trade.

Bag of 100 lbs., $3.50.

Let us quote you prices in quantity.

Moninger "All Steel" is Safest

40 x 200 Flat Rafter, Newton Floral Co., Newton, Kan.

If your next house is a "Moninger All Steel" Flat Rafter you will have the safest house made. Our flat posts have angles hot riveted on the side. Not bolted on. These angles stiffen the posts and strengthen the house in length and width. The other fellows fasten their eave plate with a common casting while we use a drop forging. This forged eave connection has double lugs hot riveted on each side. It is the only eave connection that is really strong. All roof supports have hot riveted steel plates at the top where they fasten to the rafter. No castings. Purlins are made on a steel template and have steel lugs. Flat rafters have steel angles riveted to sides when required. Every house is figured by engineers from stress and strain diagrams before the house is made—not afterwards.
